Just a word or two to flower show committees. Some of your schedules have already been compiled; most others soon will be. Don't look at or judge things exclusively from your own point of view. Remember, you are supposed to not merely gratify your own fancies, but to offer the general public a feast of beauty, and at the same time lessons which shall be indelibly imprinted in the memory. We are sorry to see that the American Rose Society, which will hold its first exhibition in New York next month, has not considered the decorative part worthy of notice. There is no class calling for the art of arrangement. Of course, growers were on the committee, and they consider only their department. The society appeals for support to all lovers of roses, which is very wise and proper and should be favorably responded to, but the proper way to seek the support of the retailers would be to offer them a share in the glory of the exhibition.

The Rose Society's schedule for the March show contains over 200 classes and a money value of $1,400 is offered in prizes, but not a dollar of this large sum is offered as a prize to show how the "queen of flowers" should be used in any way. We fail to see the justice of this and hope it will be rectified.

We are glad to note that the Carnation Society has offered a cup for decorative work, and sincerely hope there will be many given next year. Of course, it is early to speak of it yet, but it would be well to provide for a good representation of all sections of the trade at the S. A. F. convention show; prizes for the most artistically arranged exhibits in the different branches would produce good effects.

When making up your schedules, no matter be the show in country, village or in great city, remember the eye of the public is held by the work of the artist; give the retailer a chance to show his ability. We are to have a practical demonstration of floral art decoration at the S. A. F. convention next August, and though materials of a class are scarce or unobtainable at that time, yet there will be sufficient to give good lessons, and the wall space and galleries of the hall are suitable for such.

Street Fakirs.

We are informed that a fight is on between the San Francisco florists' store keepers and the street venders. We hope the store keepers will organize everywhere and compel the authorities to confine this nuisance to a limit which will render it harmless. It appears the flower fakir in 'Frisco pays $10 a quarter as license; in New York he is supposed to pay only $2 a year, but the majority pay nothing. If you could watch them on the main streets in New York you would see how they dodge the police by running from one side of the street to the other; most of them are dirty faced Greeks who work on the padrone system for a few cents a day.

It is all very well for the grower and the wholesaler to defend this system of selling flowers to the public; they, of course, profit by it; but the retailer does not, and now, suppose one of these Greeks came in front of a wholesaler's place with a basket of flowers and sold them to that wholesaler's trade, how then? We venture to predict that the day will come when the retailers of every city will combine to protect themselves against such evils; it cannot be tolerated much longer. Here we have these parasites, this fungus of our business, organized to beat down the market whenever they can; they club together, let one man buy in big lots to get them cheaper, and then divide; in this way, and with the further advantage of having no expense, they can even afford to buy high-grade stock and sell for less than half what the legitimate dealer must charge for his.

It would appear that each branch of our business today must adopt measures for its own protection. We consider it our duty to side with the retailer.

Roses.

The Philadelphia florists had a most interesting debate recently on "The Rose." We would like to see the matter taken up by growers and retailers in every city; it would certainly result in benefit to the future of that great flower and to trade. Every thinking man knows that we need more varieties of roses in the cut flower trade. We feel sure that the new rose Liberty two years hence will decrease the demand for American Beauties. There is also a future for that grand variety "Lady Dorothea."

A great deal of trouble arises from the fact that when a new rose appears on the market it is either in poor condition, or the grower demands an exorbitant price for it. We admit that in some cases the store keepers are to blame, and a little more closer relation and confidence between these element would often avoid disappointments. The best way out of the present rut is undoubtedly for the retailer to have roses specially grown for his particular trade.

A prominent grower only the other day asked us what would be a good flowering plant to have in now besides azaleas, cinerarias, etc. We told him pot roses. We think if anyone had good roses in pots now they would sell well, and then see what grand effects could be made with them in decorations instead of your clumsy laurel screen, or even group of palms, to hide musicians with. What could be finer than a hedge of roses? By tilting some up and covering the boxes or pots with green moss, a very natural bank of roses can be made. They would pay to even cut them off at the pot and arrange them, foliage and all, in vases. We have too much stiffness, too much artificiality, in most of our work; we should grow pot roses if only for the buds and foliage; but, apart from that, we badly need some of the fine old hybrid perpetuals at this time of the year.

Plants.

We already hear loud complaints about the condition of the lilies intended for Easter, especially the bulbs from Bermuda. The Japan longiflorums we are informed are all right, but the others are a bitter disappointment to many a poor grower. It's hard to tell definitely yet what prices will be asked for lilies this year; many more of them are being grown, but the percentage of failures will have a bad effect on trade. Many will try to cover the loss by introducing other kinds of stock. There is very little that is new; the principal trade, as usual, will be on quality.

Some very pretty shades of color are seen at present in primulas; Primula obconica violacea is fine when with the white obconica or with the old nivea.

Acacia pubescens is seen in the principal windows in New York. Thorley on Saturday made a specialty of a lattice screen of leucothoe foliage. In the open circular center was placed a high handled basket of daffodils and Acacia pubescens; black humming birds were perched on the acacia; the basket was graceful and looked pretty. This variety of acacia is by far the most beautiful for decorative work; you can make it resemble a shower of gold over a mirror; it should never be tied up stiffly and you will find that it always looks best when hanging downwards or gracefully over. It is pretty on the table with either cuneatum or Farleyense; stick it into the plants, or you can arrange it with yellow narcissus. We have often used La France or Testouts with it in mantle decorations to good effect.

Wallflowers and antirrhinums have appeared on the market and are welcome for variety's sake. A great many boxes and pans of bulb stock are being shown this week in windows; good colored tulips in pans sell well in many localities.

Gardenias are extra fine now. Thos. Young, Jr., makes a specialty of them and is shipping them all over at present. They will be popular as Easter plants, and he will have them in fine shape at that time. The gardenia is a grand flower; it will never be common, because it will not stand rough handling; it is like the orchid in many respects; it may lack the color of those flowers, but it vanquishes all on sweetness. They are the most refined flowers to wear and are suitable for all occasions. Care should be taken not to wet them, for water will turn them yellow.

In last week's paper someone asks if gas injures plants in a store. Yes, it is bad for plants anywhere. Electric light is the only fit illumination of the florist's store. It is good to have gas in, too, for fear electricity fails, as it does sometimes, but when gas is unavoidably used, ventilation should be put on and the plants be frequently syringed.

Talking of plants reminds us that even at this time of the year we get a warm day once in a while, and where plants have been for weeks, perhaps months, in a dwelling house, advantage should be taken of these warm days; take the plants out to the yard, go over them with a feather duster or sponge them, and then give them a thorough washing down with the syringe. This will be of great benefit to them. You can do the same with the plants in your store; a poor or dirty plant is a bad thing to show prominently in your place of business.

IVERA.

BALTIMORE, MD.—The greenhouse belonging to Mrs. Emma A. Oakford, Garrison and Kate avenues, was destroyed by fire Dec. 28, causing a loss of $600, covered by insurance.

CARNATION MRS. BERTRAM LIPPINCOTT.

We present herewith an engraving of this new pink carnation, which is especially interesting on account of its being a cross between the two old favorites, Daybreak and Scott. It originated with John Kuhn, Philadelphia, and has been grown by him for the last four years. It is now being offered to the trade by H. F. Michell, the Philadelphia seedsman.

As seen in the picture, the form is excellent. The color is soft pink, a shade darker than Daybreak, size 3 to 3½ in., stem 2 to 2½ ft. long, habit strong and healthy. The flowers are said to be fine keepers, and the plant a free and continuous bloomer. There will no doubt be a place for it.

BALTIMORE.

The dean of the floricultural trade here by virtue of seniority is Anthony Cook, who is now in his eighty-third year. Born in Bavaria, he came to this country, to avoid military service at home, in 1840. From that date on he has been actively at work, and so continues at his extensive greenhouses, which, occupying nearly a block of ground, has seen the city grow up around and extend far beyond them. Still vigorous and enthusiastic, he beholds with equal pleasure new introductions of today or dwells with retrospective gusto on the olden beauties of the past. His grounds have been ever the home of the rose. Here may still be seen beds of hardy sorts which were planted forty years ago, and remain vigorous and productive. In one bed is the original plant of the first remontant rose which was ever sent out—the Sidonia Weaver. The florists of America, indeed, could well afford to raise a statue of bronze to the honor of Mr. Cook, for by his hand was planted the seed and on this soil first grew that noblest and grandest of forcing roses, which is known everywhere today as the American Beauty. This variety was raised by him with many other seedlings, the parentage of which could not be determined, but proving valuable for outdoor purposes, it was propagated, and, after some years, with other roses, a plant or two was sold at $6 per dozen, under the name given by its originator, "Madam de Poloyne," to the historian George Bancroft, of the city of Washington, an ardent admirer and cultivator of garden roses. Here, as is well known, it was seen by Florist Field, who, ascertaining its eminent adaptability for forcing, introduced it to the trade as the American Beauty, a name describing aright both its origin and its quality.

Another of Mr. Cook's originations is the Cornelia Cook, a seedling from Devoniensis. This rose was sent abroad, reintroduced from England into Boston, renamed there and sent out at $10 each as a foreign acquisition, but the facts of its birth being shown, its proper name was restored. All know its good qualities.

A similar experience met another of his roses. This was a satiny pink seedling of unknown parentage, but which he named after an amateur rosarian of his vicinity, who paid the munificent price of 50 cents for the first plant sold, Charles Getz. This variety is a magnificent pillar rose, making in fertile soils and in good seasons growths of fifteen feet. It was rechristened the Climbing France and sent out anew. Some of the first batch of plants are still growing on its original site. This has been found a most desirable stock on which to bud other sorts. Jeanne d'Arc, the white seedling of Gloire de Dijon, makes superb flowers so treated, and magnificent blooms of Etoile de Lyon are obtained when thus managed.

This venerable German finds pleasure, as well he may, in recalling these incidents, and, though he no longer originates new varieties, he is constantly occupied with the problems and details of cultivation, and, like that sturdy, grand old Scotchman, Robert Halliday, and that equally rugged Englishman, Samuel Feast, his deeds do follow him as do his children's children, lo! to the third generation, in this gardener's calling, which blesses and beautifies the earth and broadens and ennobles men.

Opportunity permitting, some future page of the Review may contain a passing notice of other roses which had their origin in this city, and of their producers.

The Gardeners' Club, it is stated, has had an enlarged income this year, with corresponding opportunities for usefulness. A good spirit prevails, no narrowness or bigotry marks the proceedings, and on all sides information, suggestion, counsel, are given as freely as asked. Many young men have come into the club, always a factor of progress. The last chrysanthemum show was not a success. The public failed to evince appreciation of the efforts of the cultivators and the guarantors of the fund to prevent loss bore the brunt of the struggle. In fact few of the later exhibitions, however attractive, have been successes financially. Some years ago quite a handsome bank account had accumulated, but later efforts in the show line exhausted it, and it is probable that for some time to come few shows except those of a single afternoon or evening will be held.

The club meets in a handsome and commodious hall, but some think a permanent club home which could be open every evening would be conducive to its well being. The organization is a social and beneficial as well as a trade society. Once or twice a year dinners are given, with guests present from abroad; there is an occasional smoker, and each summer an excursion or picnic. This all contributes to better acquaintance and more sociability amongst the membership. In case of death the deceased member's family receives a sum proportioned to the members then on the active list. Two benefits have been paid within the past six months. A reference and circulating library is maintained, and all the gardening papers kept on file. A permanent club house, to meet up-to-date requirements, would now, however, have to be very convenient to a good bowling alley!

For the week ending today (12th) the demand in this city for flowers has been unusually brisk, and it would be a fair representation of the market to say that in roses the supply has scarcely kept up to the demand and carnations have not been over-abundant. We do not give any quotations, for the grading here is not equal to that of Boston or New York. But whoever here has had merchantable stock has had no reason to complain of the market.

During the recent cold "snap" a section of one of the boilers of Messrs. Fischer & Ekas gave way. Fortunately it was their reserve boiler, and so far no loss has resulted. These young men who by their intelligence, industry and energy stand in the van of our growers have had a series of misfortunes. The blizzard of February, 1899, found them short of fuel—by no fault of theirs. A few months later a large section of their plant was destroyed by fire. But there is no let-down in them, and their friends all hope the tide has by this time turned strongly in their favor.

It is reported that one firm here gathered 150,000 seed of Asparagus plumosus nanus last year.

Messrs. Richard Vincent, Jr., & Son have one of the largest glass ranges in this part of the country, covering about two and one-half acres. They are reducing the quantity of flowers heretofore grown, building more houses, and producing vegetable plants by the million. Their heating apparatus is a model of efficiency, a battery of three of the largest size steam boilers of a popular make being in use. The senior of the firm has just returned from a visit to the New York trucking centers, where he booked orders by the wholesale. RIX.

THE BOTTOMLESS POT.

We hear some very unfavorable reports by violet growers on the Balsley bottomless pot and suggest that they be experimented with in homeopathic doses only.

The general report is that though the plants grow well in the pots they are much harder to care for, do not come in bloom so early as those planted out on the bench and are not so free after coming into bloom.

MISCELLANEOUS SEASONABLE HINTS.

Easter Plants.

There is nothing that will occupy our thoughts so earnestly just now as the regulation of Easter crops. Where one whole house is devoted to one crop and the means of adding to or diminishing the heat, this is easy; but where several things are in the same house a great deal of moving must be done.

If you can just see the buds of Harrisii or longiflorum lilies now, you are all right, and it will be very mild forcing to bring them in; but those that do not yet show the buds have plenty of time if you have the means of giving a good, strong heat during March. About the time that the leaves are parting and the small cluster of buds is visible is a critical time with the green fly; a puncture of the tiny bud will often show disastrous effects later on. Fumigation is the most thorough way of killing the aphids, but does not always seem to penetrate down among the crown of leaves, and till the buds are distinctly seen they should be given a weekly syringe with the Rose Leaf Extract diluted 50 to 1, or the Nikoteen, 200 to 1 of water, and the Scollay sprayer is the best thing to apply it.

Crimson Ramblers should now have a growth of 2 or 3 inches, but may not yet be showing the flower buds. They will be all the stronger and better if kept cool, say about 45 to 50 degrees at night, for the next three weeks, and a little more heat to finish them off. Plants that were grown in pots last summer will need the best of feeding, as the pots are cram full of roots and little to feed. They must be fed by mulching and liquid manure.

We have never been too easy with Deutzia gracilis. Of course, it depends on the heat you give them, but they are much more useful when grown cool, and seven weeks is not too long to give them in a moderate house.

The Ghent azaleas and A. mollis take about five weeks in a cool house. Last year they sold well, for the beautiful shades of color are unique, and with orange tinted paper they trim up finely.

We have discontinued forcing rhododendrons; they are unwieldy in size and do not bring a proportionate price. Unlike the Indian azaleas, they are very slow to open in a cool house, and most of the varieties want four or five weeks of a good warm house and plenty of syringing.

If you go over your azaleas about now and pinch off all the young growths, they will do till flowering time. If you don't many of the varieties will be smothered with growth and the flower buds will perish.

The cytisus or genista is always early and Easter is late, so it will be with difficulty that you can keep them back for Easter; but you can help much by giving them the coldest house you have and air on all possible occasions. Anything above freezing will do for these, and the Indian azaleas if they are not too early.

Don't forget that lilacs will do very well with five weeks in the greenhouse and a little less as the season is this year.

Flowering plants are not the only thing that go at Easter. There is always a big demand for palms, ferns, rubbers, etc., and it is now that they should be bought and established in their new pots. Why, I don't know; but invariably when a plant is newly shifted or potted and immediately sold it ends in trouble. The plant does not thrive. The disturbance of the roots, if it is ever so little, may partly account for it, and perhaps the more need of skillful watering is the other part. As it is, we never like to sell a palm that has been recently shifted, and for that reason you should lay in your stock now for your prospective wants.

The many and various little duties have crowded upon us rather thickly just now and please, Mr. Editor, excuse the brevity of my hints for this week.

WM. SCOTT.

BOSTON.

The Market.

Seen from a stall at the Park street flower market, floral conditions here during the past week have shown marked improvement over any other week since Christmas. All kinds of goods have been in fair supply except smaller grades of roses, which were very scarce, and bulb goods, which were in over-supply.

The carnation supply got a little thin in spots two or three times, but on the whole just about stood the call at fair figures, say from 1½ to 2½ cents on good ordinaries. Anything of a rose called for 4 cents, but the demand was limited on goods worth more than 12½ cents, and cases were rare where over $2.50 per dozen was obtained in pink and white. Prices on red ones have slacked up a bit, purchasers looking hard at a $5 bill before banking it in a dozen of the best Beauties. Lots of smaller bulb goods have changed hands at the rate of $1.50 per 100.

Notes.

Circulars advertising the "fifth annual trade exhibition," March 3, at the Park street market, are out. Extracts from it read as follows:

"The great success of these exhibitions has made it an annual event which is eagerly looked forward to by the members of the florists' craft throughout New England, and prospective investors now await this opportunity to see what they are going to invest in, while introducers of novelties are given a chance to meet personally and to exhibit their novelties to the lovers of well grown flowers.

"The exhibit of 1899 attracted attention all over the United States and novelties were exhibited from as far west as Illinois and east from Maine, while visitors from all over the New England states were in attendance.

"We are pleased, therefore, to once more extend a cordial invitation to all introducers of new roses, carnations or other novelties to give the growers of New England an opportunity to see the result of their success, and also to invite them to personally attend and make an exhibition of whatever flowers they are desirous of placing on the market.

There is no better market in the country than Boston to take hold of a new thing. The growers in this vicinity are enterprising and mean to keep up with the times, a fact which can be substantiated by exhibitors in former years. So, if you are looking for business, send on your flowers, and the advertisement will reach every live florist in New England.

"Full instructions regarding the shipment, care and disposal of cut blooms can be had by addressing the secretary,

"W. S. PHELPS, JR.,

"Hingham, Mass."

The Review need have no hesitation in backing up the points claimed. Twelve certificates are to be given for merit in exhibitions of roses, carnations, violets and novelties.

It was Mr. Elliott's determination to go to the hospital on Monday of this week for an operation for appendicitis. As he lays his plans well and thoroughly carries them out, it is probably safe to assume him to be there, and I know I can assure him the sympathy of this paper and its readers and their best wishes for speedy recovery.

Mrs. Rogers, who recently gave up her store under the Adams House, Washington street, has made arrangements to reopen on Summer street, near the South Station.

We regret to record the death of Frank Becker, the venerable florist. He had been ailing for some time and during the past year his condition showed a gradual decline. His wife, his son Frank and several close friends were at his deathbed.

Mr. Becker was a pioneer in the florists' business and his greenhouses in the vicinity of Memorial hall have long been regarded as landmarks.

Services were held at the residence, 1716 Cambridge street, and the interment took place at Mt. Auburn directly afterwards.

Mr. Becker was 70 years old.

What's this! Rebellion? Secession? No, peaceful revolution. Mr. Zinn's head man, Long, the young lady book-keeper and the plump errand boy declare a republic and go down to the Thorndike floral rooms, on Boylston street, under the leadership of Pres. Long. "Long live the Republic!"

PERMANENT CONSTRUCTION.

It is not so many years ago that iron pipe supports under the purlins of greenhouses were the exception rather than the rule; now they are the rule rather than the exception. And the bases of these supports are now quite generally of cement, which is molded up around the pipe to keep moist soil away from the iron.

An equally vulnerable part of a greenhouse is the gutter, and iron promises to soon take the place of wood here. Quite a number of attempts to make use of iron gutters have failed on account of their great expense, but this expense has been largely overcome by a gutter invented by Geo. M. Garland, Des Plaines, Ill., which, while sufficiently heavy to carry several times the weight required, can be made at a cost which makes its use profitable compared with wooden gutters.

Those who have used this gutter several years say it has many advantages besides that of permanency. The iron being a good conductor of heat, the gutters that connect houses melt the snow and ice very rapidly, the heat from inside the houses being immediately effective.

Certainly an iron gutter resting on iron posts set in concrete should make a greenhouse well nigh indestructible, for cypress sash bars will serve almost indefinitely resting on iron at the bottom, and hardly anyone now thinks of using any other wood than cypress in a greenhouse roof, its great durability having been most thoroughly demonstrated.

Tile benches inside the house are the next important item. Permanency here is as necessary as in the house, for the continual replacing of wooden benches is a serious expense. Benches with bottoms of common round tile have been found to be not only more permanent but better for the plants than wooden benches, and one of the largest rose growers in the country has now all his benches with tile bottoms. A flat tile, though, would have some advantages over a round one for a bench bottom, and we present herewith an engraving showing a tile designed for the purpose by Mr. Garland, who is preparing to manufacture them.

As seen in the picture, the tiles are made of such a length that two will cover the width of the usual greenhouse bench, and the idea of permanency has been carried to its logical conclusion by supporting these bench bottom tiles by others placed on edge. We understand these tile benches can be erected at about the same cost as wooden ones, with 2-inch plank bottoms, and in view of this we are inclined to think that the day of the wooden bench in rose and carnation houses is about past.

The picture also shows the way in which the Garland iron gutter is used on an outside wall. Mr. Garland, by the way, is a florist of an inventive turn of mind, and the iron gutter was first designed by him for use in his own houses, where it excited so much favorable comment by visitors that he finally decided to manufacture it and offer it to his brother florists.

PROVIDENCE, R. I.—William Flanagan, the florist, died Feb. 3 of catarrhal inflammation of the stomach and malaria. He was born in this city in 1855 and for the past twenty years has conducted a successful business at the corner of Brook and Manning Sts. His mother, sister, and two brothers survive him.

NEW YORK.

Various Items.

The past has been a week of much activity both in business and in general horticultural matters.

There will be quite a large delegation go from here to attend the Carnation Society's meeting at Buffalo, which it is safe to say will be the largest ever held by the society, and flowers to be shown there from here alone will be magnificent, and a credit to men and country.

The meeting of the Florists' Club on Monday night was well attended, and much earnestness and enthusiasm prevailed. Several names were put in nomination for membership, and the guarantee fund for convention purposes was very liberally subscribed to. The several committees, and indeed there seems an abundance of them, reported progress. The committee on Horticultural Exhibit submitted their schedule which was practically adopted by the club, and a trophy valued at $100 will also be given by the club to the society whose members make the best display at this show; in addition to the other numerous prizes the S. A. F. will offer 12 silver and 12 bronze medals to be competed for in the horticultural section. We hope this particular section will be creditable to the men of these parts; we feel it would be better assured if the societies were not ignored. When the club first wanted to get the convention here they did not hesitate in asking the other societies for assistance, which of course was generously offered. Our idea of courtesy differs, but we feel sure, that, if instead of a committee merely representing the membership of the club, one was organized, consisting of one or two representatives from each society within 100 miles of New York, greater results would show themselves; as it is there is much dissatisfaction, and it may hurt. In the case of an exhibition like this, particularly when every society is being urged to do its best, they should have some voice in the arrangements.

The executive committee of the S. A. F. notified the club officially that the Thursday afternoon and evening of the convention would be placed at the disposal of the club, that the whole of Friday would be set aside for sport and frolic, and that the matters of hall, etc., were acceptable to the society.

Charles Schenck, 38 West 28th St., New York City, is secretary of the committee on sports; he particularly requests that the captains of all teams wishing to take part in the bowling tournament here next August communicate with him by March 1st. The awards committee of the New York Florists' Club recommended that the club's silver medal be given to Dailledouze Bros. for their new carnation "666," the recommendation was agreed to. E. J. Norman, Lenox, Mass., and J. T. Butterworth, South Framingham, Mass., attended the meeting and made short addresses. The general committees will meet in the club's rooms on the evening of February 26th. The home committee was requested to provide for the next meeting.

The second series of games between the New York, Flatbush and Hoboken clubs were rolled off on the New York alleys on Monday afternoon, and if this is a forerunner of what the national tournament is to be—well, we don't know what will become of throats and nerves in these parts. This was the greatest affair we have had in New York for some time, there were about seventy-five bowling enthusiasts present, and the coaching was pathetic, amusing and terrific. Notwithstanding that the New York team selected the two strange alleys (for which Capt. Traendly was criticised) they won, and are so far the winners. The third and last series of games, however, will be the most exciting, they are to take place on the Flatbush alleys, March 1st. The Flatbush boys expect to win out, and ought to as they will be on their own vantage ground. In addition to the match games on Monday there were several efforts made by a contingent of rooters on other alleys, but by unanimous vote the press was requested not to publicly damage reputations by publishing the scores.

Refreshments of various hues and acceptable materials were plentiful and thoroughly enjoyed, all hands finally sitting down to battle with knife and fork.

BUFFALO.

We have fondly hoped that Buffalo would give the visitors to the carnation convention such weather as might be expected in old Virginia, but hopes are dispelled and the weather man says "snow and much colder." We can stand lots of it and then be springlike compared to Philadelphia a year ago, where we had four feet of snow, with surface irrigation, sub-irrigation and in some cases interior irrigation.

Before these words are read the carnation convention will be past and we believe it will go down in history as the best up to date, as it naturally should, for progress and evolution is the order of the day, as it has been of all days, and retrogression is exceptional. Business has been quite fair and not the slightest difficulty in filling orders. Rebstock's window is very gay with well grown tulips, daffies and other bulbous stuff. Palmer has always a grand show of his extra good carnations. Scott tries to induce sales with good home-grown violets and valley and a plentiful show of azaleas. Anderson is always neat and tasty and up to date with his display, and Adams is usually so busy at his specialty, defunct policemen, firemen and veterans being his patrons, that he has little time to make display, and when short of flowers always falls back on the glorious stars and stripes.

Our local papers announce the bankruptcy of John J. Pickleman, of French street. It is said the place, consisting of twelve houses, is to rent.

The advance guard of carnationists has arrived in the shape of Walter Mott. Recent drummers to visit Buffalo are Billy Corbett Boas and the other paper box gentleman, Max Beat-us; Messrs. Ringier, of Chicago; Rolker, of New York, and McHutchinson, of New South Wales, and Mr. Dreyer, of Herrmann & Co. W. S.

CHICAGO.

The Market.

Trade has considerably increased in volume but the supply has enlarged sufficiently to meet the improved demand and conditions are very satisfactory. The supply of carnations has shortened up some. Of bulb stuff there is a surplus, especially of daffodils. Violets, too, have with some been a trifle too plentiful, in spite of the increased call on account of St. Valentine's day. This is no doubt due to the cold weather. The call for the violet follows the thermometer very closely, and when the mercury drops below the freezing point the demand falls off.

There is no material change in the prices of stock of shipping grade. But there is a good deal of poor stuff in the market.

Kennicott Bros. Co. are showing some fine mahonia leaves that meet with much favor.

Various Items.

Mr. Wm. Falconer, superintendent of Schenley Park, Pittsburg, visited the parks here last Tuesday. He is on his way to California.

Last Monday evening the bowlers bowled a few games with Messrs Wilcox of Council Bluffs, Clark of Colorado Springs, and Joy of Nashville, Tenn., as guests, and an enjoyable time was had.

McKellar & Winterson keep adding to the variety of supplies they offer to the trade. One of the latest is a seed case suitable for florists' stores. A sample displayed at their store shows it to be a handsome piece of furniture, and proof against mice, etc., the drawers being of sheet metal.

Miss Pauline Windmiller, Mankato, Minn., and S. W. Pike, St. Charles, Ill., were recent visitors.

The delegation to the Buffalo meeting of the American Carnation Society on the Wabash train leaving at 3:15 p. m. Wednesday included Messrs. O. P. Bassett, W. N. Rudd, James Harts-horne, George Garland, G. L. Grant, Peter Reinberg, Henry Wietor, Mr. and Mrs. J. C. Vaughan and J. S. Wilson, of Chicago; J. C. Rennison, Sioux City, Ia.; William Clark, Colorado Springs, Colo.; Geo. H. Bancroft, Cedar Falls, Ia., and J. F. Wilcox, Council Bluffs, Ia.

Mr. B. Eschner, of M. Rice & Co., was a caller this week.

ST. LOUIS.

Club Meeting.

The regular monthly meeting of the Florists' Club was held Thursday afternoon, Feb. 8. President Ammann called the meeting to order at 3 p. m. The attendance was poor, only twelve members being present. The exhibition committee made a report and by next meeting of the club will be able to make a final one and the money on hand will be divided among the prize winners at our late show.

A letter was read from Mr. Thos. F. Galvin stating that he had sent a box of Lawson carnations for exhibition at this meeting, but they failed to arrive and those present were much disappointed in not seeing the famous carnation.

Ed. Walters, of 6815 Virginia avenue, made application for membership.

The following florists were elected to membership: Prof. Irish of Shaw's Garden, Henry Emundt of Belleville, Ill.; J. W. Dunford, of Central, Mo., and Henry Blixen, of Edwardsville, Ill. Several members were dropped from the rolls for non-payment of dues.

The new carnation Peru was on exhibition and was reported by the inspection committee as worthy of mention.

Dr. A. S. Halstedt, C. C. Sanders, and R. F. Tesson were appointed a committee to draw up resolutions on the death of John M. Jordan.

A committee of five was appointed to look into the details of giving a show this year and report at the next regular meeting.

The next meeting of the club will be our annual rose meeting and the club has offered a prize of $5 for the best vase of fifty roses, one or more varieties, American Beauties excluded. The meeting will take place on Thursday afternoon, March 8, at 3 p. m. All florists are invited to attend.

The question box was opened and one question brought out quite a discussion: "Which is the Best Paying Carnation?" Mr. H. G. Ude of Kirkwood said that Daybreak was his best paying carnation. Frank Fillmore said Daybreak, Flora Hill, and Albertini. Wm. Trillow said Scott. Chas. Cannon, Daybreak and Triumph. The meeting then adjourned.

The Market.

Trade the past week has been very good indeed. The demand was large on account of several funerals and large quantities of flowers of all kinds were used. On Friday the florists had all they could do in connection with the funeral of Mr. McKee Hauser, of the Globe-Democrat. Never were there so many flowers used at one funeral as at this one. At one time there were ten florists' wagons standing in front of the residence.

This large demand made the market very scarce, as stuff was cut close. Since then very little stock has come in, hardly enough to go around, and prices have gone up a little. Violets are in great demand, and it's lucky that plenty of them are coming in. Quite a lot of orchids are seen in the florists' windows, especially C. Young & Sons Co., who are making a specialty of all varieties. They make a fine show.

Prices on stock the past week for choice roses were from $4 to $8 per 100; some extra fine stock went as high as $10. Meteors, Maids and Brides are good in quality. Vesey's Fort Wayne stock is coming in fine. Perles and Woottons are $4; Beauties, extra fine, very scarce and those in the market bring $2.50 to $3 per dozen. Carnations could not be finer than now; Scotts, Daybreak, Flora Hill, Eldorado and Jubilee are at their best and bring from $1.50 to $3; some extra fine Bradts and other fancy varieties bring $4. California violets are still 40 cents; small singles, 20 cents, with the demand good. Callas and Harrisii are $10 and $12.50; Romans and paper whites, $1.50 and $2; valley, $3 and $4; freesia, $1 to $2; and smilax, $12.50 and $15.

Notes.

The funeral of our friend and fellow craftsman, John M. Jordan, took place Wednesday afternoon, Feb. 7, at 2 o'clock, from the family residence, 1812 Bacon street. The floral designs were large and beautiful. Members of Tuscan Lodge, A. F. & A. M., and Ascalon Commandery, Knights Templars, took charge of the funeral. Mr. Jordan was also a member of the Royal Arcanum and Legion of Honor. The following florists were present, some of whom were old employees: John W. Kunz, Frank Fillmore, Fred. C. Weber, J. J. Beneke, Albert Norton, Carew Sanders, Luther Armstrong, Chas. Cannon, J. F. Windt, Will Young and C. C. Sanders. The club sent a large flat bouquet of Harrisii lily and California violets. Religious services were conducted by Rev. H. Luccock of the Union M. E. church. The remains were interred in Bellefontaine cemetery.

Visitors in town the past week were Mr. B. Eschner, of M. Rice & Co., Philadelphia. Mr. E. is well pleased with his trip, using a new order book in each city.

Henry Johan, of Collinsville, Ill., was in town and reports that he has been sick for two weeks, but is O. K. now.

Dr. A. S. Halstedt and Wm. Trillow, of Belleville, were with us a day last week.

Plant Seed Co. and Schisler-Cornell Seed Co., who were burned out last Sunday a week, will resume business as soon as the insurance companies adjust their losses, which will be a little more than was first reported. Schisler-Cornell's loss will reach $28,000 and the Plant Seed Co.'s will be about $5,000. It is very unfortunate at this time of the year, as the season for their business is about to begin and it will take a month or six weeks to resume business as it should be. In the meantime the Jos. F. Dickman Seed Co., who are only a few blocks off, are taking care of the trade.

Hudson & Co. have opened a wholesale store at 1527 Pine street.

Bowling.

Five regulars rolled Monday night and rolled six games. Some fair scores were made. Fred Weber made the highest single score made on the new alleys by the club—211—making him high man for the night. John Young, one of the regulars, is sick and not able to attend, but no excuse came from the other members, Schray, Beyer and Fillmore.

President Kunz, who made 98 in the fifth game through worry of their non-attendance, has declared himself and says that he will have a full attendance on next Monday night if he has to send a carriage after them.

The scores were as follows:

PHILADELPHIA.

While the weather has not been as favorable as it might have been, business has been fairly good, considering. Big dinners and social events have been quite numerous.

Jos. Habermehl, of Second and Butler streets, has the honor of being the first to send in cinerarias; they are exceptionally fine and sell on sight at $3 per dozen.

Chas. Cox, Sr., of Broad and Thompson streets, had the decorating of a number of dinners and teas the past week, which required a large amount of cut stuff.

Prices.

Beauties, $1.20 to $7.20 per dozen; Brides, Maids, Meteors, Golden Gates, $3 to $12; Kaiserins, $3 to 10; Morgans, Perles $3 to $8; Gontiers, $3 to $5; carnations, ordinary, $1.50 to $2.50 per 100; fancies, $2 to $3; mignonette, $2 to $4; cattleyas, $50; cypripediums, $15; valley, $2 to $4; hyacinths, $2 to $4; narcissus, $2 to $4; sweet peas, $1.50 to $2.50 per 100; violets, single, 25 to 50 cents; doubles, 50 cents to $1; tulips, $2 to $4; asparagus, $50; adiantums, $1; smilax, $15.

Club Meeting.

The club meeting on Tuesday last was very well attended. Some new members were elected and some proposals received. "Begonias for Commercial Purposes" was the subject selected for the essay for the March meeting; it was assigned to Edwin Lonsdale. John May read a paper entitled, "What Has the Twentieth Century in Store for the Queen of Flowers?" Though he wandered some from the title, several good points were made.

Next in order was the discussion on roses, which was taken up by both the grower and retailer. As a consequence it was quite lively at times. John Burton started the discussion by asking why it was there were only four kinds of roses grown, Beauties, Brides, Maids and Meteors? There being comparatively small demand for other good varieties, is it that the flower buyers only look for size and want as much as possible for their money in preference to artistic beauty in flowers? It was thought that some of the dealers would be able to account for this sort of thing and the decided change that has occurred in the tastes of the flower buyers. Robert Kift continued the discussion by saying that he could not exactly explain the matter, but he knew it was difficult to sell other varieties of roses. At times he has had other kinds, but his customers would simply pass them by. However, he thought that if the stores had good La France they would sell as readily as Brides-maid.

George Anderson being asked why he did not grow La France, replied that the dealers refused to pay a profitable price for them. He said that in former times the price asked was cheerfully given and no questions asked; under the present condition of affairs the grower has to accept what the dealer offers, and La France could not be produced to sell at the store prices. Mr. A. B. Cartledge is of the opinion that the stores could handle more varieties if they could only be procured, from the fact that early in the season Pennock Bros. were receiving some good Perles, which were all sold, but finally they were obliged to refuse orders because it was impossible to fill them. He felt that if the growers would give them more varieties the public could be induced to buy them.

Mr. May was the next to take up the subject. He felt he must differ from the former speaker and was of the opinion that the stores did not want a great variety, leaving only four varieties, so to speak. A great many of the stores only buy, say, 100 roses each morning, 25 of each variety, whereas when they carry four or five other varieties they must buy 25 of each. He has known dealers to turn customers away, saying there were no more varieties to be had, when there were other sorts on the market. With the grower it was the price obtained; he felt that the grower would be glad to grow more varieties, but he must have a living profit. Edwin Lonsdale substantiated Mr. May's views in the matter. Robert Craig thought it was due to lack of effort on the part of the retailer, as he thought that a greater variety could be used.

Benj. Durfee being asked as to the popularity of Golden Gate, said it was increasing in sales everywhere but around this city. He felt that the trouble was that the growers cut the flowers too soon. The blooms require to ripen more on the plant, and if cut as soon as the other varieties, cannot be grown successfully by anyone.

And so the discussion went on. It is evident the grower is willing to produce whatever he can get a living profit for. All who attended were quite pleased with the meeting and feel very grateful to Mr. May for bringing up such an interesting subject.

From all accounts Philadelphia will be well represented at the carnation convention in Buffalo, as there is quite a delegation going.

Club Shoot.

The first of the series of inter-club shoots between Frankford and Florist Gun clubs was held Saturday, February 10, at Wissinoming. The conditions were: Nine men on a side, 25 targets per man, unknown angles. Squads of three men from each team, rapid fire system. The florists won by a score of seven targets.

POUGHKEEPSIE, N. Y.

The Dutchess County Horticultural Society held its annual meeting on February 7. The following officers were elected to serve for the ensuing year: F. R. Newbold, president; James Blair, vice-president; Charles Mitchell, treasurer, and W. G. Gomersall, secretary. It was decided to hold quarterly meetings and that the ladies and gentlemen who subscribed towards the annual shows be made honorary members of the society. It was decided to hold the chrysanthemum show in Poughkeepsie as usual next fall, and several valuable prizes are already offered. C. W. Ward, of the Cottage Gardens, offered a silver cup in the carnation class, and E. G. Asmus $25 for a vase of "Liberty" roses.

In the evening the society's annual dinner was given in the Nelson House and a most enjoyable one it was, too. There were over fifty members and guests present. The arrangements were excellent. The guests were in the center of the room and the members were seated at small tables which formed a circle. The menu was fine and the New Yorkers never saw one served more pleasingly systematic. The decorations were arranged by Richard Grigg, with a magnificent vase of seedling carnations brought by Mr. C. W. Ward. They were grand in colors and extraordinary in size. Mr. Asmus sent a vase of Liberty roses; M. J. Lynch, roses and carnations; David Gindra, Begonia venusta and a variety of flowers; James Horrocks, roses. Samuel Henshaw, Patrick O'Mara, Walter F. Sheridan, C. W. Ward, Charles B. Weathered, W. J. Stewart and J. I. Donlan attended from New York, and Messrs. Newbrand and McCord as representatives of the Tarrytown society.

Now, this gathering was more like a banquet of city notables; the mayor considered it an honor to be present, there were three ex-mayors, the county treasurer, the leading attorney, the president of the bank, editors of papers—in fact, most of the leading town and county officials. They were the principal speakers during the evening and all their talks ended in an apostrophe to Flora, particularly to her gem violet, for which that section of the county is famous. W. G. Gomersall welcomed the visitors and introduced the toastmaster, Richard Connell, who is editor of a local paper. Samuel Henshaw spoke on "Porto Rico," P. O'Mara for "New York," and C. W. Ward on "Carnations." Mayor I. W. Sherrill said he thought the best speech he could make on an occasion like this was to offer a prize of $25 for the best 200 violets at the November exhibition. Free distribution of seeds by the government came in for lots of bantering wit and sarcasm; so did the glowing pictures and terms used in catalogues; but it was a great affair. Mr. Wm. Schickle made everyone feel at home and, what to us is most important of all, the future of the Dutchess County Horticultural Society, thanks to Walter Gomersall, looks very bright. D.

MILWAUKEE.

Otto Sylvester and Mr. Morgan came in from Oconomowoc Tuesday evening to practice on the Milwaukee alleys and to arrange for the match game between the Milwaukee and Oconomowoc florists Saturday evening.

PAWTUCKET, R. I.—Alex. Millar, manager of the Rhode Island Greenhouses, is a convert to the grafted rose system. He finds the crop is produced earlier and heavier and that it pays for the difference in cost. He says his store is bringing considerable business.

GENEVA, ILL.—Alfred Clark, a florist and gardener employed by W. P. Harvey, committed suicide Feb. 11th by taking Rough on Rats. He was an Englishman and had been in this country only a short time and came to Geneva from Philadelphia.

KNOXVILLE, TENN.—Chas. Crouch will soon begin the erection of two large new greenhouses.

DENVER, COLO.

The Florists of Denver had a very good time on February 9th, at a banquet given by the Denver Bowling Club in honor of Mr. J. N. Jacobsen who is to leave the West for a position in Philadelphia. About thirty florists were present, with Mr. Lewis as toastmaster. The menu, consisting of eight courses, was well gotten up and very much enjoyed. After-dinner speaking was freely indulged in and was a marked sign of the intelligence of our fellow men in the trade. Mr. Thomas Chapman made some spicy remarks alluding to the feast, the nervousness in speaking and topics in general. He was followed by Mr. Beers, of the Colfax Floral Co., on expansion. Mr. Emerich spoke on the Philippine question and soldier life, with recitations on what may befall a married soldier upon his return after being on the dead list.

F. A. Haenselman spoke on sympathy for English or Boers versus sympathy for people who need it as much right here at home, thereby referring to a recent tramway accident which befell Thomas Batten, a Denver florist, and cost him his leg and a big toe on the other foot. John Berry spoke on good fellowship and bowling clubs; C. J. Thiess on retail florists and queer customers. Mr. Bloy, who recently arrived from Buffalo, on florists' clubs and the benefits derived from them, and Mr. E. W. Davis on the same topic, referring to a way to revive the old club by combining the bowling club with a new organization of florists of Denver, with a view of forming a trust to realize better prices. Tickets for a raffle were sold for the benefit of Tom Batten and all florists are requested to send their spare money for his benefit. The hosts and their guests left in good spirits over their successful banquet. F. A. H.

WASHINGTON.

The Market.

On account of many large dinners during the past week prices have kept up to the standard. Dealers in general report a fine week of business. Good teas of all kinds brought 8 and 10 cents, while seconds brought 4 and 6 cents; carnations, 2 to 3 cents; tulips,

2 and 4 cents; narcissus and Romans, 2 to 3 cents; mignonette, 3 and 6 cents; asparagus, very scarce, 50 and 75 cents per string; smilax, 15 and 20 cents.

Notes.

Large quantities of flowers were used at the funeral of General Lawton. The church was elaborately decorated with palms and flags and a great many elaborate designs were brought from along the line from the different cities. The great mass of flowers and designs were brought from the church and were grouped and massed around the grave, which was lined with palms. Among these was a superb wreath of Brides, callas, valley, orchids and sago leaves sent by President and Mrs. McKinley. Ex-Secretary of War and Mrs. Alger sent a magnificent wreath of galax leaves, with valley and orchids tied with a broad purple satin ribbon. The Royal Legion also sent a magnificent wreath. The Indiana delegates in Congress sent a large shield in red and white carnations and blue cape flowers crossed with a white bar bearing the word "Indiana." The tribute of the members of the Philippine commission, Admiral Dewey, Jacob G. Schurman, Dean C. Worcester, Charles Denby and John R. McArthur, was an extra large wreath of green orchids, mignonette and maidenhair fern. The above design was very fine and tastefully arranged and deserves great credit to the makers. Mr. and Mrs. Addison Porter's offering was a large wreath of cape flowers resting on an easel inscribed in blue, with the words, "Duty Done, Rest Won." There were many more very handsome tributes too numerous to mention.

The firm of Gude Bros. are cutting some very handsome Beauties from their new houses. The firm of Shine & Davidson are about to open another stand in Center Market. Mr. Crawford, for ten years manager for the American Rose Company's F street store, has given up his position to open a store on corner of Ninth street and Grant place. F. H. KRAMER.

TROUBLES OF A SEED FIRM.

Several former employes of the Albert Dickinson Seed Co., Chicago, are under arrest charged with the theft of a large amount of postage stamps, and also with giving out inside information as to the firm's movements in the market to their competitors, which resulted in the failure of several flaxseed deals to show a profit.

PADUCAH, KY.—The greenhouses of C. L. Brunson & Co. were badly damaged by fire Jan. 31. Loss estimated at $3,000, with insurance of $1,000.

GREENSBURG, PA.—Henry Bray, the florist, died Feb. 4 of heart disease. He leaves a widow and four children.

SAN FRANCISCO.

Trade has been very good this week. Several large funerals took place, among them the funeral of Mrs. Alice Phelan, mother of our mayor. Six wagon loads of floral pieces were sent by the various stores. As a consequence there has been a shortage of stock all through the line and a slight increase in prices. Beauties, $3.50 to $5; Brides and Maids, 75 cents to $1.50; Perles, 50 to 75 cents; Meteors, 50 cents to $1; Brunners, 12½ cents per dozen. Carnations, Hannah Hobart, $1.25; Ethel Crocker, 75 cents; mixed fancy, 50 to 75 cents; Flora Hill, 50 cents; Scott, 25 to 30 cents; Portia, 25 cents; chrysanthemums, 25 to 50 cents; daffodils, 20 to 25 cents; valley, 50 cents; double fancy hyacinth, 50 cents per dozen. Violets, Californias, 50 to 75 cents; Princess of Wales, 75 cents to $1; Duchess of Marlborough, $1.50. Smilax, 5 cents; asparagus, 10 to 25 cents; Maidenhair ferns, $1 per 100 fronds; freesias, $1; paper whites, 50 to 75 cents.

Fruit blossoms made their first appearance in market this week. Among them were almond, peach, currant and quince. They are bought up quickly.

E. W. McLellan is around once more with the support of crutches. Mr. McLellan has a fine lot of Kaiserins and Testouts that will soon be seen in market.

Shannahan, on Powell street, has for two years or more made a specialty of carnation Lewis Bradbury, a brilliant carmine red, with smooth, silky, rounded petals, a color much admired by everyone. Mr. Shannahan makes a fine display of this grand carnation in his window, always having a vase filled with two hundred or more blooms each day; it is one of Siever's seedlings. I. N.

ORANGE, N. J.

At the meeting of the New Jersey Floricultural Society February 7, Mr. John N. May, of Summit, read a paper entitled, "Horticultural Reminiscences." His remarks were both historical as relating to some of the old time favorites among flowers, and biographical as relating to many of the craft who have passed away, concluding with an eulogy to the late Wm. MacMillan.

Mr. May drew a comparison between the methods of his early home on the other side of the water and here, the land of his adoption, in the choice of plants for the decoration of country homes, and the tasteful grouping so prevalent there and so painfully lacking here, particularly in rhododendrons and kalmias. The speaker received the usual vote of thanks.

Resolutions were passed providing for a prize for the forthcoming exhibition of the American Rose Society and appropriate representation at the exhibition of the S. A. F. next August.

HYDROCYANIC ACID GAS.

A reader reports some unpleasant results from the use of this gas. He tried it first for curl leaf in violets, with very satisfactory effect. Then he used it in general plant houses, and is very sorry he did. Carnations were badly injured, so were geraniums, asparagus, ageratums, orchids and roses. Curiously enough, adiantum ferns were not affected; neither were heliotrope and several other supposedly tender plants, and, as evidence that the gas was not used too strong, he states that he found live sow bugs and red spider in the house the next day.

Evidently there is still much to learn about this gas as an insecticide, and it should be experimented with most cautiously. The fact that it is so deadly to human as well as insect life has deterred us from recommending its use to our readers. And now that we receive the above report, we are more than ever inclined to urge florists to let it alone. The gas is death to anyone who inhales it for only a moment, and ever since it has been recommended as an insecticide we have lived in fear of receiving a report that some experimenter had put himself in a position to receive an obituary notice.

PITTSBURG.

Springlike weather, frost, then rain, has been the order the past week. Thursday it was 70 in the shade, the ventilators were thrown wide open and plants seemed to enjoy it; next morning the ground was frozen a little and the thermometer down to 30.

Von Slons and roses are coming in more freely and carnations are not at all scarce. It seems queer that we cannot get more than 3, seldom 4 cents for fancy carnations, such as White Cloud, Flora Hill, America, Victor, Joost and Bradt outside of holidays. Here in Pittsburgh the retailers want something better than the Greeks handle, but do not want to put up the price, so the grower still finds Scott the best paying one for pink and Mrs. Fisher in white.

If it was not for the pleasure the grower finds in fine large blooms he would not feel like spending money every year for new varieties.

One of our florists is advertising, in the street cars, $1.50 boxes of cut flowers for $1.00.

Visitors in town: Ringier from Chicago, Gasser from Cleveland.

BAER.

CINCINNATI.

Trade has been unusually brisk the past week, owing to several large social events and the funeral of the late Hon. Senator Goebel.

The monthly show of February 10, with roses as a special feature, was not largely represented, owing to the scarcity of roses. Mr. E. Asmus, of Hoboken, N. J., sent a vase of the celebrated "Liberty" and everybody was delighted with it. The flower, shape and color are what have been represented and, judging from present indications, this rose will have a grand future.

George & Allen made the best display in roses; their Maids and Brides were excellent; they also carried first on Meteor, Beauties, tulips and daffodils. Corbett & Wilson, of College Hill, were the only exhibitors in violets, Princess of Wales and Marie Louise. Stuart & Haugh, of Anderson, Ind., showed a vase of carnations, a sport of Armazindy, named Avondale; the blooms were identical with that of the parent; color shell pink and stem strong and stiff.

Quite a delegation of visiting florists were with us at the meeting. J. Schultz, C. K. Kunzman and J. Coenen, of Louisville; J. Evans and Ch. Nops, of Richmond; Walter Bertermann, Indianapolis.

In the evening the boys were treated to a little sport at the Highland bowling alleys and had a jolly good time. I am sorry to say that but a few will avail themselves of the opportunity of going to Buffalo. R. Witterstaetter, W. Sunderbruch and W. Murphy are going, and perhaps one or two more.

LOUISVILLE, KY.

The meeting of the Kentucky Society of Florists was held at Music Hall, Feb. 7th, at 8 p. m., with President C. F. Wood in the chair, and a good many members present. A good deal of business was transacted and two new carnations were shown. Olympia was seen in fine form and was highly praised. Mrs. Thomas Lawson was also exhibited but the flowers were in poor shape and not in condition to be commented upon.

Business has improved a little the past week, especially the cut flower end of it, but roses and carnations are scarce. Romans are plentiful.

We had a touch of bad winter weather again, the thermometer dropping as low as 6 above zero.

Wood & Stubbs, the seedsmen, report a very good trade, far ahead of last year, especially in onion sets.

A. Heitz will the coming summer build several houses at his new place, just opposite St. Louis cemetery. His carnations are very fine.

Jos. Coenen & Co.'s place is in fine shape. Their carnations, roses and azaleas are extra fine. Jno. Bohrmann always gets there in time.

Henry Fuchs is the happiest man in town over the arrival of a boy at his home.

Wm. Mann reports trade good and lots of funeral work. His carnations are fine, especially Rose Queen and Frances Joost.

Mrs. Laura Rudy, wife of T. B. Rudy, has been very ill with la grippe, but we are glad to say is now much better.

Jacob Schulz has a promising lot of carnation seedlings that will be heard from later.

C. H. Kunzman is cutting some of the finest Triumphs ever seen here.

Burpee's Seeds Grow

FROSTED WINDOWS.

Editor Review:—I have just been reading Ivera's article on frozen windows and thought possibly my way of keeping the frost off would interest your readers.

I use an electric fan, and it keeps the window perfectly clear, even with the mercury 36 degrees below zero. It also keeps the window free from steam or sweat and at a cost of only $1 per month.

I know of only one drawback to this method. It takes too much time to explain to people "why you keep that fan going all the time." "Does that keep the plants from freezing?" "Do they grow better with a circulation of air?" "Do you keep the leaves waving all the time to attract attention?" etc., about forty times a day. But it's refreshing to come up the streets past whole blocks of windows frozen solid and find your own perfectly clean and full of bright flowers.

W. W. SEEKINS.

Duluth, Minn.

WE HAVE received a circular from W. Atlee Burpee & Co., the Philadelphia seedsmen, in which they offer a cash prize of $20 for the best collection of vegetables grown from Burpee's seeds at each state and county fair held in the United States during the summer or fall of 1900. There are other prizes, and a sweepstakes of $100 to the one winning the greatest amount of prizes for products of Burpee's seeds in 1900. It is a remarkable offer and we imagine the amount of prize money will run into large figures. The circular is interesting reading. It will no doubt be mailed to anyone addressing a request to W. Atlee Burpee & Co., Philadelphia, Pa.

CHATTANOOGA, TENN.—John Karsten has erected a fine office and workroom in addition to two houses for palms and ferns. He is much encouraged by the steady increase in business and intends to further enlarge his place next summer. He noted an increased demand for pot plants during the holidays.

Ethel Crocker. Absolutely the Best Pink Carnation ever offered the trade.

A fact fully borne out by its record, being equally good with Craig, Hill and myself (an assurance that it is not a success in one soil and a failure in another.) By its having been shown at the flower shows and clubs since early in September (an assurance that it is not a good late carnation but an all season variety.)

In color, size, fragrance and stem it is just what the "storemen" want. In habit, constitution and freedom of bloom it is just what the grower wants. It produces more flowers to the square foot than any other known variety, and is never out of crop from September to July.

With 18,000 stock plants to work from there is no danger of it being overpropagated, and all orders entrusted to me will be filled with cuttings selected from the plants and also in filling the order, by myself, thus doubly assuring good stock. Honest sample blooms furnished prepaid at $1.00 per dozen, amount deducted from all orders for 100 or over. Up to date every sample excepting one out of several hundred sent has brought an order.

Price per 100, $10.00; per 25, $2.50. Per 1000, $75.00; per 250, $18.75. HERR'S PANSIES, good little plants at 75c per 100; $4.00 per 1000.

GENEVIEVE LORD. The Peer of Light Pinks

(Stock for delivery prior to March 20, all sold.)

The people know a good thing when they see it. If you haven't seen it ask someone who has concerning its appearance. It has proven itself the most popular selling carnation we have ever grown, and as it combines quantity with quality it is no surprise to know it is the most profitable we have ever grown.

Some of its Features: The finest stem of any carnation. The color is just right, the ladies go wild over it. It is large, grades easily as a fancy. Odor is very sweet. Form beautiful, calyx perfect. It is a perfect non-bursting carnation. Every grower will appreciate this. If you don't grow Genevieve Lord next winter your list will not be complete. Remember stock is all sold until March 20.

WASHINGTON, D. C., January 12, 1900.
MESSRS. H. WEBER & SONS, Oakland, Md.
Dear Sirs:—We have handled your new carnation Genevieve Lord, for the past year, and beg to state that it is one of the finest carnations we have ever handled. It has become very popular here in Washington, its beautiful color making it a ready seller. Together with color its most distinct points are its extra long stems and perfect, erect habit. It has a marked individuality, enabling customers to recognize it at a glance. It is one of the few new carnations that have so many good points, and we feel satisfied that it has a great future before it. It is some little trouble to educate the people up to paying $3 and $4 per dozen for carnations, but if any carnation will bring the price, it is Genevieve Lord.
Yours very truly,
[Signed] J. H. SMALL & SONS.

PRICE:
$2 per doz., $10 per 100,
$75 per 1000.

Catalogue ready now containing full description of the above as well as the other big new ones and standard sorts. A postal card will bring it.

Also complete list of new and standard Chrysanthemums.

MESSRS. H. WEBER & SONS, Oakland, Md.
Gentlemen:—I want to congratulate you on being the introducers of Genevieve Lord, your new pink carnation. Although I have not seen it growing, I have seen it exhibited at nearly all seasons of the year, and taking all its good qualities into consideration, I believe it to be the best pink of its class in the market today. It is strictly a commercial flower, and will produce the dollars and cents. I predict for you a phenomenal sale of this carnation.
Yours very truly,
[Signed] E. G. GILLET.

H. WEBER & SONS, Oakland, Md.
Dear Sirs:—In regard to what I think of Genevieve Lord, and what I heard spoken about it at the meeting, is this: Color just right and what is wanted and will sell. Shape and size as good if not better than any carnation ever sent out; very sweet; stems the best ever seen on any carnation sent out. In keeping and shipping qualities it beats any carnation that I have ever seen; as I mentioned last time in my letter to you, they looked as fresh as if they had just been cut.
Yours very truly,
[Signed] E. SCHRAY, Sec. St. Louis Florists' Club.

OSAGE, IA.

The florists of northern Iowa and southern Minnesota held their second annual picnic with Hall Bros., here, January 23-24. The attendance was not as large as was expected, but it was a very profitable meeting, and those who were unable to attend missed a grand meeting.

The florists all report this season so far a profitable one, as the mild weather has cut down some on expenses and the cut of flowers has been above the average. Floral design work in most places showed a falling off, but the call for flowers had been good and all had been disposed of at the established prices.

The address of welcome and a few verses in memory of our last meet were read by W. H. Hall, of the firm of Hall Bros.

M. H. Wetherbee, from Charles City, read a very interesting paper on "How to Induce Customers to Buy Flowers for the Sick and Aged." It seemed to be the opinion of all present that flowers for the sick was one of the best purposes they could be used for, and that we were justified in giving an extra flower or two to customers buying them for this purpose.

Mr. Wetherbee has rebuilt one house and added two new ones 12x70 the past summer, which, in addition to his former plant, gives him plenty of room for growing cut flowers.

E. J. Springer, of New Hampton, gave us a very witty paper on "What Induces Me to Stick to the Florist's Business." No one present escaped a dig from his pen, and each one enjoyed the joke on the other fellow better than that on himself.

W. B. Perry, from Cresco, who, by the way, is the champion cut flower grower in this section, demonstrated by the wonderful specimens which he exhibited, gave us some very interesting figures on his yield of cut flowers per plant. We need Mr. Perry here in this section to fall back on when we are short of flowers, so I will not state the number of first quality cut flowers he is able to produce per plant in a season.

Walter S. Hall, of the firm of Hall Bros., took for his subject "Plant Novelties." He drew quite a discouraging picture and showed the need of some organization to test and inspect new varieties and restrict introducers from exaggerated statements.

Mr. A. N. Kinsman, Austin, Minn., told us what he saw at the S. A. F. convention and other places the past summer.

Mr. Kinsman is planning to add 7,000 feet of glass this summer and his plans for his new houses drew out quite a discussion; nearly everyone agreed to his plan of even span east and west houses.

Plans were made to meet next July with W. T. Symonds at Decorah, Iowa, who with his wit and brogue is an entertainer at every meeting.

THE NEW PINK CARNATION

"Mrs. Bertram Lippincott."

(Originated and grown for the past four years by John Kuhn, Philadelphia, Pa.)

The mere fact that this variety is a cross between "Daybreak" and "Scott" is a sufficient guarantee and should recommend it to every grower throughout the land as the only carnation that will be sure to yield good returns. Its pedigree, however, though much in its favor, is by no means its strongest point or recommendation. "Mrs. Bertram Lippincott" is possessed of many good points of its own and is being introduced upon its own merits. The meritorious points in its favor are:

FORM. The very acme of perfection. Full, well rounded, and double, with a calyx that never bursts.

SIZE. 3 to 3½ inches in ordinary soil—with chemical fertilizers this size can still be increased.

COLOR. A soft, rich pink, a shade darker than Daybreak—a color that "takes" or sells at sight.

STEM. Of the Daybreak type, averaging from 2 to 2½ feet.

HABIT. Exceptionally strong and healthy. Has never been known to be a victim to rust or any other disease.

KEEPING QUALITIES. No other carnation can surpass it in this respect.

ITS STRONGEST POINT. It crops from the time it is housed until it is thrown out. No "between season," no "let up." In a word, it is the carnation you want to grow.

STOCK NOW READY.

We control the whole stock of this valuable carnation. Orders will be filled in strict rotation as booked.

PRICES: $2.00 per dozen; $10.00 per 100; 25 and over at 100 rates; $75.00 per 1000; 250 and over at 1000 rates.

GRAND RAPIDS, MICH.

The continued bad weather has made it bad for the shipping trade, as trains have been badly delayed and shipments put on board the various trains never reached their destination until ready for the dump.

Flowers are scarce. In carnations the only variety in good supply is Scott. Roses all shy, although they are blooming more freely than last week. Violets are now doing finely. The demand for funeral flowers continues steady and uses up a quality of flowers that might otherwise find their way to the dump. Prices remain the same as when last quoted, except some grades of carnations, which have dropped a trifle, noticeably Scott and Daybreak.

Geo. Hancock, of Grand Haven, was a recent visitor. The Florists' Club intends holding a carnation meeting, possibly a banquet, at the Eagle Hotel some time in March. George Hancock has expressed a wish to have it held in Grand Haven, but while there is a general desire to agree to meet there, yet so many of the boys would find it difficult to get to the meeting if held there; so, in deference to the greatest good to the greatest number, the meeting will undoubtedly be held here as usual and a subsequent meeting at Grand Haven. THE FLORISTS' MANUAL.

After reading Mr. Wm. Scott's Manual, we wish to say that we consider it without equal as a book of reference for busy florists.

GEO. M. KELLOGG.

Pleasant Hill, Mo.

Mr. Scott's superb work, "The Florists' Manual," was indeed worth waiting for. When compared with the amount of practical information it contains, the selling price, $5.00, seems a mere bagatelle.

Oakland, Md. H. WEBER & SONS.

It is the best book of the kind ever published. There is more in it than in any other book I have ever seen. I am delighted with it.

Chicago.

JOHN THORPE.

The copy of the "Florists' Manual" was duly received. I am, very well pleased with same. The more I read it the better satisfied I am with it, and there are one or two articles alone in it that are each worth all you ask for the book, for everything is made so plain and all details are right to the point. I trust you may have a good and ready sale for the same.

M. S. WORDEN.

North Adams, Mass.

The only fault to be found with it is when you get reading it the midnight oil is liable to run low and you have to go on to gas or reluctantly break off, either going to bed or first taking a look over the houses to see if the temperature tallies with the Manual.

GEO. S. OSBORN.

Hartford, Conn.

We are in receipt of "The Florists' Manual" by Mr. Scott and may say it is the right book for the florist, published at the right time. It is what we all need.

BOBBINK & ATKINS.

Rutherford, N. J.

Am much pleased with the Manual. It is just what I have been looking for. Something that we can understand, and enjoy reading.

M. NAUMAN.

Etna, Pa.

I am very much pleased with the Manual. It is just what we have needed for a long time.

N. ZWEIFEL.

Milwaukee, Wis.

It is certainly a neat and handsome book and does you credit.

BENJAMIN HAMMOND.

Fishkill-on-Hudson, N. Y.

It is a work of art and should be in the hands of all live florists. Its useful and instructive contents can not fail to be a benefit to all in the trade.

C. C. POLLWORTH Co.

Milwaukee, Wis.

The book is written for the working gardener, and Mr. Scott's reputation is so well secured that he will find among his gardening friends a host of genuine admirers. As a writer on practical gardening subjects, he is a recognized authority. * * * Mr. Scott has long been an employer and knows what information young gardeners, or those with little experience, need, and he has his whole subject so perfectly at command that he can give the most desirable and essential information in the clearest language and with satisfactory brevity. The book is a distinct and important gain to the practical garden literature of this country, and it should be in the hands of every gardener, and everyone else engaged or interested in ornamental horticulture. The price of the book is $5, which seems somewhat high, but for useful information it is worth every cent of it.—Vick's Magazine.

Philadelphia. JOS. KIFT & SON.

Detroit, Mich., January 6, 1900.—Mr. Wm. Scott, Buffalo, N. Y. Dear Sir: The Commissioners of Parks and Boulevards some time since directed that a library be started of such books as deal with subjects pertaining to park work, and to that end, an order has been given for a number of books, among which is your "The Florists' Manual."

After reading this book carefully, I am greatly pleased, and wish to congratulate you on the practical manner with which you have treated the subject.

This book is placed where it will be accessible to all of our greenhouse employes, where this board expects to reap a reward many times the cost of the book. Respectfully yours,

COMMISSIONERS OF PARKS AND BOULEVARDS,

R. J. CORYELL, Gen'l Sup't.

I am more than pleased with The Florists' Manual.

Enclosed find $5.00 in payment for the copy of the Florists' Manual. No progressive florist, old or young, can afford to be without the Florists' Manual. The old florist needs it, for reference, to aid a defective memory, and the young florist wants it as a guide in this progressive era of the florist's business.

THE BUFFALO CONVENTION.

INSECTS INFESTING CARNATIONS.

BY PROF. F. A. SIRRINE, OF THE NEW YORK AGRICULTURAL EXPERIMENT STATION.

Florists in general are not only familiar with all the insects infesting the carnation, but also with the whole category of remedies; hence it appears like a waste of time to devote a few minutes to the above subject. Yet, when one can cull from florists' periodicals such statements as "Lack of ventilation favors the development of the red spider," or "It resents light almost as much as fresh air," also "Give as much fresh air as possible—that is what red spider does not like," a few facts regarding the habits and life history of this and other carnation pests will bear consideration.

Before taking up the subject of habits and life history, a portion of another statement requires notice. It is: "Water is the remedy for thrip or red spider. Select some bright morning and syringe heavily and later see that the roots of the plants never get dry, for drought at some time or other, or too much fire heat, is the source whence both pests originate." Note that the latter portion of this statement conveys the idea of spontaneous generation. The days of spontaneous generation, if they ever existed among insects, passed away long before Adam was a gardener. We often hear the expression "A new insect" used. A new creation is not intended by such a statement. This term is used either when a long established insect adapts itself to new conditions, or it has succeeded up to the present time in keeping out of the way of a "bugologist" with his long label and his still longer name with which he burdens it.

The insects infesting carnations may be separated for convenience into two groups—first, those which are nearly always to be found on the carnation, and, second, those which occur on the plants only occasionally, and then usually by accident. That is to say, we have resident and transient insect pests of the carnation. A subdivision of each of the above groups into "forcing-house" and "field" pests could easily be made, but all divisions are empirical and of value simply to avoid a discussion of each species alone. At this time only the "forcing-house" pests of the carnation will be considered.

In the first group may be classed the greenfly, red spider, and thrips; while in the second group we have the cutworms, cabbage looper (an undetermined webworm), the roseleaf tyer, the chrysanthemum leaf skeletonizer, Fuller's rose beetle, white grub, white ants, and a few others.

Greenfly.

The "greenfly" (rhopalosiphum dianthi). As the specific name indicates, this aphid was first found and described as infesting dianthus. At present it might be called polyphagous, as it is known to feed on nearly one hundred different varieties of plants.

This pest is so well known that a description is not needed, but a few words on its habits will not be out of place. Under natural conditions this species of aphid, like most other aphids which feed upon deciduous plants, deposits its eggs late in the fall, in which form it passes the winter, but, under forcing-house conditions this habit is entirely lost. Instead of the young hatching from eggs, they are produced year after year by a process of internal budding, which we call "agamic reproduction." That is, certain cells separate from the abdominal walls of the mother and develop the same as plant buds develop. These buds grow into small aphids and are deposited alive by the parent. No fathers are needed in this process and they are rarely produced.

With one exception, as far as known the greenfly never degenerates by being reproduced from buds, like strains of plants degenerate. We have the same kind of propagation in an insect as a florist practices with the variety or strain of a carnation. As most of you are aware, in the case of the greenfly this is not a slow process of reproduction. One mathematician has estimated that the offspring of an individual aphid can in one year amount to 210 raised to the fifteenth power, a number which is almost impossible to express in figures. If there were no checks to this method of reproduction "there would be room in the world for nothing else but aphids."

I have said that as far as known there is no loss of vitality on the part of the greenfly by the above method of reproduction. At times the older specimens, which usually live only about three weeks, become inert and reproduce very slowly. Whether this is due to exhaustion or is a provision to carry them through unfavorable conditions is not known. Possibly it is a form of hibernation. This much is certain: tobacco smoke will not kill these individuals and they will stand hydrocyanic acid gas better than will the plants. Conditions which bring about this inert state are, exhaustion of the plant on which they are feeding, and frequent fumigation of the plants with tobacco smoke.

Not all the individuals of each brood develop wings, but under forcing house conditions winged females are produced in nearly every brood. This is necessary to prevent overstocking a plant. It also allows them to spread to all parts of the house more rapidly.

Red Spider.

Red Spider (Tetranychus telarius). Here we have another pest which needs no description, as it is already well known by all. The red spider differs slightly from the greenfly in its method of reproduction. Each brood hatches from eggs which are deposited on nearly all kinds of plants during every season of the year except winter, but, as with the greenfly, males are not always needed. The red spider belongs with the true mites, such as sugar and cheese mites, itch mites, etc. At the same time the mites form one branch of the spider family. The red spider spins webs, the same as all spiders, which are of special use in fastening the eggs to the leaf.

Judging from the clipping previously quoted, which claimed that the red spider originated from too much fire heat or drought, the life history of this pest is not all known. Under natural conditions, at this season of the year, they are to be found on plants in the egg stage only. Their eggs can be discovered at the present time on many plants, both annual and perennial, living and dead, looking like mere red dots. The parent spider deposits these eggs in the fall, around the buds, under rough bits of bark, and even on the leaves which drop. During the latter part of April I have seen newly hatched young swarming over the grass under chestnut trees and traveling up the body of the tree in such countless numbers that the bark appeared to be in motion.

Ten days to two weeks are required before the first brood is developed enough to commence to lay eggs. After this period there is a new brood about once in every three weeks throughout the whole season. They thrive and increase rapidly while there is plenty of wind and bright sunlight. Excessive rains in May and June do not injure the eggs, but they have a bad effect on the young or newly hatched red spiders. They appear to get tangled in the wet webs and are not able to survive the chill which they receive. During extreme heat of midsummer the egg laying is sometimes checked, but usually they can stand plenty of heat combined with sunlight and air. Hence you see that naturally this insect thrives under conditions which are supposed by some to be adverse to them, especially in forcing-houses.

I have yet to see it proven that syringing plants with water has any effect on the adult insect. A few of them may be knocked from the plants by the force of the water, but they soon crawl back. I have observed that the best time to have apparent success with syringing of plants with water is to wait until a good many eggs are deposited, then apply the water with force. The old exhausted red spiders are knocked from the plants and the result is that the plants will appear clean for a week or ten days—that is, until time for the new brood to hatch from the eggs.

The immature red spider can be distinguished from the adult by the fact that they only have three pairs of legs, while the adult has four pairs.

It is not known how many distinct broods of the red spider occur out of doors each year. In October, when the leaves commence to fall, males occur in the brood and the winter eggs are deposited. It is not known how often males occur under forcing house conditions. Their rate of increase is equal to that of the green fly.

Thrips.

THRIPS. Several species of this pest occur in greenhouses and attack nearly all kinds of plants. The species which causes the injury, usually found on "twittered" carnations, has been described as an "Onion Thrips," "Cabbage Thrips," and a "Tobacco Thrips." In the vicinity of New York city carnations are usually infested with this species. Before it was noticed injuring onions and cabbage in this country it was called Thrips tobacco by an European entomologist.

As this pest and its work are not well known, a full description will be admissible. Furthermore, from recommendations given in the Florists' Exchange for 1898, p. 1124a, quoted from Peter Henderson's "Practical Floriculture," this pest has apparently been confused with the so-called "rosethrips," which is not a thrip at all, but a leaf-hopper, one of the Jassidae.

The adult insects are winged and have six legs. Their wings, of which there are two pairs, are very thin, delicate membranes, fringed with long hairs. They are not able to hop, but they make short flights, which gives them the appearance of hopping like the rose leaf hopper. The larvae or immature thrips, both males and females, are wingless. They are of a light yellow color, while the adults closely resemble the soil around the plants.

General View of the Carnation Society's Exhibition at Buffalo last Thursday and Friday.

The adult females deposit their eggs within the tissues of the plants upon which they feed. The time required for the eggs to hatch and the number of broods occurring each year is not known. This insect probably hibernates as adults and not in the egg state. They hide away under rubbish and under the rough bark of the plants on which they feed.

They usually attack carnations in the fall while the latter are in the field. Feeding as they do on the tender unfolding leaves of the plant, they may, in some cases, cause the twisting that is called "carnation twitter." The chances are that "carnation twitter" can be produced by any cause which checks the growth of the plants, and is rarely the work of thrips.

When the plants are transferred from the field to the forcing-house the thrips are taken along. As soon as the plants commence to throw flower buds the thrip will work its way into the latter, where he will be safe from all human attacks. Here it feeds upon the partially developed petals, not only distorting them but robbing them of their coloring pigment, so that the flowers not only have irregular white blotches on the petals, but often they do not open properly. In some cases the petals bleed to such an extent that flowers rot before they open. Not satisfied with making the flowers appear as if affected with leprosy, they deposit their eggs in the tissue of the inner or upper surface of the calyx.

Combating the Pests.

Before taking up the subject of controlling the three pests discussed thus far, we should know how they feed and breathe, also how they get into the forcing-house.

The greenfly is provided with a proboscis or beak-like mouth similar to that of the bedbug. With this it punctures the plants and sucks the clear sap or liquid from all the surrounding tissue. Usually the tissues of the plant are only slightly broken by the feeding process of the greenfly. The red spider and the thrips are both provided with biting mouth parts. They first bite open the cells of the leaf tissue and then proceed to lap or suck up not only the juices but also the coloring matter from the broken cells. These broken empty cells give the whitish appearance to the plants on which the latter pests feed. Hence, the small size of these pests, combined with their method of feeding, makes the use of poisons impossible.

All insects breathe by means of small openings called spiricals, which are arranged in rows on each side of the body. The spiricals connect with small tubes or arteries which divide and penetrate to all parts of the insect. Therefore, insects have air instead of blood circulating to all parts of their bodies. The closing of the spiricals with powder, washes, or with fumes of any kind suffocates the insect, and this is the only way we have of combating the above pests. With such small insects this is easier said than done. It is almost impossible to make the treatment thorough on such small objects.

All three pests can be carried into the forcing-house at the time the plants are taken in. The greenfly and thrips both produce winged individuals which can find their way into the houses by way of the ventilators. Red spider can be carried into the houses on cannas, dahlias, or any other plants or bulbs which have some tops on them when stored under the benches.

The oft recommended remedy for greenfly and thrips is fumigation with tobacco or steam from tobacco extracts. Water is the standard remedy for red spider, and is often assumed to be good for thrips. I have yet to find the forcing-house which has once become infested with greenfly, and afterward fumigated weekly with tobacco in some form until it shows signs of nicotine poisoning, in which I cannot still find the greenfly hidden away in out-of-the-way corners. I doubt if ever an adult thrip was killed by fumigation of any sort. Unless the latter are very thick and crowded for feeding ground, they are hidden away in the folds of the leaves too well protected to be reached even by tobacco smoke. Up to the present time we have no safer method of controlling the greenfly on carnations than fumigation with tobacco smoke at time the plants are flowering.

Fumigation with hydrocyanic acid gas has been recommended for violets and in a few cases for carnations. I have tested the latter in various ways, making upward of fifty distinct tests on carnations. Plants that are flowering will be liable to be injured from the banking of the gas in the upper portions of the house. This gas is so much lighter than air and compresses itself into the upper spaces of the house to such an extent that, even though only one-half ounce of 98 per cent cyanide of potash was used for every 1,000 cubic feet, it banked enough to cause serious injury. The injury was not noticeable until about two weeks after treatment, and consisted of a whitened ring around the buds and a few white spots on the upper leaves. The former did not appear to interfere with the perfect development of the flowers. In the above case, where only one-half ounce of the cyanide of potash was used, the gas was allowed to act all night. Although the plants were slightly injured, further work by the greenfly was stopped. Three days after treatment a few specimens were found still living. These apparently were old females that were through budding and in time died a natural death, as two weeks later not a living specimen could be found in the house.

As previously stated, syringing with water is usually recommended for red spider and thrips on carnations. Sometimes such substances as salt and water, also soap suds, are recommended. In addition, all patented insecticides, such as "Thrip Juice," "Nikoteen," "Rose Leaf Extract," "Antipest," etc., are warranted to kill both red spider and thrips. Nothing is ever said about the effect on the plants of the latter substance.

I think you will all agree with me that heavy syringing of carnations which stand eighteen inches high, with water, is anything but beneficial to the plants. If each grower would take the time to test water and some other substances side by side on the same bench of carnations on which the red spider has become established, he would prove to his satisfaction that such quantities of water injured the plants nearly as much as does the red spider.

I can see no difference in results between salt and water, and pure water. Both substances act as previously described, on the young at the time they issue from the egg; at the same time both substances favor the development of the rust and spot diseases on the plants.

Notice it is not claimed that water, salt, and the proprietary substances are of no use on any plants. Some may answer fairly well on plants other than carnations. I have used "Nikoteen" at the rate of one teaspoonful to a gallon of water, as a wash for thrips on ferns, with excellent results. But "Nikoteen" is vile stuff to put on any plant and should never be used on plants which, like carnations, have the foliage covered with a bloom. Besides, no substances can be made to reach the thrips after they have got into the carnation's buds.

I have used hydrocyanic acid on this pest, when on ferns, as strong as three ounces to 1,000 cubic feet of space, allowing it to act all night without injuring the thrips in the least. (We will say nothing about the condition of the plants.)

As far as tested, the best results from treatment of red spider have been obtained from the use of a soap solution made by dissolving one ounce of Ivory soap in one gallon of water, or in that proportion. All individuals struck with this solution were killed, and if the plants were not too heavily drenched, the bloom on the foliage was discolored but little. (Open flowers should be gathered before attempting to use the soap solution.) A home-made soap made of clean lard and the best potash lye would answer just as well as Ivory soap. Fish oil soaps will kill the red spider, but they have the disadvantage of discoloring the foliage, and in addition give the plants a bad odor.

The Ohio Agricultural Experiment Station has shown that good potash soaps are fungicides, preventing "Leaf Curl" of the peach. (1 Bulletin 103, p. 186; also Bulletin 104, p. 202.)

Another measure which is absolutely safe to use on the carnation when flowering, and just as destructive to the red spider as water, or salt and water, is the ammoniacal solution of copper carbonate called "Cu-pram." This is a valuable fungicide which does not soil the foliage in the least. By syringing the plants twice a week with this solution, the required amount of moisture to check the development of the red spider can be furnished without supplying a forcing bed for rust and the spot diseases. It is made as follows: To one volume of 26 degrees ammonia add seven volumes of water. If one quart of ammonia is used, suspend five ounces of copper carbonate in the mixture of water and ammonia; cover, and allow to stand over night. For use, take one quart of the clear solution and add four gallons of water.

Where the thrips has once gotten a foothold in the buds of the carnation, the only method of controlling him is to carefully gather all the buds which show his work, before they open, and destroy them. No old soiled flowers should be left in the benches.

In conclusion, I would recommend the following measures to prevent and control the three worst pests that trouble carnation growers: If possible, select land that has grown corn or potatoes one year after being in sod. Avoid having old hedges and rubbish patches on the margins of the carnation field. (These harbor red spider and greenfly.) Never plant carnations under or around trees. (The latter harbor red spider.) Do not grow cabbage or related plants by the side of the carnation. (These furnish abundant crops of thrips.) At time of transplanting use heroic measures. First dip the plants in a soap solution, being careful not to get the solution on the roots. This solution can be made as already recommended, from Ivory soap, or from Good's potash soap, Owen's U. S. Standard caustic potash soap, or even from a home-made fish-oil soap. Of the latter, use one gallon of soap to 32 gallons of water. The home-made fish-oil is made as follows:

Caustic potash 1 pound
Fish oil 3 pints
Soft water 2 gallons

Dissolve lye in the water; then add oil and stir. Boil from twenty minutes to one hour.

As soon as the plants are established in benches, syringe thoroughly with the Ivory soap solution, giving a second treatment ten days later.

The above treatment should free the plants of all three pests, but a later treatment may be needed for greenfly which have found their way into the house through the ventilators. If these are discovered while the plants are short and not flowering to any extent, fumigate with hydrocyanic acid gas, using one-half ounce of 98 per cent cyanide of potash, one ounce of sulphuric acid, and three ounces of water to every 1,200 cubic feet of space in the house. Allow gas to act all night. A week or ten days later repeat the fumigation. REMEMBER THAT THIS GAS IS ONE OF THE MOST DEADLY POISONS KNOWN; be sure the workmen realize this fact. After all the above precautions have been taken, do not store any plants under the benches.

The florist who becomes convinced that he must fight these three pests each fall from the start, will be the one who will have the best success.

Transient Pests.

The worst of these is the "Variegated cutworm" (Peridroma saucia), and the "Cabbage looper" (Plusia brassicae). The former, while small, is a climbing cutworm which feeds at night and hides in the loose soil during the day. This is one of the most common of the cutworms. It is found in nearly all countries, and usually occurs in forcing-houses more frequently than other cutworms. In color it is a sooty brown, with a yellow stripe mottled with red on each side of its body. The head is reddish yellow. The adult insect, or moth, is very indistinctly marked.

Many writers have assumed that this cutworm is carried into the house in the soil. The fact that they occur in forcing-houses more frequently than any other species of cutworms, combined with the fact that they are often found in considerable numbers in spots throughout a house, indicates that the eggs are deposited on the carnations by the parent moth, or "miller," after transplanting. The latter can easily fly into houses on cloudy days and early in the evening during the months of September and October. The young worms climb to the buds, eat holes through the calyx and then devour all the floral parts.

The caterpillar of the cabbage plant is a light green worm about one and one-half inches long, when full grown, which can always be recognized by its habit of looping the body when traveling. The moth, or miller, has mottled, dark brown head and wings. Two white spots on each forewing sometimes resembles the figure 8. The hind wings are slate color, varying to tawny, while the body is covered with gray and tawny red hairs. This pest, like the variegated cutworm, feeds usually at night, on the buds and in the same manner. During the day they attach themselves to a stem of the plant by means of their caudal legs and stand at the same angle as do the leaves. This habit requires sharp eyes to find them. They can be carried into the house on the plants, but usually the female moth finds her way into the house through open ventilators. They are on the wing all the fall, especially on cloudy days and late in the afternoon. Like the cutworm moth, they are able to lay two or three hundred eggs; hence one fertile moth can very thoroughly distribute eggs to all parts of the house.

The best means of combating either or both of the above pests is to hunt for the caterpillars at night with lantern, and hand-pick them. Although some have recommended the use of Paris green, it is impossible to get enough poison on the buds of the carnation to kill the worms. After the cutworms get too large to climb, a poisoned bait, made by mixing one part green arsenite with fifteen parts of middlings or dry bran, can be used to advantage. This should be distributed in small heaps around the plants where the cutworms are at work.

THE WHITE GRUB. As far as known, the white grub never occurs in the forcing-house, except as they are carried in with the soil. The only way to get rid of them is to dig them out.

THE ROSE-LEAF TYER (Cacoecia rosaceana), and the "Chrysanthemum Leaf Skeletonizer" (Phlyctaenia ferrugalis), sometimes occur on carnations where roses and chrysanthemums have been grown in the same house. These pests will attack the carnations after the other plants have been removed. When they are found working in a house, hand-picking must be resorted to.

A small green worm, probably a tertrid, which ties a number of leaves together with a web, is sometimes carried from the field into the house with plants. The adult of this worm has not been bred, hence its scientific name is not known, nor do we know what other plant it feeds upon in the field. Thus far it has been gotten rid of easily by hand-picking.

A fly, about one-half as large as the house fly, is frequently seen in carnation houses during the winter. This has been reported as feeding in the maggot stage on the roots of the carnation. I have seen flies very numerous in houses, but have been unable thus far to prove that they feed in the larval or maggot stage on the living roots of the plants. It seems more probable that they feed on the decaying roots only.

WHITE ANTS, OR TERMITES. (Termes flavipes.) This pest is apt to occur in old-style houses in which the woodwork has been allowed to become partially rotten, especially if worm-eaten locust posts are used to support the benches. White ants have the peculiar habit of keeping away from daylight. They always make covered runways, and usually find their way to the bench through a rotten or worm-eaten post. Houses that have brick or stone foundations and iron posts for the benches are not troubled with "White Ants," unless the latter are accidentally carried into the house in the soil, a thing that rarely happens. When once established in a house, the only method of getting rid of them is to throw out the soil and remove all rotten woodwork.

Creosotes and other wood preservers can be used on the posts and bottoms of the benches, but such substances should be used with care on the outsides of the benches. I have seen houses of chrysanthemums severely injured by fumes given off by wood preservers. Probably this would only occur where such treated wood is subjected to considerable heat from too close contact to pipes.

FULLER'S ROSE BEETLE. I think this insect has never been reported as feeding upon carnations. In October of 1899 I received specimens of this beetle from Little Falls, N. Y., accompanied with the statement that they were feeding on carnations. At first it appeared a difficult matter to account for their presence in the carnation house, and at that season of the year. Inquiry developed the fact that in 1897-98 the house had contained roses in solid beds. During the fall of 1898 the roses were taken out, six inches of the old dirt removed and replaced with new soil, after which carnations were planted in the beds. In 1899 benches were built over the old beds without removal of soil from latter.

When first noticed the beetles were always found feeding on the plants along the margin of the benches. Probably the beetles fed during the grub stage on the roots of the roses, this being their proper food plant. In 1899, when they issued as adult beetles, they found nothing but carnations to feed upon. From all reports they were satisfied with the change. It was found that the beetles fed principally at night and hid away under the foliage of the plants during the day. They were gotten rid of by hand-picking at night.

When the reading of the paper was concluded, Mr. Scott asked if the formula given for hydrocyanic acid gas (which was much weaker than another he had seen recommended) was just as effective when the gas was left in the greenhouse over night as the stronger gas was when left in for only a short time. Prof. Sirrine answered that it was. Mr. Scott was glad to know this, as it made the use of the gas easier. He had found it quite a task to open the ventilators from the outside so as to allow the gas to escape at the expiration of the 30 minutes usually allowed, and it would simplify matters materially when the gas could be allowed to gradually dissipate and enable the operator to open the ventilators from the inside in the morning. The professor thought this would be safe if the doors were first left open for a while before a workman entered, but took occasion to again warn his hearers that the gas was deadly and that no chances should be taken.

Referring to the effect of the gas upon carnation buds, Prof. Sirrine said buds that were in the "cup" stage were more apt to be affected than those that were further advanced.

In a discussion as to the use of tobacco in combating greenfly, "Aphis Punk" received some very effective advertising.

In our Baltimore notes will be found some mention of Mr. Robt. Halliday, the new president.

Wm. Weber is a son of Henry Weber, and a member of the firm of H. Weber & Sons.

Secretary Herr and Treasurer Dorner, who were re-elected, need no introduction.

The Proposed Joint Meeting.

In the discussion of the project to have the Rose and Carnation Societies meet at the same time and place, some serious objections were presented. It was accepted without question that the Rose society could not hold a satisfactory exhibition as early as February, as a good display of hybrids could not be made at that time, and the proposition to defer the meeting of the Carnation Society till March met with strong opposition.

The majority of the speakers thought that February was late enough; that growers who visited the convention for the purpose of inspecting the new varieties wanted to see them in mid-winter rather than later, and they wanted to make their decision as to varieties earlier than March.

The committee was continued and will confer with the officials of the Rose Society.

Sub-Irrigation.

Mr. Ward had not prepared any paper upon this subject and said that his experiments had not progressed far enough to enable him to come to any definite conclusion.

Time Limit for Staging Flowers.

A suggestion that the time limit for staging flowers entered for competition at the exhibition be strictly enforced brought out quite a discussion. The fact that exhibits were sometimes delayed in transit made it seem to work an occasional hardship to adhere too rigidly to the rule but it was pointed out that the majority were on time and that the misfortune of one should not be visited on all the others. And it was hinted that if things were continued wide open it was an encouragement to sharp exhibitors to purposely arrive late with their exhibits and thus bring freshly unpacked flowers in competition with those which had been exposed for several hours in an exhibition hall.

After much discussion and several amendments, it was decided to make 1 p. m. of the opening day the time limit for staging flowers for competition, and that the rule be then rigidly adhered to. Therefore, future exhibitors must have their flowers staged by 1 p. m. sharp, or their entries will be debarred from competition.

An exception to this rule was made in the case of seedlings exhibited for certificates only, and the judges are empowered to pass upon such whenever they arrive during the two days of the convention.

Action was also taken regarding entries of flowers for competition. It was finally determined that entries should reach the secretary by the Saturday preceding the exhibition. Entries may be made after that only by paying a fee of $1.00 each.

The Scale.

The proposition to revise the scale was finally abandoned, and the scale stands just the same as before.

But a committee was appointed to formulate rules for the guidance of the judges and to report at the next meeting.

This action was taken on a motion by Mr. Rudd, who said that a definite standard would not only assist the judges, but enlighten exhibitors as to the methods by which the judges arrived at their conclusions. He believed that such a standard must be based upon existing varieties and that it must change from year to year. His views are fully explained in the article on "Judging Carnations," in this issue.

Keeping Qualities.

The attempt to cover keeping qualities in the scale was given up, but all recognized the importance of the matter, and various plans to get accurate information regarding the keeping qualities of new varieties were proposed.

One was that standing committees be appointed in all the large cities, similar to those of the Chrysanthemum Society, that these committees act in harmony with the local clubs which hold exhibitions, and that flowers sent for the purpose be watched by the committee for a long enough period to determine their keeping qualities. Exhibits were to be sent to at least four of these local committees, all of whom would report to the secretary of the Carnation Society.

Another suggestion was that three local judges be appointed at each convention to give a full report to the secretary on the condition of all flowers at the end of the annual exhibition. In this connection it was noted by one speaker that there was often a choice of positions in the exhibition hall. He had seen flowers that were in a draught from a window go to sleep much more quickly than some of no greater substance that were not in this draught.

The matter seemed too complex for solution at one meeting, and the committee report was laid on the table for one year.

The Premium List.

The committee appointed to revise the premium list made very few changes. The Lawson gold medal and the silver medal will be offered again next year, and a bronze medal will also be offered, this for a dozen blooms of an undisseeded seedling. The sweepstakes competition will be discontinued. Mr. E. H. Michel will be requested to change the conditions under which his cup was offered and will be asked that the cup go to the exhibitor making the largest display at Baltimore.

The question as to what may be classed as an undisseeded variety seems to be still unsettled.

The Express Companies.

The express companies were somewhat vigorously handled and many grievances were related. It was suggested that a test case be made by some shipper who had suffered by the negligence or carelessness of the express companies and that the case be pushed by all the strength of the united membership unless the officials of the companies could be induced to promise redress without such action. A committee was appointed to take steps in the matter.

Notes.

The secretary was instructed to secure suitable clerical assistance during the time of the annual conventions and was authorized to expend the sum of $50 yearly for the purpose.

A hearty vote of thanks was extended to Prof. Sirrine for his interesting paper, which appears in this issue of The Review. During the reading of the paper photographs of the various insects and of buds and plants affected by certain insecticides were passed around. These, however, showed nothing especially new, though they were undoubtedly interesting.

Messrs. Wm. F. Lauch, B. L. Elliott and Jno. L. Wyland were present from Pittsburg, in addition to Mr. Burki.

Genevieve Lord must possess good keeping qualities. The vase of blooms was a striking feature at the banquet on Friday evening, and the flowers were still holding their own finely, though many others were already "dreaming of home and mother."

Other Exhibits.

Besides flowers entered in competition there was a magnificent display of the standard varieties and many seedlings.

Among the prominent exhibitors were:

F. Dorner & Sons Co., Lafayette, Ind., showing grand vases of Morning Glory and a collection of seedlings.

John H. Dunlop, Toronto, vases of Mrs. Bradt, White Cloud, Glacier and a sport of Bradt.

A Vase of The Marquis exhibited at Buffalo.

W. J. Palmer & Son, Buffalo, several fine vases of standard varieties.

Miller & Son, Bracondale, Toronto, Lady Van Horne and Lady Minto.

Chicago Carnation Co., Joliet, Ill., some splendid vases of Jubilee, Bradt, Mrs. Jas. Dean, Maceo and several promising seedlings.

E. G. Hill & Co., Richmond, Ind., 100 blooms each of J. Whitcomb Riley, Mary Hill, Olympia, Ethel Crocker and 50 fine flowers of Leslie Paul.

J. N. May, a vase of fine blooms of Olympia.

Peter Fisher, Ellis, Mass., a grand vase of the famous Mrs. Thos. W. Lawson.

Wietor Bros., Chicago, vase of a pink sport of Armazindy.

T. J. Totten, Saratoga Springs, N. Y., vase of Young America, a very deep pink.

R. Craig & Son, magnificent vases of Melba, America, Ethel Crocker, Gomez and Maceo.

H. Dale, Brampton, Ont., G. H. Crane and Cerise Queen.

Wm. Fendley, Brampton, Ont., three good displays of violets.

C. W. Ward exhibited 1,000 blooms, among them Maceo, Gomez, Bradt, White Cloud, Governor Roosevelt and many seedlings.

The judges made the following supplementary report:

"Your committee also examined Kift's patent adjustable flower vase and plant holder and find it an exceedingly useful device for the arrangement of cut flowers and potted plants. Also a rubber-capped flower tube for individual flowers, useful for keeping separate flowers in fresh condition when used decoratively."

"Also the Garland gutter, a great improvement for greenhouse construction."

Overheard Outside of the Meeting.

Any carnation with any calyx will burst. I had a crop of bursted flowers on Crane, but it was entirely due to an accidental lowering of the temperature of the house for a few days.

There is a large percentage of soda in carnations and this may be why we prefer nitrate of soda to sulphate of ammonia as a fertilizer.

The experimental work carried on by the professors in commercial greenhouses in charge of practical men is bringing some reliable and useful results. They are very different from the results of experiments conducted in small experiment station greenhouses run by men entirely unfamiliar with commercial methods and commercial conditions.

The coming into contact with the best men in the trade from all over the country, and the acquaintances thus made, are the chief value of the conventions.

The Banquet.

On Friday evening the flowers in the exhibition hall were used in the decoration of several lengthy dining tables and the visitors enjoyed a banquet tendered them by the Buffalo Club. It was a brilliant gathering, presided over by Wm. F. Kasting, while the toastmaster was no less a personage than William Scott.

The menu was all right and so was the menu card, a special design by Daniel B. Long, the cover having a spray of carnations and a buffalo embossed upon it, while the inside contained some French which was explained in English as "an attempt at hybridizing wit and common sense crossed with gastronomy." The many friends of Mr. Scott will no doubt be grieved to learn that he acted as a "Démonstrateur des Resultants." But whatever it was, he did it all right, and when introduced by Mr. Kasting he was received with three rousing cheers by the assemblage.

He welcomed the visitors in one of his inimitable speeches and expressed the hope that they would come again during the Pan-American Exposition next year. He was proud of Mr. Kasting, who had done so much to prepare for the entertainment of the guests, and added, "It will be a long time before he gets over this." He proposed a toast to the American Carnation Society and called upon President W. P. Craig to respond.

Mr. Craig thanked the Buffalonians for the efforts that had made the ninth annual meeting of the society so successful. He was much gratified at the progress shown and was sure all would enjoy Baltimore's brand of hospitality next year.

Mr. Wm. Weber responded for "Maryland, My Maryland." He predicted that the meeting in Baltimore in 1901 would be equal to any preceding one and promised every effort to insure its success.

Mr. J. N. May, responding for the S. A. F., said he questioned whether any other mother could point to so fine a looking and vigorous an offspring as the S. A. F. could in the Carnation Society. He noted that Thorpe's ideal had been nearly reached in "666."

Mr. E. G. Hill spoke for "America," and, while he was proud of being an American, he had a warm fraternal feeling for the brothers over the water, and this was second only to his ties at home. He hoped to see all at Indianapolis in 1902. He felt that exhibitors at the present meeting had not been treated fairly in that no one had been awarded 100 points. He told of an interesting hopeful at school who, when asked, "If your father were to give your mother $5, $20, and $10, what would she have?" answered, "She would have a fit."

Mr. C. W. Ward said that between dead cats, aphids punk and Wm. Scott he had had a remarkably clean time. He said "America is the light of progress of the world and has produced some extraordinary men. In that category must be included Governor Roosevelt, of New York. A man who was born with a golden spoon in his mouth, but who abandoned a life of luxury to take up the most strenuous sort of a career, is certainly no ordinary man. And a man who can name a new carnation after him without getting a badly swelled head is also no ordinary man." (Laughter and applause.)

He called for three cheers for the governor and they were given with a will.

Mr. W. N. Rudd looked very handsome when elevated on a chair and was received with various scriptural quotations. Referring to the entertainment feature of the conventions, he said Chicago thought it had fixed the scale so it alone could score a hundred, but there were some foxy people in Philadelphia and they had so maneuvered as to also score a full hundred. Buffalo now comes in with an ideal and fills out a century score.

He sympathized with Baltimore, who had such a fast pace set for her, but knew she would win out just the same. He emphasized the great value of the exhibitions to all the carnation growers in the country and was extremely sorry for those who were unable to come.

Readers will please refer to Buffalo notes for a report of the remainder of the addresses.

AN IMPRESSIONIST AT THE CONVENTION.

I went to the carnation show with my old friend Sam De Graw, who had never seen one before; and while Sam might not be able to write a thesis on parthenogenesis that would make the subject any more obscure than it now is, still he grows a few carnations himself, is of good, upright habit, and never bursts; and as he is a good observer and makes up his own opinions, I thought that some of his impressions of the show might be interesting to those of your readers who did not see the flowers, and possibly to some who did.

Sam says he had read about and been told about four-inch carnations so long that he would have faced six-inch blooms without flinching, and came prepared to protect himself with a pocket rule; but that the largest flower in the hall—No. 666—lacked a quarter of an inch of being four inches in diameter, and the next largest—Olympia—was half an inch shy; and a far greater number of the flowers on exhibition were below three inches than above.

Sam says that the point where the carnation of to-day is lacking most is in stem. The colors are fairly satisfactory, the flowers are large enough, and the hybridizers should direct their efforts to furnish stems for them that will stand upright under their heavy heads of bloom. Some of the kinds shown were very good in this respect, among which he includes Genevieve Lord, Elinora, and Mrs. Lippincott.

The color in many cases, while often odd and striking, is not always one that will be likely to please for a steady diet. The crimsons are too nearly black, the pinks are apt to have the fatal dash of purple, and the mottled, marbled, or shaded ones are often unpleasantly irregular and uncertain. One bloom will have an undue amount of the darker color, or will have it mostly on one side, while at the other the flower will be too light colored and washed. This is one of the worst faults of Dailedouze's latest wonder. We have good scarlets, good whites, good pinks, and good variegated kinds, but we still wait for an ideal crimson and a clear, profitable yellow.

While Sam did some measuring, he did not count the flowers; but there certainly were enough, and after due deliberation he concludes that the most valuable of the newer named kinds, as they appeared in their party dresses at the show, are The Marquis, Mrs. Lawson, Genevieve Lord, Mrs. Lippincott, Olympia, Enquirer and Gomez; and there are a few promising whites and scarlets, some of the best of which have not yet been christened.

Sam says that the least desirable shape for a vase to show carnations in is the rosebowl style, and the best is the straight-sided cylinder, of just sufficient diameter to admit the stems.

All the exhibits in each class should be staged together and allowed to remain so during the show, giving visitors an opportunity to compare them.

Sam says that he has taken occasion more than once to condemn the scoring or scaling plan of judging, and wishes to do so again. If Enquirer was entitled to 100 points at Chicago, there were some kinds shown at Buffalo that should have 115, and when you get to adding ledger lines above the staff and guessing how many points better than perfection any kind is, you will perhaps begin to realize the absurdity of the whole business. The correct way is to judge by comparison, and the men who assume to apply a scale of points are only doing this and calling it scoring.

If six vases of fifty blooms are competing for a prize, any man fit to judge can readily tell which is the best—and what more is needed? The society might properly insist that its judges must see that prize-winners possess certain qualities, as, for instance, strength of stem, but a capable judge will not need such instruction.

As he has said before, good judging can only be done by good judges, and any man who does not confine himself to the specimens he judges, but tries to give prizes to as many competitors as possible, is not fit to judge.

Sam looked into the convention room, but so many were smoking during the proceedings that he thought it was a smoker, and, not wanting to fumigate any more than necessary, he came away; but he always was queer.

Sam says that the meeting with old acquaintances and the forming new ones gave him as much pleasure as the chance to study the flowers, but that Dailedouze, and some others, should get their names cut, or furnish their friends with a key to their pronunciation.

JUDGING CARNATIONS.

The controversy over the methods of judging carnations goes bravely on. Some condemn the method of judging by a scale of points, others the way of applying the scale. Some hold that the awarding of 100 points implies perfection, and others that it does not necessarily mean this.

What is a scale? It is merely a measure, just as a foot-rule or a yard-stick is a measure; and the differences in results are largely due to the fact that we have not yet all agreed as to the length of an inch, or other division of the measure. In other words, we haven't any fixed point to work from. The proposition to agree upon an ideal and measure down from it has several fatal drawbacks. Who can say what the future may hold? Our ideals have changed radically during the last decade, and it must be a bold man who will fix absolutely the limit which we may be expected to reach.

Unquestionably the safer way will be to select our ideal, or standard from which to measure, from existing forms. We can do as a painter does when he portrays an ideal female figure. He takes a head from one model, an arm from another, a hand from a third, a foot from a fourth, a neck from a fifth (and sometimes more than twenty models are used), and so on. No figure in nature is absolutely perfect, but perfect details are comparatively common. By putting these perfect details together, the artist creates a perfect figure, according to his conception of what perfection is. Two artists will rarely agree with exactitude, but if they are worthy the name they will not be so very far apart.

In this way we can construct an ideal that is exact and definite and therefore easy to use as a point to measure from, and one, by the way, that will not be at all too easy to reach. It will be adaptable to all conditions and will keep step with the march of progress.

We now have a carnation that is full four inches in diameter. It is not a dream—it is a reality. Let any new carnation of equal size receive the full number of points for size. When we get a five-inch bloom (if we do), that will be the size required to win the full number of points. This matter seems easily settled.

As to calyx, Mr. Dorner believes the Albertini type to be nearest to perfection. As Albertini is now not widely grown, it may be well to mention that the calyx of Bradt is somewhat similar.

As to stem, both Mr. Dorner and Mr. Rudd agree that the stem of either Lawson or Jubilee is the best.

In regard to form, there is some opportunity for argument, as tastes may differ. The two gentlemen above quoted thought that the form of the new crimson sort, Gov. Roosevelt, was very close to the ideal. Cerise Queen has a somewhat similar form, though not so good as Roosevelt. Mr. Rudd favors those flowers in which the petals are nearly all at right angles with the calyx and the flower built high enough so that a side view shows almost a half circle over the top. Flowers with petals such as above described are favored because they give as fine an effect with fewer petals, and the fewer petals there are the less the strain on the plant and the more profitable the variety, other things being equal. Olympia has this style of petals, but the flower is too flat to fully meet his ideal of form. He finds that petals with smooth edges are more apt to cup than those that are fringed and likes to have them notched to some extent, but not too much.

In fragrance, Mr. Dorner thinks that equal or superior to that of Daybreak. The size must be four inches or more in diameter. Calyx of Albertini type. Stem equal to that of Jubilee. Substance equal to that of Daybreak. Form similar to that of Roosevelt or Cerise Queen. Fragrance equal to that of Albertini.

At Chicago, Enquirer scored 100 points; at Buffalo, 88 points. But presuming that both sets of judges were working by the above described standard, part of the difference would be explained by the fact that the Chicago judges had not seen "666," while at Buffalo it filled the eyes of everyone, and the judges couldn't possibly give Enquirer the full number of points on size with that immense triple six in the hall. At Chicago, Enquirer was as large as anything else in the the hotel, nor the business sessions in the ladies' parlor. The former was in a large hall adjoining the hotel, and the business sessions in the colonial parlors. But how near it all came to a calamity! "The best laid schemes of mice and men" were nearly ruined this time, and if that basement fire had progressed a little farther, where would we have been at?

As one who has been intimately connected with the last four or five exhibitions, I can say that this one, both in quantity and quality of flowers, surpassed them all, and what was quite as gratifying, especially to the local men, was the large attendance from all parts of the country. The worthy mayor of Buffalo is not famous as an orator, but he did well, and so did Mr. May in his graceful reply and striking illustration of the evolution of the carnation.

Those talks on planting and ventilation are getting down to the very practical side of the business, and punk and dead cats are all a part of the business. Dull, indeed, is the man who is not benefited by the exhibition and the remarks of the men assembled. It is not alone at the business meetings that the good things are said, but in small detached groups many weighty matters were doubtless discussed.

We are much pleased that so many of our good people saw the wonderful flowers. If the show had been on the ground floor we should have been overdone with patrons. The flowers were a revelation to thousands. C. F. Christensen nodding to Charles Weathered, or George Fancourt smiling down at Bobby Bard is an ordinary sight; but a Marquis beaming at Mrs. Lawson, or Adonis blushing scarlet at Genevieve Lord, was never before witnessed by the oldest inhabitant.

Those most interested of the local men had some apprehensions about the entertainment till we all sat down, and from that moment there was none. The free and easy air which we so desired pervaded all, and it was a go. Mr. Long's artistic souvenir menu card was much admired and every member pocketed the same.

As your correspondent left before the program was well started, I will endeavor to give you a brief account of the "exercises." Under the head of coffee and cigars President Kasting, of the local club, called for order, and expressed himself as delighted "to see you all," and introduced one of the local members, W. Scott by name, as toastmaster. This man Scott is gifted with but a small allowance of eloquence, but makes it up with a loud voice, and, being quite bald, with a bushy mustache, he commands obedience and attention far more than his true meek and retiring nature would supposedly warrant. He asks for mirth between acts, but polite attention to the speakers and soloists, and with a few later admonitions he was respectfully obeyed. Speakers were told that they were not expected to adhere to their toasts, and many of them got as far away from it as they could.

Albertini can safely be taken as the measure of progress to date.

In color we meet trouble. Each color should really be classed by itself. In light pink, Daybreak at its best might be taken as a standard. In dark pink, Cerise Queen. In white, Flora Hill. In scarlet, Jubilee at its best. In crimson, Maceo. Color might with advantage be further subdivided.

In substance there should also be classes. The yellows are all possessed of a large degree of substance. Pingree and Nugget could be taken as the standard in yellows. In whites, Mary Wood, or Flora Hill at its best. In pinks, Daybreak.

But whatever standard or standards we adopt, discriminating, well informed and careful judges must be employed. In this, as in everything else, experience counts heavily. The personal equation can never be eliminated, though the adoption of a universal standard will undoubtedly help to secure more uniformity in the work.

Let us now attempt to form an idea of an ideal light pink carnation by this standard. The color must be show, and there were some most excellent blooms there, too.

However, let us all adopt some definite standard to judge by, and we believe nothing better can be devised than one based upon the principle mentioned above.

BUFFALO.

The trade papers have given a full account of the carnation convention, even to the potpourri of Friday evening, and perhaps we cannot add much of interest. It seemed to us that it only ended last night, for stragglers were slow to leave. John Evans, of ventilator fame, was the last to leave for his native Indiana drifts.

It is with nothing but unqualified pleasure that the local men look back at the carnation convention and all its doings. We are especially pleased that it was pronounced a success, because we took the convention away from Baltimore, and if Buffalo had not taken care of the exhibit we should have richly deserved censure.

Just let me say here that the exhibition was not held in a large room of

Mr. Wm. Craig spoke most sensibly and feelingly of the good work of the society, and as the toastmaster took the liberty of remarking, when this young man has the blessings of experience he will be a rival to his illustrious father in oratory, and that is saying an awful lot, for Mr. Robert Craig is undoubtedly the orator in every sense of the word of the horticultural world of North America.

Mr. Wm. Weber, of Maryland, promised a hearty welcome for the society at Baltimore. Mr. Weber is too well known and such a sterling man that no words of mine can add luster to his good name.

John May responded for the S. A. F. and found plenty to say for our parent, and, as usual, said it well.

Mr. E. G. Hill spoke of America and particularly that part that produces Hoosiers. E. G. seemed in unusually good spirits and kept all laughing. The portly duchess had just previously sung; that accounted for his lightness of spirits.

C. W. Ward was to answer to "Greenhouse Odors," but wandered off into the Empire State and spoke of Governor Roosevelt and things in general. He, like the others, was at his very best key.

The toast assigned to Mr. Rudd failed to reach his ears, and after ten minutes of very lively talk he told the chairman to call his speech "Ventilation or Wind."

Our Mr. C. Keitsch spoke ably of exhibition management. Mr. Gamage, of London, Ont., responded finely and eloquently for our neighbors across the Niagara. Then Mr. Marquisee, who is quite a gifted talker, responded to "The Mascot." He knows that the Marquis is a mascot and told several capital stories.

The "grand Lawson medal and the Chicago Carnation Co. cup were presented to Mr. Dailledouze, who, among other things, said he intended to do it. Mr. Witterstaetter said he was no hog if he had taken two medals, and the applause that the presentation brought out shows how popular Richard is.

George E. Fancourt announced that he had some highly interesting telegrams to read, which he did in effective style. They were all from most prominent people and all in sympathy with the carnation. Joseph Chamberlain stated his intention to give up orchids and go into carnations. Lord Roberts meant to encourage their cultivation in South Africa. Oom Paul was fascinated with carnations, but could not embark in their cultivation till his place of residence was fixed permanently; and several others quite as good.

The temperature of Mr. Miller, of Toronto, has risen several degrees by the influence of what occurred on the stage. We thought he was ready for a speech, and to miss him would have been a great misfortune. The sentiments he expressed in regard to our country and his were truly eloquent and rendered in his polished Oxfordian diction; he's a little dandy and everybody said so.

Now, you must not think that all this oratory was kept up in a steady stream. There was any amount of local talent, most of it very good. There was a song or sketch between every speech and more often, two.

We must not forget to mention Mr. Dumont, the commission man, of Philadelphia, and sparring partner of Billy Craig. He is a singer worth listening to.

There were no accidents and few regrets; among the latter was that all could not see it out. Another was that Robert Craig did not feel well and had to decline giving us his welcome presence. We regret very much that our worthy W. J. Palmer, Sr., also was not with us.

We have no regrets for those young society florists who absented themselves. They ought to know better. For the half dozen florists who stayed away for no possible excuse except that it would be late, possibly, or Sarah thought I better not, we have only pity. We regret that after the first appearance of Lady Fitzwilliam, the Italian countess, Billy Kasting and Phil Scott couldn't keep their seats for thirty seconds at a time. It is also lamentable that elderly men like Dillon of Bloomsburg, Mansfield of Lockport, and Miller and Dunlop, of Toronto, must always think it proper to take seats very near the footlights when petticoats occupied the stage.

Now, reader, don't think from what I have said that there was anything the least improper during all that evening, for there was not. It was four or five hours of good fun and no dull moments, and if our friends went away with pleasant memories, we are more than delighted.

W. S.

ST. LOUIS.

The Market.

St. Valentine's day was exceptionally good. Most of the florists report good trade and the commission men say the same. The only drawback was that stock of all kinds was very scarce and good choice stock was away up in price. Shipping trade was good, with plenty of orders turned down for want of flowers. Never before has stock been so scarce and prices so high at this season, and certainly the grower will have nothing to complain of as to price.

The weather has been very cold the past week and Saturday was our coldest day of the year. The automatic register at Shaw's Garden showed 3 degrees below. Quite a lot of flowers came in to the commission houses frozen. Large quantities of violets are coming up from the South, and by next week, should we have bright weather, the violet market will go busted and the retailer will be able to buy them at about $3 per 1,000.

The West End florists report that this week quite a lot of weddings and social events will take place, owing to the approach of lent, which begins March 1; after that business will be rather dull with them until Easter.

Prices.

Prices on choice roses the past week were: American Beauties, from $3 to $6 per dozen and very scarce at that; a few short-stemmed ones could be had at $2, but only the first-class ones have any call. Other roses have improved in quality. Brides and Maids sell from $5 to $12; Woottons and Perles, $4 and $6; Meteors are much better in color and choice blooms find ready sale from $5 to $12. Carnations are coming in better than ever, but only in small quantities. The fancies and all the better grades of the commons are finding a ready market. There has been no overstock of this flower for some time and the prices have held up better than ever before. Whites have the call and Daybreak and Scott are decidedly the best. Henry Aue, at Lindenwood, is sending in some fine Eldorados. The fancy grades bring as high as $4 per 100, but the bulk is sold at from $2 to $3. As stock is very scarce, any color sells, and none are left after the morning's sales are over. Bulb stock is not over-plentiful, as it usually is at this time of the year, and Romans, paper whites, Dutch hyacinths, valley, daffodils and tulips have a good demand and bring from $3 to $5 per 100; Harrisii are in good demand and bring $12.50; callas, $10 and $12.50; southern violets sell for 10 cents per 100, home grown for 25 cents; Californias are coming in fine and are plentiful at 40 cents per 100, doubles at the same price. Plenty of smilax to be had at $12.50, but the demand the past week was slow.

The weather has opened up this week bright and warm, and if it keeps up stock of all kinds will be more plentiful by the end of the present week. The early spring glut is bound to come, and by the end of the month we will see it at its height. A glut is a bad thing in one sense of the word: flowers of all kinds are bought at your own price and some of the large stores down town put signs in their windows and sell flowers at starvation prices. This cannot be said of the West End florists. They keep up the price, glut or no glut. This could be done down town, too, and they could sell just as many flowers at the regular price as the flower-buying public will buy (if they really want them) at the regular price, as they know nothing of a glut and should not know.

Notes.

Visitors in town this week were: A. L. Vaughan, the popular western representative (with headquarters in Chicago) of Hagemann & Meyer, New York. Mr. Vaughan reports that never has he sold so many bulbs as this year. Mr. Vaughan has a good word for the Review. It is read by all and is considered the best trade paper published. W. Rolker, of New York, was also a visitor.

New Pink Carnation Enquirer.

The annual rose meeting is to be held in conjunction with the regular meeting of the club on March 8. The trustees say that an essay on rose growing will be read by a prominent member of the club. A few of our local growers will compete for the prize of $5 for the best fifty roses, one or more varieties, American Beauties excluded. Return of tickets for the euchre must be made at this meeting without fail.

Bowling.

The Junior Florists' Bowling Club is still rolling every Tuesday night and is improving each week. The election of officers last week was as follows: James Arado, president; George Augermuller, secretary, and William Holtz, treasurer. The boys are thinking of rolling another match game with the older club.

The Bowling Club had a pleasant time Monday night and rolled four games. Seven members were present, also our old friend A. L. Vaughan, of Chicago, who rolled five games, making an average of 157. The scores were as follows:

NEW YORK.

An average of twelve inches of snow fell in New York City, Feb. 17th, so we are at present wrapped in the mantle of winter. As may be expected, business in general got a solar plexus from which it is slowly recovering. Next week Lent comes to stay with us for quite a while, and when it goes away the bright days will follow.

Easter stock is a cause of anxiety to many minds; let us hope calculations both as to time and returns will come out satisfactorily.

Stragglers from Buffalo are loud in praise of all that transpired in connection with the carnation. It must have been a good show.

We hear rumors of several important changes among the seedsmen, but we'll leave it alone till the weather clears for reasons.

Mr. Editor, we often feel how good it is to be a free-lance; entangling alliances are bad for pens; we pity the poor devils with mortgaged hearts and souls, especially when they are supposed to represent the florists' trade papers.

Thomas Young, Jr., has leased the fine new store adjoining his present one; they will be connected on the inside. This makes Mr. Young's store the largest and handsomest wholesale florist's establishment in New York City. The facilities for handling and shipping of flowers are both extensive and up-to-date, and the best of stock can be seen at 41-43 West 28th St.

The semi-annual meeting of the New York Florists' Bowling Club will be held at the alleys, 57th St. and 6th Ave., at 8:30 p. m., Monday, Feb. 26th. The officers of the club particularly request the attendance of members, and those wishing to be, as business of the utmost importance will be considered.

The general committees in connection with S. A. F. Convention will meet that evening in the Florists' Club's rooms, at 7:30, but the sporting fraternity wish it understood that all are expected on the alleys later in the evening. Scores rolled last night were:

Burns	152	140	137

CHICAGO.

The Market.

The supply of roses has somewhat improved, but demand for first-class stock is good and prices on same have held up very well. Good teas bring $6.00 to $8.00, and some sales of extras are made at $10.00. Rates are a trifle easier than before on lower grades. Beauties are also showing up more freely, and the extra long bring $5.00 to $6.00 a dozen.

In carnations, fancies bring $3.00 to $4.00, and occasionally $5.00; ordinaries go at $1.50 to $2.00. Good carnations have been in brisk demand all winter, except for about ten days after the holidays, and though the supply is increasing, prices hold up well. Those that have suffered at times have been the poorer grades. At date "Punk" carnations are plenty and sell at 80 cents to $1.00 a hundred.

No. 1 violets now average 60 cents to $1.00 a hundred, and poorer ones go at most any old price. We hear of lots being cleared out at as low as 4 cents a bunch. Bright, cold weather always chills the violet market. The bright sun brings out the supply and the cold weather checks sales, as the great bulk of the flowers are bought to wear on the street.

An accumulation of miscellaneous bulb stuff was cleaned up Monday, but the supply is coming faster all the time, and there are tulips "to burn."

The coming Mardi Gras festivities in New Orleans will undoubtedly make heavy demands upon this market, but we believe there will be little difficulty in meeting the most of the calls.

Various Items.

There was no quorum at the last meeting of the Florists' Club, no doubt due to the absence from the city of President Hartshorne and other members.

Albert Fuchs has been sued for breach of promise and the lady places the damages at $15,000.

The store of Robert Schenck, on Thirty-first street, has been closed.

Bassett & Washburn have a plant of Mrs. Bradt carnation that is bearing three colors of bloom. In addition to the type, one bloom is pure white and another is pure red.

The bowlers seem to have weakened in the struggle for league honors.

The pilgrims returning from Buffalo say the carnation exhibition was a wonder.

BOSTON.

The Market.

Fairly good demand and not quite goods enough to meet it tells the whole story for the past seven days. Small roses for funeral work particularly sought, and red roses, reported plentiful and lower last week, have got over that condition, and prices on them have risen to meet the occasion; $8 now for best Beauties and about $3 for best pink and white. The first arrival of Jack roses was noticed on Friday, the 16th. Pinks rose a point or two, so that Scott sold for 2½ cents and white at 2½ and 3 cents. Bulb goods are thinking of demanding an increase, but no definite move yet.

Notes.

Geo. A. Black, of Brighton, has been suffering with an attack of jaundice. Is out now, but has an extremely jealous look.

W. H. Elliott underwent an operation at the hospital, on Tuesday of last week, for appendicitis, and is progressing in good shape.

Monday morning. There is an increase of supply of cut blooms today and buyers have taken note of it.

BALTIMORE.

An Associated Press dispatch brings us information that Robert Halliday, "of Iowa," has been elected president of the American Carnation Society. Not much! We know better than that here. There is only one Robert Halliday, who cannot be concealed by any such deceptive terms, and he is of Maryland, not of Iowa, vintage. Whoever wants to know what manner of man he is—and the grower of every house of carnations from Hudson Bay to Key West, and from Newfoundland to Alaska ought to know it and him—let them read his description by your astute correspondent, William Scott, who described him thus in the Review of November 23, 1899: "Now, I don't want to lay on taffy, and am not going to do it, when I say that of all good-hearted, open-handed, royally hospitable young men I ever met, Mr. Bob Halliday takes the bakery, and its en-

That is a true bill, with naught set down in malice and naught set up by favor.

Halliday is modest as a girl, handsome as a picture, knowing as a coon, and just as good as he is modest and handsome and knowing all the way from the sole of his feet up through his six feet four of active, well proportioned manhood to the crown of his shapely, well poised, well filled head.

Most of his merits and virtues come to him by proud descent and honest inheritance; the others he has seized "first chance" as he passed through life.

Our whole gardening community is complimented by his selection, and, of course, honored by the choice of Baltimore as the place of meeting for the association next year.

AMERICAN ROSE SOCIETY.

Editor Florists' Review: Having received many inquiries from your subscribers as to dues, etc., of the American Rose Society, brought forth by my appeal to growers of roses, it would confer a favor upon me and, I think, do the cause much good if you would publish the following information:

The dues in the society are: For life membership, $50.00, in one payment; for active membership, $3.00 a year; for associate membership, $1.00 a year.

All that is necessary to become a member is to remit dues to Jno. N. May, treasurer, Summit, N. J., or to Leonard Barron, secretary, 136 Liberty street, New York. The latter will be only too glad to send a copy of the constitution and by-laws to anyone asking for same.

BENJAMIN DORRANCE,
President American Rose Society.

GREENHOUSE CONSTRUCTION.

Few florists nowadays depend upon their local mill for greenhouse material. The specialist in this line, with his special machinery and experience in handling such work, can always give better satisfaction, and at the same time as reasonable rates.

A Chicago concern that has come rapidly to the front in the manufacturing of greenhouse material is the John C. Moninger Co. During the past season this firm furnished material for 47,178 lineal feet of greenhouses. On these houses were used 845,447 sq. ft. of lapped glass, and 124,126 sq. ft. of butted glass. They were supplied with 32,986 lineal feet of top ventilation and 14,192 lineal feet of bottom or side ventilation. Of these houses, 40 per cent had bars fitted for 16-inch glass.

PHILADELPHIA.

The Market.

It has been some time since we have been able to report the demand as exceeding the supply. Such has been the case the past week, particularly so with roses and red and pink carnations. As for the other colors, there seemed to be enough to go around. Violets are not as plentiful as they might be.

Prices.

Beauties, $1 to $7.20 per doz.; Brides and Maids, $4 to $15; Kaiserins, Golden Gate, $4 to $12; Meteors, Gontiers, Morgans, $4 to $10; Perles, $4 to $8; carnations, ordinary $1.50 to $2.50 per 100, fancy $2.50 to $5; cattleya, $50 to $60; cypripediums, $15; valley, narcissus, sweet peas, mignonette, $3 to $4; tulips, $4; violets, single 40 to 50 cents, double 50 cents to $1; hyacinths, $2 to $4; callas, $10 to $15; smilax, $15; asparagus, $50; adiantums, $1.

Notes.

Most of the retail stores report doing a nice business. Dinners and social events have been quite numerous, using a large quantity of choice flowers.

Pennock Bros. arranged some fancy baskets of flowers, which were inserted in damp moss for Valentine's day. They were fine and sold on sight at a good profit and were quite a card for the firm.

Julius Wolff, Jr., 1617 North Nineteenth street, has been very busy the past week with a number of exceptionally large decorations.

J. J. Habermehl's Sons, Twenty-second and Diamond, report having their share of the decorating the past week.

Among recent visitors we noticed E. G. Hill, of Richmond, Ind. R.

DENVER, COLO.

SAN FRANCISCO.

The Market.

Trade this week has been very good and St. Valentine's day the best since Christmas. Many florists put in a large stock of cut flowers and sold out clean. American Beauties are very scarce and very poor in quality; however, the retailers are glad to get anything in the name of Beauties. Brunners are also very scarce and short stemmed. Violets are fair in quality and plentiful. Fruit blossoms are in good demand for decorations.

Prices.

American Beauties, $3 to $5; Brides and Maids, 50 cents to $1.25; Siebrechts, 50 cents to $1; Meteors, 35 cents to $1.25; Brunners, 12½ to 15 cents per dozen; carnations, Hobarts $1, Crocker and Schwerins 50 cents, fancy mixed 35 to 50 cents, Scotts 25 cents, Portias 20 cents per dozen; Harrisii, $2.50 to $3.50; freesias, 3 dozen for 50 cents; paper whites, 75 cents per 100; Dutch hyacinths, 50 cents per dozen; daffodils, $1.25 per 100; violets, Princess of Wales 50 cents to $1, California 40 to 50 cents per dozen bunches.

Notes.

The fakir's license has been increased from $10 per quarter to $20, which makes it double, and will no doubt help to thin out the ranks of the above gentry. Our florists ought to be thankful to Mr. Shannahan for his efforts in having the petition passed successfully, as the bulk of the work was placed on his shoulders.

Golden Gate Park is looking very fine at present. Our early rains have been a great benefit to the park and a walk or drive at any time these mornings is a pleasure. A few beds of Dutch hyacinths and daffodils are in full bloom, and in some sheltered nooks groups of hydrangeas are a mass of bloom.

George M. Miller will accept a position in the Golden Gate park. Mr. Miller is now disposing of his nursery stock and will retire from the business after fifty years as a commercial florist. Rheumatism and deafness have troubled him lately. Although Mr. Miller is very deaf, 'tis claimed he can hear as good as anybody when some one says, "Miller, have a drink."

Fruit trees have been in great demand this year. Orders coming in from all over the state. Many large orchards of prunes are being planted, and prune stock is getting to be very scarce; also apples; some varieties cannot be had at all.

At Fernwood, Dutch hyacinths are in full bloom, and many fine spikes of named varieties are simply grand. The orchids, phalaenopsis, laelias and catleyas are still a show in themselves.

GENEVIEVE LORD. The Peer of Light Pinks.

(Stock for delivery prior to March 20, all sold.)

The people know a good thing when they see it. If you haven't seen it ask someone who has concerning its appearance. It has proven itself the most popular selling carnation we have ever grown, and as it combines quantity with quality it is no surprise to know it is the most profitable we have ever grown.

Some of its Features: The finest stem of any carnation. The color is just right, the ladies go wild over it. It is large, grades easily as a fancy. Odor is very sweet. Form beautiful, calyx perfect. It is a perfect non-bursting carnation. Every grower will appreciate this. If you don't grow Genevieve Lord next winter your list will not be complete. Remember, stock is all sold until March 20. PRICE: $2.00 per doz., $10.00 per 100, $75.00 per 1000.

Catalogue ready now containing full description of the above as well as the other big new ones and standard sorts. A postal card will bring it. Also complete list of new and standard Chrysanthemums.

Ethel Crocker. Absolutely the Best Pink Carnation ever offered the trade.

A fact fully borne out by its record, being equally good with Craig, Hill and myself (an assurance that it is not a success in one soil and a failure in another.) By its having been shown at the flower shows and clubs since early in September (an assurance that it is not a good late carnation but an all season variety.)

In color, size, fragrance and stem it is just what the "storemen" want. In habit, constitution and freedom of bloom it is just what the grower wants. It produces more flowers to the square foot than any other known variety, and is never out of crop from September to July.

With 18,000 stock plants to work from there is no danger of it being overpropagated, and all orders entrusted to me will be filled with cuttings selected from the plants and also in filling the order, by myself, thus doubly assuring good stock. Honest sample blooms furnished prepaid at $1.00 per dozen, amount deducted from all orders for 100 or over. Up to date every sample excepting one out of several hundred sent has brought an order.

Price per 100, $10.00; per 25, $2.50. Per 1000, $75.00; per 250, $18.75. HERR'S PANSIES, good little plants at 75c per 100; $4.00 per 1000.

A VISIT TO SOME OF OUR CAR-NATIONISTS.

Messrs. Jacob Schulz, C. H. Kunzman and J. Coenen made a short visit to Cincinnati, Richmond and Lafayette. At Cincinnati they visited Mr. R. Witterstaetter's place to get a look at his new carnations and they were well worth going to see for such blooms we have not seen before. His Enquirer is above all description; his new scarlet Adonis must be seen or you could not believe such blooms possible; No. 550 A, a large, fine, pure white, is extra good, as also his No. 518 B, a pink cerise; Estelle, a scarlet of a very good color and size. This last one is being sent out this year and we all bought it. The other will not be sent out for one or two years.

At Mr. E. G. Hill's we saw his Mary Hill, a very good pink, good flower and a good bloomer. His Mary Wheeler, a Daybreak pink, but large blooms and better stem. At Mr. F. Dorner's we saw some of the best seedlings ever grown; his No. 2, a very large white, penciled with pink, every petal fringed, penciled and shaped like a feather. Mr. Dorner called it his cream of seedlings, we called it his queen. His No. 65, a scarlet, is another very large bloom with stiff stem. Mr. Dorner has two large houses, 20x125, full of seedlings of '97, '98, '99. A description of them is impossible; they must be seen. The only regret is that we had not more time to stay and admire these beautiful gems of his skill.

We wish Mr. Dorner may live long to enjoy their presence. KY.

THE RETAIL FLORIST

Keeping Qualities of Carnations.

At the annual meeting of the American Carnation Society in Buffalo there was quite an interesting discussion on the keeping qualities of carnations. This is a serious matter and deserves the greatest consideration, not alone from that society, but from every one engaged in the florist's business.

It would appear from the reports of the Buffalo meeting that the matter was too deep a problem to be settled even by the experts present. The arguments were good, but it seems to us that an exchange of actual experiences would do much to dispel the atmosphere of the theoretical ghosts some of our scientific growers delight in pointing out. The carnation as a cut flower is far from being understood, even by those who are making a living from handling it. When we consider them in the many different cycles the most of them pass through, growing in the greenhouses, awaiting augmentation and shipment in the grower's ill-constructed shed or cellar, then the wholesaler's ice box, the retailer's store, and the overheated rooms of the wealthy, each element opposing the requirement or laws of the other, we will find there is much to solve. Yet we will see that the flowers themselves are the best indication of what is good and bad for them; in this light, too, they furnish unchangeable finger-posts on the road to success.

It is quite true that much of the weakness in the keeping qualities of varieties of carnations is attributable to various conditions, such as overheated cultivation, system of gathering, the place they are kept in, and the manner of shipping, all of which can be rectified by intelligent usages; but it must not be overlooked that there is also a varietal weakness. Your collection of carnations grown and handled in exactly similar modes will illustrate this. Nor is it safe to be guided by substance. Our experience has been that many of the apparently delicate fimbriated kinds were the best keepers, and this point has often made us imagine that fimbriation, though a detriment to the classic beauty of the ideal carnation of today, and particularly the future, yet has some value inasmuch as it appears to be a part of a sustaining quality.

From practical demonstrations, which we have recently had the pleasure of seeing, we are inclined to believe that the carnation house of the future will not only do away with much of the troubles we encounter now but will be the greatest factor in the revolutionizing of that flower. Growers are inclined at present to look with disfavor on the high-roofed and roomy house, but we find that flowers grown cool in a pure atmosphere possess the greatest lasting qualities, and may not this determine the architecture of the future? Carnations require not only ventilation, but a large amount of continuous pure air and abundant light.

Whilst a clean cut stem is desirous and conducive to retention of beauty because it is quicker in absorbing liquid, still we consider this of less importance than clean jars and fresh water. Many growers store their carnations and roses in the one cellar, and it is often too moist. Carnation flowers should never be wet, and should not be used until the stems are first well immersed in water. A good, cool, dry cellar, free from draughts and rats, is the best place in which you can keep them.

One of the great troubles retailers have to contend with, particularly with flowers from a distance, is that they are ignorantly packed. Many wholesalers shove every kind of flowers into an ill-smelling newspaper-lined soap or shoe or pork box; heavy bulb stock is put on top of carnations, or they are enveloped in damp tissue paper, and though the flowers may not show their exhausted or bruised condition when you receive them, they generally do so when you most want them not to. To change these conditions, as well as to get a more general knowledge of the flower itself, is not only desirous but absolutely necessary to the future of the carnation as we all wish to see it.

We must recognize and remember this one fact, that the popularity of the carnation is not due to its beauty or fragrance so much as it is to the, in many cases imaginary, lasting qualities. Most of your customers buy them because they are cheaper and keep longer, and the vital branch of knowledge you desire is to find out the varieties that will keep best in your store; this should interest the grower even more than you. Wouldn't practical demonstrations on gathering, bunching, vaseing and packing the different flowers be of more use than deep paper studies at these annual meetings? Many might be induced to attend if they had to in order to see things. It is not so with papers; the letter carrier brings you those.

There is considerable thought being given to the question, "Will striped carnations remain much longer in popularity?" No one can tell, because it depends more on the size of the flower. This can be said: the uses of striped flowers will always be more or less circumscribed because their effect from a decorative point of view will never be as artistic as the self colors. The decorations of the future will demand much more care in color contrasts and usages than they do now. You will perhaps notice that we are continually passing from one era of fad to another, not always advancing, but often going backwards and forwards.

The textile designers today can learn much from those who lived in the seventh century, and whilst the florist may never look back on one or two lines, yet the architects and colorists who do have an influence on our art which we cannot ignore. Striped carnations became fashionable more because of the silks manufactured in Lyons than from any other cause, and it is their size rather than color which does and will help them to retain their place in popular favor. It must not be thought we are always led by the fads or creations of other arts. No, no; the florist does and is still capable of originating fashions, but there are strict laws defining beauty, and there must be a unity among the elements from which that beauty is created.

Many combinations of colors in flowers when arranged in quantity and under artificial light produce an effect that is merely an illusion; those which are really beautiful under all conditions are of the greatest value. Most of the softest or undecided tones are usually and erroneously styled aesthetic; that quality can be found in the majority of colors.

Plants, Etc.

We would like to have a long chat with the grower who retails most of his stock, but we've only room now for a few words like this: Too many white azaleas is the worst stock you can have. Look to your pansies; you will need lots of them this spring; they will be very popular; have them good.

Primula Forbesi is not worth bothering with from a retail standpoint. Allium neapolitanum is grown by many because it's cheap and good for funeral work. It is well to have a choice assortment of bulbous stock on hand. Cheap grade stock may turn out all right for "making up," etc., but it is wrong to confine our efforts to the production of such. Grow a few of the finer kinds and educate yourself as well as the public; it pays to do so.

We know a bulb grower with a ramshackle old place out in Jersey; he pays more for his choice bulbs, but he gets the highest price on the market, and can sell all he grows on Broadway and among the finest stores. Yes, when the market is glutted our late Duke of Marlborough her bridal bouquet, which we arranged, was a bunch of callas, and she was one of the most particular and generous buyers of flowers we have ever had in New York. Of course, this was a fancy, and her name was Lily, but callas are permissible in many forms of decoration.

What charming colors can be seen among Azalea Mollis. They force well; perhaps they don't appear at their best when leafless and in large pots, but they "make up" fine all the same, especially with adiantum; and picture the color effects—it is impossible to obtain them from any other class of flowers, and we certainly advise the you try them? Flowering vines are destined to become more popular as the years go by, mainly because they are not only very beautiful but that they furnish material for the new and best style of decoration; there is far more beauty in a cluster of flowering vines hanging on the wall or in space than there is in a room full of labored efforts in measured garlands or wreaths.

If the furnishings are white or yellow, bougainvillea will look fine; if they are black or any of the dark shades, Bignonia venusta is best. We speak only of the material in season. A good old stump of Cycas revoluta pays for itself; it's a good thing to have. Cinerarias are in, of course, but despite their beautiful colorings they are not popular here; the majority of their colors incline to purple and are consequently not in favor as house plants; they are cheap though and pay for the show they make in the greenhouse or store.

Calceolarias make a grand show; try to get enough of them for a window display next month; they're fine for table work or cut flowers, in fact anything, and it's a wonder we don't see more of them. A low bowl of nasturtiums is just about as pretty a thing as you can see at present; they are beautiful and eminently suitable for breakfast or luncheon table; they are easy to grow and they pay well. A few sprigs of lemon verbena or clean rose geranium may not be much in appearance, but they are very often mighty important; a store should never be without one or the other.

Mignonette is bought because it is supposed to be sweet; when it lacks that quality, no matter how big it is, it is a failure. We have so many strains on the market now, and the tendency seems to go for size, that much about this flower is misleading and a disappointment. The flower is not at all necessary to a successful business, not in the least from a beauty point of view; a sweet, moderate sized mignonette is far superior to the immense scentless sticks we often see. A vase of mixed bulbous flowers, one or two flowers of a kind, and plenty of them, makes a beautiful effect—a charming "Dutch Picture"; anything Dutch deserves consideration these days.

IVERA.

CARNATION ARRANGEMENTS.

In the schedule of the American Carnation Society for the Buffalo exhibition under Class E appeared the following:

The American Carnation Society offers a fine silver cup for the best arrangement of carnation blooms, with their own or other foliage, but no other flowers to be used in the arrangement, and the design or arrangement must be such as to offer some new use for carnation blooms to have the cup awarded.

This brought out two entries, both of which we photographed, and plates appear in this issue. The cup was not awarded, the judges holding that friend sells out and gets his price, simply because his stock is choice and entirely different to the cheap mediocre things one sees in, we are sorry to say, despised heaps all over the markets.

Don't despise that good old flower, the calla, for although our old lady customers seldom order them filled with violets, as they did in the old days, they are even in these ultra extra particular days one of the most beautiful of flowers, and if you want to you can still make the finest of designs out of them. Here's an item never printed before anent callas. When Mrs. Hammersly married the grower-retailer to try some, and don't be afraid to use them as cut flowers. Quite a business can be worked up in some sections with hyacinths in glasses; if many could see them they'd buy.

You'll soon be thinking of seeds. We mean the packet seed you retail; don't you know this is one of the greatest frauds that could be perpetrated on a confiding public? The vast majority of seed offered in retail stores is a lie; they are too old to germinate. If you wish to dabble in the seed trade, insist on getting good fresh seed, and stop cheating the public, and preserve your reputation.

Penstemons are lovely; why don't neither "offered some new use for carnation blooms." It seems to us that the provision indicated must be abolished if we are to have a really good competition in the arrangement of carnations for decorative effect at the annual exhibitions. It is surely to be regretted that those who went to the trouble of entering did not receive more encouragement, and we trust that next year suitable prizes will be offered for the best arrangement of carnations and their foliage, without any other restrictions.

A glance at the illustration of the wreath of carnations, which was entered by Mr. L. E. Marquisee, Syracuse, N. Y., makes the method of arrangement plain.

The mirror was decorated by Mr. Robert Kift, Philadelphia. The stems of the carnations are in little glass vases of water attached to a metal rod which has been curved to the form desired. It is a patented device of his own and a reference to the engraving in his advertisement in this issue will give you a very good idea of it. It will no doubt prove very useful to florists generally.

WEDDING DECORATIONS.

The Cleveland Town Topics prints the following descriptions of three decorations recently arranged by Ella G. Wilson, the florist, of that city:

The Keith home was most artistically trimmed and decorated for the wedding. The ceremony was solemnized in the reception room, a veritable green and white bower. The walls were covered with white and across one corner of the room, under a canopy of white azaleas, stood the white satin kneeling cushion. Palms and ferns filled in the space, forming a beautiful background. Tall white candelabra holding lighted candles stood on either side of the improvised altar and palms on white pedestals were placed about the room. The mantel was filled with ferns relieved with clusters of white lilies. Garlands of smilax from the chandelier to the side walls formed a canopy for the entire ceiling. Garlands of white roses festooned the archway leading into the adjoining room. Pink roses and white tulips were used upon the buffet and mantel of the room. Pink roses and pink azaleas trimmed the parlor. A pretty feature of the hall decorations was the trimming of the mantel on the broad stair landing, two steps up from the floor level, this being quite concealed by foliage plants and American Beauties. Palms stood at either side of the landing.

The beautiful house was exquisitely decorated for the event and the pretty fancy of their commemorating St. Valentine's day was happily carried out by having the floral decorations throughout the house in heart-shaped design. The marriage was celebrated in the living room, a room of most generous proportions, finished in Flemish oak and beautifully furnished and decorated. The large fireplace was banked with ferns and foliage plants; and before it was a great heart-shaped arch of white roses and carnations. Beneath this was the white satin kneeling cushion, a white heart at the back taking the place of the usual rail. The gleaming candles in the green background added much to the unique floral design. This room quite resembled a forest of palms because of the great number used about the room.

The pretty home was beautifully decked and trimmed with flowers. Colonial garlands of pink and white roses and white carnations with smilax festooned the archways of the several rooms. The dainty pink and green reception room was decorated with vases of pink roses and palms. Red roses and foliage plants were used in the parlor and yellow daffodils graced the library. The mantel here was filled with ferns and plants relieved with clusters of white azaleas. The serving table in the red dining-room was done in white and green. There was a center decoration of white roses, white hyacinths and maiden-hair ferns tied with bows of green and white gauze ribbon. The silver candlesticks held candles with beautiful green silk shades. A shower of white roses depended from the chandelier above. White tulips and hyacinths and candelabra with green candles decorated the buffet.

A UNIQUE SCHOOL.

On the banks of the Hudson high up on a knoll, every foot of which is sacred in the history of the American revolution, there stands today one of the most interesting establishments to be found anywhere. It is the New York Deaf and Dumb Institute, situated at 165th street and Washington avenue, New York City. Several hundred boys and girls are being cared for and educated here. The buildings are large and specially designed, and the grounds surrounding them extensive.

But it is only to the horticultural part of the institute that we wish to draw attention, and the greatest credit is due Prof. E. H. Currier for the establishing and maintenance of this beautiful section of the educational department. At one side of the lawns stand a group of model greenhouses, a rose house, a carnation house, general plant house and a fine conservatory, all of which are filled with stock in the best of condition. The cut flowers and plants are used in the painting and designing classes at the school, but the most important is the horticultural class, consisting of 35 boys, who daily work among the plants in the greenhouses, and are taught common sense, practical lessons in gardening by our friend, Arthur K. Petit, who has charge of the plants and grounds.

Some of the very finest cyclamen ever seen in New York City have been grown at this place, and by what we saw there at the time of our visit this reputation is in no danger. Mr. Petit is getting a fine batch of pelargoniums into shape and hopes to be able to exhibit them at some show when in bloom. The visitor to these green-houses during school hours will see

TROUBLE WITH ROSES.

I have a house planted with Brides, Maids and Perles. Temperature is kept at about 55 to 58 degrees at night, with the exception of one or two very severe nights, when it dropped to 50 degrees before morning.

The Brides and Maids are dropping their leaves and an occasional plant turns black at the base of the stem and finally becomes limp. The roots appear to be all right.

In other years I have had good success in rose growing and do not think I have neglected them. Is it a disease, and if so, what shall I do to check it. I do not like to give food to the plants while they continue to drop leaves. Have kept them rather on the dry side. SUBSCRIBER.

Replying to Subscriber, must say that the drop in temperature to 50 degrees on cold nights cannot be responsible for the roses dying, nor do I think from his description it is a disease. Am inclined to think it is an injury the plants may have received, as only an occasional plant dies. During the dark months roses frequently drop a number of leaves, and if the plants are in a good condition this does no harm, but if the dropping is excessive and is indicative of disease the leaves that do drop should be thoroughly cleaned from the bench with any other loose material that may be on the surface.

From Subscriber's letter I am inclined to think the bark at the base of the plants which are dying has been injured, either mechanically or by an insect. Would advise him to examine the base of such plants as show they are affected to ascertain if an insect has injured the bark; if so, it must be destroyed, when his trouble will be relieved. Then give the beds a thorough examination; that is, go to much of interest. The students are mute, so are the plants and flowers, but there is a language understood between them. Affliction seems to lose much of its darkness among the brightness and fragrance of flowers. All honor to those who recognize the influence and importance of horticulture. J. I. DONLAN.

the very bottom of the benches and as close to plants as possible, and see that the soil is damp to the bottom and on the other hand not soggy, and then apply water so the bed is in perfect growing condition. (I judge Subscriber knows when his soil is in proper growing condition, as he states he has had good success heretofore.) Keep the soil in good growing condition, a little on the dry side, till the plants are making a good break, then increase the supply of water as they require it. Do not apply any feed until plants are in good growth again and then a little liquid manure may help them along.

Subscriber should, in preparing stock for next season's planting, use wood from plants that are in perfect health, taken with a keen knife; the greatest care should be taken not to injure the bark in making or inserting the cuttings, nor in fact at any stage in their growth from the time they are taken from the plant as cutting wood till set in the bed.

I have seen plants put in benches with the bark partly black or a black ring around the plant, the stem above and below in good condition; have marked several of these plants, and in every case they have died at some stage of growth before the 1st of February.

To have plants go through the dark days of fall and winter too great care cannot be taken to have them in perfect health in every respect at time of planting. A. O. T.

PIECE-ROOT GRAFTS ON ROSES.

I have been waiting for some one to tell me how it is done and what advantage it has, if any.

I suppose all florists know that the millions of young apple trees that are sold every year are propagated by what is known as the piece-root graft. Nurserymen are all busy now making them and packing them in damp sawdust so as to have them ready to set out in the spring.

Now, it occurred to me that the same might be used on roses. Having received in the fall of 1898 a very poor lot of Manetti plants, I cut off the best plants and made a thousand root grafts, and put them in the sand just as we would common rose cuttings. They nearly all rooted and made strong plants. We planted them in one end of a bench and planted out the balance with other plants on their own roots. We thought that we could see a marked difference in favor of the grafted roses for three or four months, but today I could not tell which were grafted if I did not know.

I set out the Manetti stocks; they soon made new roots and we have 2,000 more piece-root grafted roses in the sand, which are rooting nicely. I think if I had let the Manetti stocks stand two years before taking them up they would have made roots for eight or ten thousand grafts.

The weather was mild and the ground in good condition, so I set out my Manetti stocks for the second time last week. I intend to let them grow two years, so as to make strong roots.

I hired a man who makes grafting a business every winter. He can put in from 1,500 to 2,500 a day with the help of a boy to tie. I paid him $2.50 a day, so, if this proves any help in the growing of roses it need not be expensive.

I suppose many other florists have tried the same thing and would be glad to learn how others have succeeded. Also, if grafted roses have any real advantage over those on their own roots.

ROSE BEDS.

We have a center bed in a rose house which we wish to make a solid bed for roses, the bed to be planted in June. It is sided up about two feet high and was filled with soil about sixteen inches deep, leaving eight or nine inches on top to be filled in.

What we would like to know is, would it do to fill in two or three inches with coarse coal cinders and then fill up with good rose soil about six inches deep? Would that make a good drainage, or would coal cinders be in any way dangerous to roses? Would it be best to make the layer of rose soil deeper. SUBSCRIBER.

I have never used coal cinders in filling solid beds for roses, but if the ashes are screened out so there will be good drainage there is no doubt they will be all right, as for many years I have used fine cinders and ashes on benches on which young pot roses were set, and when the roots came through the pots and got among the cinders they were always fleshy and clear white, showing they were in congenial surroundings, and the plants made very rapid growth.

At one time I purchased a lot of 2-inch roses and upon unpacking them found the soil had a great deal of the cinders that are taken from the front of a locomotive boiler, and I never saw finer plants with better roots, so I am sure the cinders will be rather an advantage than a detriment. I would prefer not having the soil more than six inches deep. I would make the coal ashes four or six inches deep rather than two or three inches.

ROSE GROWING WITH CHEMICAL FERTILIZERS.

We have received a printed report of some very interesting experiments in the use of chemical fertilizers on roses that have been carried on by Prof. Wm. Stuart, Assistant Botanist of the Indiana Agricultural Experiment Station at Lafayette. The report covers a great number of trials of different chemicals, under various conditions, and results are shown by half-tone engravings from photographs of the plants.

Prof. Stuart concludes his report with the following summary:

"There is every reason to believe from the results obtained in the several experiments enumerated, that chemical fertilizers when properly used may be made to serve every need of the rose plant so far as food is concerned.

"The use of raw bone meal in every instance gave an increased yield over that of the control plants, as well as giving a greater percentage of gain than did those receiving other forms of phosphoric acid.

"Pure bone meal is not injurious to rose plants, even when applied in amounts largely in excess of the requirements of the plant.

"The acidulated bone meal which has been used by florists and supposed to be harmful, did not produce any noticeable injury, even when used in large amounts.

"As a rule, a combination of phosphoric acid and nitrate of soda gave better results than one of phosphoric acid and muriate of potash.

"Two or three applications of potash during the season was found to be preferable to a single application, although in some instances no injury from the single application was apparent.

"A larger number of Perle roses were produced from plants grown in a black than in a clay loam, while the Kaiserin gave reverse results."

THRIPS ON ROSES.

In combating thrips on roses Prof. Wm. Stuart, of the Indiana Experiment Station, reports that frequent spraying of the plants with a weak solution of Rose Leaf extract of tobacco, one part of the extract to 75 parts of water, proved efficacious. The spraying was done in the evening, and followed up in the morning by a hard syringing with water. Three or four applications were generally sufficient to destroy or drive away the thrips.

WETTING COAL.

I would like to hear from any florists who have experimented with wetting soft coal before using it. Is there any benefit in it?

I notice that all the railroads do it and all coal used on locomotives is wet before being used. Some benefit must result or railroads would not demand it of their firemen.

I would like to hear from anyone that has tried it. P. S.

We referred the inquiry to a large dealer in coal, who replies as follows:

"It is sometimes considered a good plan to wet coal before using, especially where there is much fine coal, the idea being that not only is the dust kept down, but the coal gives a longer flame when burning, by the heat decomposing the water into oxygen and hydrogen, which are afterwards burnt in the flues. This plan is therefore used when the flues are long. On the other hand, the advantage of this plan is questioned by many engineers, owing to the fact that the benefit derived from the longer flame is offset by the loss of heat required to decompose the water. Speaking generally, however, we would say that in boilers where the flues are long it would under any circumstance be advisable to wet the coal, but where a long flame is not particularly desirable, the only benefit derived from wetting the coal would be to keep down the dust."

The editor of "The Black Diamond," Chicago, a periodical devoted to the coal industry, says: "There is no direct benefit obtained from wetting coal prior to consumption. There is, however, an indirect benefit—that which obtains from the concentration of the smaller particles of carbon and dust; other than this there is none."

OBITUARY.

E. S. Carman.

E. S. Carman, for twenty-five years editor of the Rural New Yorker, died yesterday (February 28) at his home in New York, of pneumonia, aged 61 years. He leaves a widow, son and daughter.

Mr. Carman was a man of marked originality and ability and he made his paper a potent factor in the advancement of horticulture. He carried on very extensive experiments upon his own grounds and his crosses between various grains, potatoes, berries, etc., as well as roses and other ornamental plants, brought forth some striking and useful results that have made his name known in every state in the Union.

He was a man of strong convictions and in his paper carried on a vigorous campaign against anything in the horticultural world that did not accord with his views of what was right, and he knew no fear in doing what he considered his duty. He was withal a man of broad education and refinement. In his death American horticulture loses a powerful supporter of its best interests.

MISCELLANEOUS SEASONABLE HINTS.

Fuchsias.

I have had occasion to remark before that fuchsias propagated after this date make poor plants. The plants have given so many cuttings that the growths now made at this late date want to flower and make but a poor growth. Don't throw away your old plants of fuchsias. If allowed to grow on they make fine material to again give you good plants for another year's propagation; or if you are asked to fill up a shady bed or border with these pretty and old familiar plants, the old plants will be most satisfactory.

Remember, in growing on young fuchsias they should not have less than 50 degrees at night, plenty of syringing, and shifting whenever needed. The soil should be at least one-third rotten manure and it is worth while to mention that well decayed refuse hops suits fuchsias better than any other manure, and there are few of our soft-wooded plants that it does not suit. Many years ago we grew our La Purite and Edwardsii carnations well for those days with at least a fourth of refuse hops.

Lemon Verbena.

The lemon verbena always sells well and is always in demand, and a stock is easily produced if you have a few old plants that were grown in pots last summer and kept nearly dormant till now. Get them up, shake out the soil, repot after cutting back the shoots just a little, start growing in about 55 degrees, with plenty of syringing, and you will get any amount of young cuttings, which, if not allowed to wilt in the sand and given lots of water, will root as surely, if not as quickly, as an ageratum.

Lantanas.

Lantanas should also now be started in a warm house, and the young growths root easily. These plants are not grown as much as they were, but in mixed borders are useful, free growing plants.

Hydrangeas.

Hydrangeas that are wanted for late May sales will be starting to make a growth if they are kept where they usually are—under a cool bench. Don't let them make a weak growth there. It is better to keep them in the light from now on, but in the coolest house you have. I have found that about the same time that bedding plants go is the time when there is the best demand for hydrangeas. They are usually bought to stand on verandas and the less advanced they are the more satisfactory they will be.

It is a good time now to put in a batch of hydrangea cuttings for your next year's forcing plants. They root most readily. The strong young shoots from the bottom of the plant make the best stock, far better than the weaker terminal growth.

Cannas.

It is a favorable time now to get up your canna roots and clean and cut up. Under a bench, where there was little drip and kept from the ground by boards, ours have wintered. A single piece of root with one good eye is plenty large enough to make a fine plant for spring planting. Even if you are not ready to start them they are no worse for being cleaned a few days ahead.

Much time and room is saved by starting the canna roots and caladiums in flats with an inch or so of soil in the bottom. Well rotted manure is just as good and then two inches of sand. The roots can go quite close together and be well started before they need the 4 or 5-inch pot. We usually don't have bench room for the cannas or caladiums until our Easter crops are cleared out, so don't put the canna flats on the pipes more than four weeks before Easter.

Viols.

We have had the greatest success with some benches of Marie Louise violet this winter and some benches not as good, and without exception the best plants and best results have been those from plants propagated from cuttings of the true runners cut off and put in the sand as we do other cuttings. The trouble is it is difficult to get enough of the runners to give you sufficient stock. I mention this now because the plants will now be sending out runners and none should be wasted. Put them in the sand, and the same bed that roots carnations does finely for the violets, which is equal to saying any box or bench of sand in a cool house.

WM. SCOTT.

BOTTOMLESS POTS.

In the issue of The Review for Feb. 15 I notice an article Re unfavorable reports of bottomless pots, and do not think it justice on my part not to mention this fact. Last fall I read in The Review about bottomless pots, and having some A. Sprengeri in pans that needed shifting I thought it would be a good idea to try the bottomless pot system. I knocked the bottoms out of the pans and planted in bench in 12 inches of soil and they have done remarkably well.

Were the pots made a little deeper, say, 15 inches; they are in my opinion a grand acquisition for growing A. Sprengeri, having all the advantages of the bench, besides keeping the fronds from getting dirty, and better than hanging baskets, as they do not dry out so quickly. Also I believe there are probably other things this pot may be useful for, and hope before it is altogether dropped the florists will give it a fair trial.

[The item we published was based entirely upon reports from violet growers, and we understand that this style of pot has been most largely used by them.—Ed.]

EXPRESS SHIPMENTS.

We notice that at the convention of the Carnation Society some reference was made to express shipments and losses on same. I would like to have the opinion of wholesale plant shippers on the following case:

J. shipped a box of palms to M. on 11 o'clock train Saturday night. It was zero weather at the time. The box had a double lining of paper inside and express paper outside, no wadding being used. M. got the box from the express company on Monday, also a letter, at 8 a. m. The plants were frozen stiff. M. wrote to J. and asked whether to return the box or throw the plants on the dump pile, as they were not accepted. J. wrote back saying that M. should put in a claim against the express company.

M. holds that as the plants were not properly packed he had no claim against the express company, and if such a claim was to be made it should be done by the shipper. And he don't believe it would be just to make the express company pay, anyway. It would be an encouragement to the shippers to pack plants "any old way" and then claim damages from the express companies when injury results.

M. is 22 miles from J. and the box of plants was valued at $19.00. Who should stand the loss in this case?

SAM'S IMPRESSIONS.

We were awfully glad to know that our worthy friend, W. T. Bell, of Franklin, Pa., brought along to the carnation convention his inseparable friend, old Sam De Graw. We are apt to call him old, but he is little more than in the very prime of life, but having hibernated among the rocky ravines of the Alleghanies his environment has left its mark on his rugged character and he has become slightly fossilized, which has added angularity and grotesqueness to his natural rock ribbed character.

Every one who has the pleasure to know Sam intimately knows full well that Sam's personality is of the purest gold without alloy and that the exterior imperfections in both appearance and rays of character have been produced by the friction and repelling operation that has been continually warring against baser metals. More could be said in favor of old Sam's sterling worth, but with all that admitted it is a pity that he emerged from his mountain fastnesses with such a pessimistic temperament when visiting Buffalo on the 15th. Some of his impressions are liable to go abroad and create an unfavorable and erroneous impression.

He is undoubtedly a good observer, but on this occasion preferred to look through the wrong end of the telescope or he would never have discovered that quarter of an inch which was shy. Some reliable men say that "666" will measure a plump four inches. Hurry, boys, especially you whose name Sam wants to mutilate, and get that extra quarter of an inch on, and then perhaps old Sam will be satisfied. Why quibble over a quarter of an inch? If Sam had taken home a flower of "666" and compared it with the best of his home product it must have satisfied him of the marvelous advance in the carnations of today over those of ten years ago.

We last saw Sam going down the elevator, and with a chuckle and wave of the hand he exclaimed: "I am glad I came; yes, I'm glad, for there is no 4-inch carnation yet." One would think from the exultation displayed and radiance of victory that Sam had the only 4-inch flower in his native valley and that he had achieved a great conquest.

He is an observer true enough, for he mentions the best appearing flowers as they appeared in their "party dresses." This would lead one to suppose that there was some method pursued by exhibitors to artificially prepare the flowers, while I feel sure there is none. They are merely the best flowers picked and packed in the ordinary way and displayed in very ordinary vases.

Sam does not "burst." True enough, more's the pity that he did not burst just a little bit with enthusiasm at the wonderful flowers which must have been a revelation to him, if not to those who have been constant attendants at these annual shows.

Sam remarks about each class being staged together and remaining so during the show. That was never followed out so consistently as at Buffalo, and the writer had no little to say about it. It is the only way. To dot exhibits all over the hall to suit the fancy of every exhibitor is a relic of the pumpkin fair. So instead of telling us what we should do, Sam might have made us feel good by a remark of this sort: "Considering the lateness of arrival of many of the flowers, the exhibits were staged in good order and the judges had not to wander all over the hall to make comparisons." But bless old Sam's heart, you could not get a compliment out of him with a post auger.

Sam condemns again the method of scoring or scaling points in judging the applicants for certificates, but his last remark leaves the matter in chaos. It is a windy, voluminous subject, Mr. Editor, but as one of those who have judged in the certificate class for the past four years, I must say a word in its defense. Whatever they had the misfortune to do in Chicago we have nothing to do with, and the judging committee of the A. C. S. has never scored on a flower yet that came near perfection in all points. It is by comparison that points are scored. When a flower appears with the stem of a Jubilee, the size of "666," the form of Gov. Roosevelt, the substance of Day-break, the calyx of Mrs. Bradt, with a strong clove fragrance, it will score full points on those qualities. If it is a white, that is, pure white, or a scarlet the shade of old "Dazzle," it will deserve full score for color. In intermediate shades it must rest on the judgment of the judges.

Don't you think that the men who have judged the seedlings for several years know what is about the highest standard and in all the qualities that go to make a fine carnation? They do, as the result of their judging for several years past will show. And with a remarkably small exception their judgment has been verified by the variety which scored high, or on the other hand by the poor success of varieties that did not receive a certificate. To appoint men as judges who had been in the backwoods for ten years and had not watched the gradual but certain development of the carnation would be unwise, but men who are acquainted with all the varieties of the past ten years are well aware of what is the present standard of perfection, and no flower possesses them all. So it is by comparison that we judge and score the points, and I believe it is entirely satisfactory at present. A proof that it is is evidenced by all the leading growers submitting their seedlings to be passed on.

The crudest cut of all that old Sam gives us is his remark about the convention room. He says he looked in and thought it was a smoker. Now, truthfully, there was not 5 per cent. of the men present smoking. If he had been among us, which was his right place, he would have seen young Mr. Craig ably presiding over an earnest lot of men discussing very practical questions connected with the culture of the carnation and the very faint odor of nicotine would have dispelled that halo of victory which the absent quarter of an inch produced. Men have been known to die with too much and too sudden joy. Sam's imaginary victory weighed on all his nerve centers and clouded his profound intellect.

It was no smoker, gentlemen, far from it; it was an earnest and instructive meeting, and what would have added greatly to it would have been the sound sense and shrewd observations of such men as old Sam De Graw. Always speak your piece in the "meetin' house;" don't go outside and find fault with what occurred unless you fought against it.

It can be proved with slight argument that these conventions are to the credit and glory of all concerned. The man who does not participate is a beneficiary just as much as those who spend their time and money to attend. All are benefited. Whether you will or not, you can't help but reap a benefit, and among other blessings is the opportunity to meet dear old Sam De Graw.

BUFFALO.

ST. LOUIS.

Floral Euchre.

The floral euchre party given by the club last Friday evening was a grand success, considering the weather.

The prizes, 58 in all, consisting of palms of all kinds, ferneries, blooming plants and boxes of cut flowers, were donated by the following florists: F. C. Weber, Beyer Bros., Wm. Schray, F. J. Fillmore, Julius Koenig, Geo. Windler, C. C. Sanders, C. Young & Sons Co., John Kunz, John Steidle, J. F. Ammann, C. A. Kuehn, F. J. Windt, Henry Emundt, Max Herzog and J. J. Beneke.

Although there were 260 in attendance, the cold weather no doubt kept many away. The arrangement committee had everything in readiness at 8 p. m., and after playing twelve games the 58 prizes were given to the winners.

Dancing, which the young folks enjoyed, was then begun, and not until 2 a. m. did the last person leave the hall.

The euchre, which will net the club about $100, was voted a success and many expressed the wish that the club repeat it before the winter season ends.

The Market.

Business is still very good and all florists report an exceptionally good week. Plenty of funeral work and plenty of weddings and parties. The West End florists report a good February trade. The down town florists also say that February was a good month with them. Quite a number of weddings will take place this week owing to the approach of Lent and after this week business will be quiet for a while. Flowers will be more plentiful again and the high prices will drop.

The wholesale men report an excellent shipping trade in roses and carnations. Prices on stock at this writing are as follows: Meteors, extra fine, $8 and $10; seconds, $5. Brides and Maids, extra, $8 and $10; Woottons and Perles, $4 and $5; American Beauties are from $3 to $6 per dozen. All the above are still scarce and the demand great. George Kuhl, of Pekin, is sending in roses as good as any. Carnations are in great demand and not half enough come into this market to supply the demand; any color, common or fancy, are sold at good prices, the average of which is $2 and $2.50, while some extra fancy bring $4. Valley, hyacinths and daffs are the same as quoted last week. Harrisii and callas are in great demand at $12.50 and $15. Great quantities of California violets are coming in just now and sold last week at $2.50 per 1,000, 40 cents per 100. Small singles are low in price and southern stock is unsalable. Smilax is slow at $12.50.

Notes.

Visitors in town the past week were George A. Kuhl, Pekin, Ill., and Charles A. Stevens, foreman for Mr. Kuhl, also of Pekin.

Your correspondent has received a letter from our old friend Thomas Carroll, formerly of this city, now at San Francisco, Cal., who writes that the climate is doing him lots of good, but that he does not expect to recover his eyesight. He is living a quiet life with his sister and will not return to St. Louis until next year. He wishes to be remembered to all his friends through The Review, which he has read to him every week in Frisco.

C. Young & Sons Co. have been very busy the past week. They furnished the decorations for one of the largest weddings of the season on Friday, using an enormous amount of flowers of all kinds.

From present indications quite a number of new greenhouses will be built the coming summer by several of our large growers and also by the smaller ones, and especially at Kirkwood, as nearly all of them there will add to their present ones.

Some of the boys of the bowling club are wondering what has become of our old friend and former member of the club, Duncan Finlayson. We have heard that he got married. Some of the boys would like to hear from him, and as Mr. Finlayson always reads The Review, we expect to hear soon how Mr. and Mrs. Finlayson and family are getting along. Come, Duncan, don't be bashful. You know you were our best, and had you been at Detroit with us we would still be the champions.

Bowling.

The Florists' Bowling Club rolled its usual five games on Monday night. The attendance was slim. Mr. Wm. Adles of the Juniors was a visitor and rolled with us. The scores and averages were as follows:

NEW YORK.

Some coming events cast their shadows before. Lent always does to the flower business. There was a sudden stop to the fast whirl of trade and many there are who will still dig for reasons.

Albers & Co. have opened a retail florist store at 46th St. and 5th Ave.

Moore, Hentz & Nash, 119 West 23d St., are receiving exhibition Bridesmaids. They find their way into the Broadway stores, be trade good or bad. So do Thomas Young's Brunners and cattleyas.

The New York Gardeners' Society's carnation show and quarterly meeting will be held on March 27th, the first day of the American Rose Society's show. Mr. C. W. Ward has offered the Gardeners' Society a silver cup, value $25, for the best collection of carnations. There must be 12 blooms of a kind, and not less than 5 varieties, 3 of which must consist of the following varieties sent out by Mr. Dorner: Scott, Albertini, Richmond, White Cloud, Gold Nugget, Crane, or of the sorts disseminated by Mr. Ward, viz.: Mrs. Jas. Dean, New York, John Young, Glacier, Maceo and Gomez. All the new carnations will be at this show, and those wishing further information will get it by applying to J. I. Donlan, 43 West 28th St., New York city.

The results at the bowling alleys last night were:

A. Marshall	141	160	151

PHILADELPHIA.

The Market.

Most of the retail stores report business as being very quiet, which they attribute to the rough weather of the past week.

Beauties, $1 to $6 per dozen; Brides, Maids, Kaiserins, Meteors and Golden Gate, $3 to $10; fancy, $12; Morgans, $5 to $10; Gontiers, $3 to $4; Perles, $3 to $6. Carnations, ordinary, $1.50; fancy, $2 to $4; valley, $3 to $4; hyacinths, $2 to $4; mignonette, $3 to $4; narcissus, $2 to $4; sweet peas, $1.50 to $2.50; daffs, $3 to $4; tulips, $3 to $4; callas, $10; violets, single 25 to 50 cents, double 25 cents to $1; smilax, $15; adiantum, $1; asparagus, $50.

Various Notes.

A vase of the new carnation Marquis in the window of H. A. Dreer attracted considerable attention.

J. J. Habermehl's Sons did the decorating for the Philopatron ball. It was one of the largest of the season.

Hugh Graham executed the decorating for the Hebrew charity ball. It was a grand affair.

A meeting of the Farmers' Institute for Philadelphia county was held on February 24 under the auspices of the Pennsylvania Horticultural Society and the Florists' Club of Philadelphia at Horticultural Hall. There were two sessions, afternoon and evening.

The address of welcome was delivered by W. Atlee Burpee.

Mr. Meehan, Jr., in the absence of his father, read a paper on landscape gardening, which was very instructive.

Prof. MacFarlane, of the University of Pennsylvania, gave an illustration of the Botanic Gardens of England in the shape of lantern slides showing different water lily ponds, fern and palm houses.

W. H. Taplin read a paper on "Ferns Specially Adapted to House Culture."

The Bowling Club has arranged for a theater benefit on March 16 at the Walnut Street theater. Tickets can be had for same at the club room.

Mr. Bancroft, Jr., of Cedar Falls, Ia., was one of our visitors the past week. R.

BOSTON.

The first half of the week beginning February 19 consisted of three very busy days for our growers and salesmen. Goods of all kinds were in plenty, but the good demand made use of them all. Since the middle of the week there has been a falling off in both supply and demand. This is caused probably almost wholly by heavy rains all day on the 22nd and at times ever since to the end of the week. High grade roses and all grades of violets got too plentiful for Saturday, the latter getting upon the street in the evening in astonishing quantities.

Although prices on bulb goods have run rather low most of the time this winter, there has been no general slump on the market, and no goods of the kind have gone to waste, and growers in that line confess to the best season for five years. Perhaps they are hardly out of the woods yet, but their expressions indicate they think the danger point passed.

I hear a number making the remark that the new firm of Long & Marshall, Hotel Thorndike, florists and confectioners, seem to be carrying on a good enough business. Well, they know how, and have a good chance to do it.

Mr. Calder reports very favorable results from his removal to present quarters, assigning it all to the fact that all subway cars now pass his door, many customers making the remark they saw his sign and jumped from the car to purchase.

It needs no words on their part to establish the fact that Houghton & Clark made a good move when they crossed the street last fall. They have surely nearly doubled their business.

It is hoped that a good white carnation will be evolved from the trade exhibition next Saturday. B. T.

BUFFALO.

The worst storm of the season visited this locality on Saturday afternoon. Rain turned to snow, and then came a 60-mile-an-hour breeze, and the key being out of my bedroom door, which opens on to a balcony, there was a foot of snow on the carpet in the morning. Of course, it was not all over the room, but in drifts, the largest drift being three feet from the keyhole where all the snow had passed through. This may seem improbable to a native of Sicily, or even the south of England, but is a common occurrence in Buffalo even in the best regulated families.

Under such conditions many of our oldest inhabitants have passed away (some even frozen to death) to that bourne where snow and ice is popularly supposed to be non-existent, however much their elements would be enjoyed.

Business has been better than for several weeks past and no scarcity of flowers. Most of the store windows are gay with azaleas and other flowering plants, and tulips always liven up and look cheerful.

We are always sorry we cannot send you a bowling score, but sport is at a low ebb. The nearest thing to report in that line is Prof. John F. Cowell's trip to the everglades of Florida. He hopes to bring home some live alligators and perchance a Seminole squaw who has escaped the happy hunting grounds and the civilizing bullet, but incidentally he will look for tall and stately palms to adorn the magnificent conservatory at South Park.

We did not see him off, but understand that he took his friend Rudd's advice and loaded his grip with the great and popular antidote for snake and tarantula bites. We trust the professor will be saved both from the bites and the antidote. The latter is sometimes most deadly.

We understand there is a large herd of bulb growers traveling west. They have not struck our town yet, and perhaps we may escape. Mr. Giesy, of Cincinnati, is in town, and when he is around you neither feel cold nor lonesome. Mr. McHutchison, of New York, was also here looking after Pan-American prospects. It seems to me that if Mr. Mc. talks as they do in Australia, that his accent is preferable to any we hear. It is not so frothy as the Cockney, nor as soapy or slangy as New York, nor so nasal as Chicago, nor so much "aaw" as Philadelphia. It is sharp, clear and pleasant. This is no credit to the young man, because it is the accent of the antipodes, and he imbibed it as naturally as a Cockney says "You cawn't, cawn't ye."

We recovered from the carnation convention with the greatest promptness and pleasure and are ready for another at your earliest convenience, but must content ourselves with looking forward to Baltimore; and, by-the-by, those pictures of Mr. R. Halliday are, in my opinion, very unlike him. The real, live, animated Bob Halliday is quite a different looking man, and to prove it I trust all my readers will journey to the land of the Oriole next year. W. S.

BALTIMORE.

Within a few months will be removed two glass structures which mark an epoch in horticultural development in this city. These are the conservatories at Patterson Park and at "Bolton," the home of Mr. W. W. Spence, the latter of which has been bought as the site for the new armory of the 5th regiment, our crack militia organization. Both of these houses are of the curvilinear type, with a central palm pavilion and wings for stove and cool specimens, and were erected by the predecessors of the present Lord & Burnham Co., and nearly at about the same time, say, between 1875 and 1877. Just in that era the Maryland Horticultural Society had been re-established, and for years a wave of enthusiasm for collections of fine plants passed over the community. Such men as Wm. H. Perot, Wm. T. Walters, Wm. W. Spence, Robt. W. L. Rasin, the Garretts, the Hoens, Edward Kurtz, Captain Snow, George S. Brown and other private cultivators, and those in the trade, such as Wm. D. Brackenridge, John Feast, Robt. J. Halliday, Andrew Black, Sam'l Feast & Sons, James Pentland, etc., had collections of foliage and flowering specimens equal to those found in any other community.

The fondness for such displays extended to our city parks and, to accommodate the accumulation there, the conservatory now going into decay was erected, much to the pleasure of the people of that portion of our municipality, in which Patterson Park is located. About the same time Mr. Spence put up what was then esteemed a beautiful example of a modern plant structure. Like the other, it is about at the end of its life. For several years past it has been in charge, with the surrounding handsome grounds located in the heart of an urban population, of Mr. John Donn, long known as one of the stand-bys of the trade here. Beginning at Kew, filtering through the Americanizing hands of Peter Henderson, head gardener at Mrs. Isabella Brown's, then in successful business for himself, Mr. Donn has gained in substance, reputation and avoirdupois. He was one of the leaders in popularizing chrysanthemums in this territory, and to his energy, influence and persistence the success of our earlier shows was largely due, whilst doubtless in pecuniary returns he gained more than any other who embarked in the exploitation of these popular favorites.

Reference in a late Review to one of our older gardeners brings up another notable figure—James Pentland, now the very Nestor of the craft! Of the tough fibre which is the outgrowth of North Irish, or Scotch-Irish blood, he carries his eighty years jauntily, his head silvered, but his eye as bright, his heart as light as a boy's, his step unfaltering, his spirit undaunted. For two-thirds of a century he has worked with a trowel and knife and spade, at the bench, in the trench and in the nursery row, and worked, too, just like he played—with all his might. He has always been known for his frank speech, and friend as well as foe was likely to get the rough side of his keen tongue if he deserved it. But, friend or foe, clerk or layman, was sure of getting honest, fair treatment; and his word was ever his bond.

Mr. Pentland, after several years' apprenticeship in Philadelphia, came to Baltimore in 1844, and was employed in Greenmount Cemetery as gardener. In 1849 he bought the property opposite the cemetery gate, where he still carries on the business then begun. As common to the gardeners of that day, he grew bedding stuff, roses, nursery stock, exotic grapes and cut flowers, going to market to dispose of his products, taking contracts to plant country estates, and keeping city gardens trim, etc. He soon began to pay particular attention to the production of roses—the garden sorts, and enlarged his operations in this direction until at the time of the civil war his annual output was about 100,000 roses, from pots, he having in his houses 750 sorts from which stock was propagated. He engaged in hybridizing varieties and produced several which were well received by the trade, notably George Peabody and Beauty of Greenmount (Bourbons), Woodland Margaret (Noisette), and Doctor Kane (hybrid tea). Mr. Pentland for many years cultivated extensively the camellia, and raised some fine seedlings of his own, of which Gen. Robt. E. Lee, carmine, spotted white; Stonewall Jackson, white, striped scarlet; Anna, a beautiful pink, were conspicuously meritorious.

Mr. Pentland's long association with the flower trade of the country, the noteworthy collection of roses so long maintained by him and attracting many visitors, has filled him with reminiscences both curious and interesting, which are still dear in his memory. He recalls now, after more than sixty-five years, that at Mr. Fettes', in Philadelphia, he potted the first plants coming to America of roses Souvenir d'un Ami, Hermosa, Mme. Bosanquet, La Reine, and Mme. Lafayette.

Outside of his business, too, Mr. Pentland has led in many activities and been much honored by his fellow men. One term he represented this city in the legislature of Maryland. For many years he has been a prominent manager of the Maryland Institute, the local School of Art and Design. Only a year ago he was president of the Gardeners' Club, presiding with skill and vigor. He is one of the oldest Masons in the state, esteemed by the whole craft, and with many testimonials of their affection and respect in shape of services of silver, diplomas, jewels, etc. That this old gardener's life and health may long be continued is hoped sincerely by innumerable friends.

The contracts to furnish plants for the coming season for our parks and public squares have been given out. Of the 190,000 required, E. A. Seidewitz gets 92,000 and the balance is divided among six other growers. The following are the figures of the awards by the thousand: Alternanthera, $20; acalypha, $41; ageratum, $20; caladium, $40; canna, $48; celosia, $35; centaurea, $20; geraniums, $50; coleus, $20; iresine, $23; oxalis, $25; echeveria, $35; petunas, $20; pyrethum, $18; ricinus, $38; rudbeckia, $20; torenia, $20; tagetes, $20; salvia, $25; vinca, $20; zinnia, $20. This includes delivery and planting. The aggregate makes, it is said, from $2,000 to $3,000 less than was paid for an equal number last year. Hereafter the city will raise its own plants for this purpose. Many would be willing to wage they will then cost more than the prices at which they have been thus bought in open market.

The demand for cut flowers for the week ending this day (February 26) has been unusually brisk, and prices obtained better than are customary at any time except Christmas and Easter. Good roses have been scarce in all varieties and carnations have not been abundant enough to go around.

Mr. Julius Tischinger, one of the older florists here, was recently the victim of a paralytic stroke. Hopes are entertained for his recovery. RIX.

SAN FRANCISCO.

The Market.

The weather this week is finer than the business done, with good stock scarce and hard to get. Quite a lot of daffodils can be seen at the stores and are fair as to quality.

Prices: American Beauties, $3.50 to $5.00; Brides, Bridesmaids and Meteors, 75 cents to $1; Siebrechts, 50 cents; Brunners, 12½ cents per doz.. Carnations, Hobart, $1 to $1.25; Crocker, 50 to 75 cents; Schwerin and Flora Hill, 50 cents; mixed fancies, 35 cents; Bradt and Gold Nugget, 35 to 50 cents;

Portia and Scott, 20 to 25 cents per doz. Harrisii, $2.50 to $3.50; lily of the valley, 25 to 50 cents per doz.; daffodils, $1.50; freesias, 75 cents to $1; paper whites, 50 cents; callas, $1 per 100; violets, Princess of Wales, 50 to 75 cents; Californias, 40 to 50 cents; Swanley Whites, 50 cents per doz. bunches.

Notes.

Jager & Jacquement, on Sutter street, have dissolved partnership. Mr. Jager will run the business in his own name, while Mr. Jacquement will start in with his brother on Fourth street.

Simons, at Fruitvale, is cutting some very fine Brides and Meteors that are bought up quickly.

Mr. Carl Breyer is supplying San Francisco with its finest lily of the valley.

Mr. J. Franks, North Temescal, will leave his nursery in good hands while he tries his luck in Cape Nome.

E. W. McLellan has discarded his crutches and now walks around with the aid of a cane. Sometimes he forgets the cane and walks without it.

Mr. Wm. Falconer, superintendent of Schenley Park and conservatories, Pittsburg, Pa., is here on a visit to the parks of the Pacific coast. Superintendent John McLaren escorted the noted visitor through Golden Gate Park. Mr. Falconer pronounced the work of clothing the wastes of sands with borders as marvelous and the beauty of the park unsurpassed.

The writer paid a visit to Mr. S. Jones, of Fruitvale, on February 22nd, and after the greenhouses were inspected and the fine condition of the stock noted, we made a forced march over to Gunthersdrift and took a couple of laagers. After this capture Mr. Jones declared he felt like his countrymen in South Africa—much better.

Mr. A. Galloway, at Fruitvale, will build one more greenhouse this spring for carnations. Mr. Galloway as a carnation grower has made a success of his business, and being a young man shows a good example to our young men in the business. J. N.

PITTSBURG.

The delegates to Buffalo returned Saturday, the 17th. They expressed themselves well pleased with what they saw and the way the Buffalo boys entertained them.

Trade with the retailers has been good, funerals and decorations using up large quantities of flowers, and the commission houses are not overloaded with flowers, either.

J. B. Ferguson reports business fair and the Cut Flower Company are cleaned out daily except on bulb stuff, which is coming in quite heavy now. The latter firm is handling an enormous lot of stock; step in any time of day and you will find them busy unpacking and packing up orders.

The growers are looking ahead now to Easter; each one anxious to have his crop just right. Harrisii will not be so plentiful this Easter, owing partly to diseased bulbs and that there were not so many bought last fall as usual.

F. Burki is sending in the finest mignonette he ever had. His Hector is the best scarlet carnation coming in, in quantity, so far, although his Crane and America are doing well. He says Hector gives him twice as many flowers to a plant. White Cloud is his best in white and he has two houses of it. Mr. Burki is probably the only one about here who grows the old Edna Craig. It is doing so well with him that he will continue to grow it, but is going to grow Mr. Weber's Genevieve Lord alongside of it to see the difference. Mr. Burki's new asparagus house has been cut out and a new crop coming in for spring.

B. L. Elliott, formerly of Elliott & Ulam, is growing mostly carnations in his new houses at Cheswick. He will try some of the new varieties this year. His stock looks well, with prospects for a good crop for Easter.

W. F. Lauch, Carrick, Pa., is making a grand showing with his large house (40x200) of carnations. Red Jacket is doing fine with him.

John Bader, Mt. Troy, whom we all know as a good fellow, is sending in some very nice azaleas and rhododendrons. As usual he will be ready with a large lot of plants and bulbous flowers for Easter.

Theo. F. Beckert, Neville Island, is growing lettuce this year. He has only one house of carnations, but is stocking up for cut flowers for next year. Last summer Mr. Beckert put in two large tubular boilers and perfected his heating apparatus throughout so that he would not be caught with another freeze-out like last winter.

John L. Wyland, Allison Park, Pa., who attended a carnation meeting this year for the first time, has a large house of carnations, which are doing well. He will try the Lawson and other new ones this year.

C. Blind is off crop with his carnations and roses, since the heavy cut for the holidays, but expects to be in for Easter if not before.

G. & J. W. Ludwig are receiving some fine carnations from John Murchie, Sharon, Pa. They also receive each day a fine lot of orchids.

Our crack bulb-forcer, Chas. Koenig, Bennett, Pa., has for the past two months been sending in some very fine tulips.

George Oesterle has resigned his position with Randolph & McClements.

Visitors in town the past week were S. S. Skidelsky, Philadelphia, and Mr. McHutchison. BAER.

MENTOR, O. — Carl Hagenburger will build five new greenhouses this spring, which will give him a total of twelve and 25,000 square feet of glass.

TARRYTOWN, N. Y.

The regular monthly meeting of the Tarrytown Horticultural Society was held on February 22. President Turner presided; thirty-five members present. A letter was read from the secretary of the American Rose Society, asking this society's co-operation at their forthcoming exhibition. It was also unanimously agreed to send a donation of $15 as a special premium.

The following gentlemen were elected to membership: Jas. Clark and Michael Ward, Irvington; Theodore Dinkle, Peter Smith and Wm. Kearney, Tarrytown, and five new applications were received.

Mr. E. W. Neubrand reported that the Dutchess County Horticultural Society's dinner was a complete success. Our representatives thoroughly enjoyed themselves and learned many good lessons.

There was quite a show of exhibits. Vice President Stevenson had a most excellent table of plants, including fine specimens of azaleas, clematis, primulas, Spirea astilboides, and a fine lot of paper white narcissus, for which he was awarded a certificate of merit. A certificate of merit was also given to P. M. Pierson for a vase of Defiance mignonette. The flower spikes averaged 15 inches in length and the foliage was like monstrous chrysanthemum leaves. This was universally admired. Honorable mention was awarded to L. A. Martin for a vase of violets (Princess of Wales), also to John Boshard for a vase of Marie Louise.

The executive committee reported upon the schedule for the next chrysanthemum show. It was ordered to be printed and preliminary copies put in circulation right away.

Mr. L. A. Martin read a paper on vegetable growing. Mr. Martin dealt with his subject in a masterly manner. He gave some good advice regarding soil, situation and manuring, also a complete calendar of operations for the vegetable garden. Quite a lively discussion followed and many good points were gleaned. Dreer's improved Lima bean is to replace King of the Garden, and no more round peas will be grown.

The following syllabus was announced:

March—Chrysanthemums, by Jas. T. Scott.

April—Indoor Roses, by A. A. Taaffe.

May—Small Fruits, by Thos. Cockburn.

June—Outdoor Roses, by Wm. Turner.

GRAND RAPIDS, MICH.

Cold waves running the temperature below zero every night, tempered with bright, sometimes sunshiny days, not unfavorable to plant growth, is what we are getting accustomed to. It is very trying on the coal bin, but we are in hopes of a let up soon. Business continues first class, the call for funeral flowers has kept up very persistently, and shipping is taxing the ability of the local growers to fill orders. While all flowers except violets are scarce, white carnations and white and pink roses are the shortest in supply. A better supply of Beauties may be looked for if this bright weather continues. Brides, Maids and Meteors bring $1.50, selected blooms $2 per doz. Carnations, 35 to 50 cents per doz.; Irenes and Mary Wood, 75 cents per doz.; violets, 15 to 20 cents, and very plentiful. Lilies are in small supply and considerable complaint about mixed bulbs being sent for Harrisii; such as Speciosum and rubrum! One florist has a small bench filled with lilies, not Harrisii, and the disease seems to be worse this year than usual.

What food for thought and discussion is being evolved from the arguments advanced by the various contestants in the Cincinnati and Chicago contest on the number of points to which Enquirer is entitled! Each issue is eagerly awaited and when it has arrived is quickly scanned to see if there is anything new from friend Rudd or brother Bock. Opinion here seems about evenly divided between Cincinnati and Chicago methods.

Recent harbingers of spring were J. E. Killen and B. Eschner, the latter representing M. Rice & Co., Philadelphia. Both report business good.

G. F. CRABB.

CHICAGO.

The Market.

The shipping trade has held up remarkably well clear to the beginning of the Lenten season. So far the supply of good grades of roses has not been in excess of the demand and prices on shipping stock have held steady at $6 to $10 per 100. In carnations the call seems to have shifted markedly to white, but all good stock moves readily. On ordinaries the price is $1.50 to $2, and on fancies, $3 to $5.

Of violets there has been quite a surplus, the thermometer having been below the freezing point. On Tuesday dealers were hopeful of a rise in temperature and said that one pleasant day would clean up the accumulation. Wednesday, however, ushered in a heavy fall of snow, accompanied by wind, and the violets are still "wasting their sweetness."

Bulbous stock is moving fairly well, but at low figures. Shipping tulips are quoted at $3 to $4, but under grade stuff and job lots are cleaned up at $1.50 to $2, or even lower rates.

Various Items.

A regular meeting of the Florists' Club will be held tomorrow (Friday) evening.

W. E. Lynch is moving to new quarters in the basement of 64 Wabash avenue, the southeast corner of Wabash and Randolph.

George M. Garland is displaying a section of his iron gutter at McKellar & Winterson's.

Mrs. Geo. R. Scott and daughter are away on a business trip.

G. H. Pieser is doing jury service and life is not so easy now for Flint K.

Three very handsome funeral wreaths recently noted were made as follows: An artist's wreath of solid pink carnations, with a garland of lily of the valley and violets on one side; a similar wreath of green galax leaves, with a garland of La Reine tulips on one side and tied with royal purple ribbon; another artist's wreath of bronze galax leaves, with a garland of lily of the valley on one side and tied with cream colored ribbon.

H. J. Goemans, representing K. J. Kuyk, Hillegom, Holland, and Ghent, Belgium, is in town.

Bowling.

There was a warm session at Kinsley's alleys last night (Wednesday). There was a match game between teams composed of wholesalers and retailers, and the ladies were there to see the fun, and the ladies did some fancy rolling, too. Among the ladies present were Mesdames P. J. Hauswirth, C. Balluff, E. F. Winterson and C. W. McKellar, and Misses Kreitling and Ludlow.

The wholesalers had the best end of it in the match games but they were hotly contested and it was nearly Thursday morning before the last game was completed. Following are the scores:

PAN-AMERICAN EXPOSITION.

We are pleased to be able to announce that Mr. Wm. Scott has been appointed superintendent of floriculture of the Pan-American Exposition, to be held in Buffalo next year.

With Mr. Scott in charge we are assured that the department will not fail to be what it should be—a credit to the profession and a live factor in demonstrating to the world the remarkable progress in commercial floriculture.

And should the convention of the S. A. F. be held in Buffalo in 1901, the members will surely find the horticultural department at the exposition alone well worth the trip to the annual meeting.

WATERTOWN, N. Y.

The sewers lacked capacity to carry off the immense quantity of water during the recent heavy thaw and many cellars were flooded in consequence. Among the sufferers was the well known firm of florists, Messrs. Greene & Underhill. On Feb. 13 the water rose above the fire pots in the boilers and extinguished the fires, and though ten men were set to work to pump the water out it was several hours before fires could be started again.

This has naturally caused considerable loss, and coming at the busy plant shipping season has been particularly unpleasant, greatly delaying many shipments. But they have their shipping department now pretty well reorganized and will soon be in shape to take care of orders with their usual promptness.

LOUISIANA.

Mr. Harry Papworth, of New Orleans, sends us a handsomely illustrated book on Louisiana and its resources, and the pictures showing roses and shrubs in bloom in February make one weary of the blizzard raging in Chicago at time of writing. The book is entitled "Louisiana's Invitation," and is issued by the Louisiana State Board of Agriculture and Immigration, Baton Rouge, from which any one contemplating removal to the south can no doubt obtain a copy on application.

THE first issue of the Canadian Gardeners' and Florists' Exchange has reached us. The first number contains 12 pages, the pages about the size of those of the Review, and they are filled with articles and trade items of special interest to Canadian florists and a goodly number of trade ads. We welcome the youngster and trust it may successfully fill its mission. It is published at London, Ont.

ELWOOD, IND.—Wm. H. Woerner has purchased the property and greenhouses of Mrs. M. E. Goode and will erect a new rose house in time for early planting.

MORRIS, ILL.

The Morris Floral Co. reports business as excellent. Their business for January was 20 per cent. larger than for the same month last year, and that for this February was 52 per cent. larger than for February, 1899.

They will increase their capacity for carnations by 10,000 plants for next winter. Their list of varieties will be: Mary Wood, Glacier and White Cloud, for white; Lawson, E. Crocker, Genevieve Lord, The Marquis and Joost, for pink; Melba for light pink, in place of Daybreak, as they find it as good a bloomer and it takes better at retail; G. H. Crane and America, for scarlet; Maceo and Gomez, for crimson; Gold Nugget, for yellow; Olympia and Bradt, for variegated. All other varieties will be discarded.

With them Mary Wood is the best white and Joost the best pink this season.

SOUTH BEND, IND.

Beyer's Garden Park Place has recently added three fine new greenhouses, one 12x93, one 18x93 and the other 10x93. These are connected by a glass corridor, 12x44, and there is a new office and boiler room, 14x44.

The material for the houses was furnished by the John C. Moninger Co., Chicago, and Mr. August Beyer, the manager, says he desires to thank this firm through the Review for the splendid manner in which the work was executed. He is more than pleased with it.

BLOOMINGTON, ILL.—About twenty truck gardeners and fruit growers here have formed the Bloomington Gardeners' Exchange. A committee consisting of J. H. Leaton, Geo. Kerr and A. R. Knowles was appointed to formulate a constitution and by-laws.

A LATE CHRYSANTHEMUM.

We have received from Mr. R. A. McPherson, manager of the Cottage Greenhouses, Litchfield, Ill., a very good 5-inch bloom of Western King chrysanthemum, borne on a stem that had not been disbudded.

Mr. McPherson writes: "With us this variety has grown differently from any other commercial kind, constantly throwing new growth terminating in such flowers as the one sent. On but a few plants saved of this variety we have had buds and blooms in all stages of growth since the first cutting, and today we are selling fine blooms of same."

OCEANIC, N. J.

The third annual ball of the Monmouth County Hort. Society was one of the greatest events of the season. There were over a hundred couples in the grand march and some of the most prominent people of Oceanic and neighboring towns were present. At 12 o'clock supper was served and before the regular order of dancing was started again an Irish breakdown was danced and there was also a cake walk in which Hugh Birch showed marked ability.

It was about 4 o'clock when the orchestra played "Home, Sweet Home." Most of the visitors on leaving asked, "When shall we have our next one?" and expressed themselves as having had a jolly good time. The "Gardeners' ball," as it is called here, is always a great feature, but this year it surpassed anything ever held in this vicinity.

The credit for the success of the affair is due to the committee of arrangements, which consisted of Messrs. Geo. Kuhn, Robert Murphy, Thomas McIntosh, Hugh Birch and Albert Brighton.

B.

DENVER, COLO.

There was a small attendance at the alleys last evening (Feb. 20th), but the scores were up to the average. Mr. M. Bloy, who recently arrived from Buffalo, bowled his first game with us and as the scores will show made a good start. But he was not satisfied with the three club games, so bowled an additional game with the members and made a score of 201, which was the highest for the evening. Mr. B. finds our alleys easy, or at least they seem so to him. Herewith are the scores for the evening:

PITTSBURG.

In opening the bids for the nursery stock required by the different parks of Pittsburgh, it was found that Thomas Meehan & Sons, the nurserymen and landscape engineers of Germantown, Philadelphia, Pa., were the lowest of all bidders. This firm was awarded the contracts for every section, amounting in all to nearly ten thousand hardy trees, shrubs, vines and evergreens.

ELM CITY A Grand New White....

Carnation

Seedling of Lizzie McGowan
in its fifth year.

The flowers are large, finely shaped and of strong fragrance. Petals are heavy, of good substance and nicely fringed. Calyx is very strong, after the style of Mme. Albertini, and none bursting; the stem strong, holding the flower erect. The plant is a good grower and free bloomer, not subject to stem rot or any disease. Rooted Cuttings ready February 1st, $1.50 per doz., $10 per 100, or $70 per 1000. Cash with order. We shall prepay the express where money accompanies the order. Orders filled in rotation.

GENEVIEVE LORD. The Peer of Light Pinks.

(Stock for delivery prior to March 20, all sold.)

The people know a good thing when they see it. If you haven't seen it ask someone who has concerning its appearance. It has proven itself the most popular selling carnation we have ever grown, and as it combines quantity with quality it is no surprise to know it is the most profitable we have ever grown.

Some of its Features: The finest stem of any carnation. The color is just right, the ladies go wild over it. It is large, grades easily as a fancy. Odor is very sweet. Form beautiful, calyx perfect. It is a perfect non-bursting carnation. Every grower will appreciate this. If you don't grow Genevieve Lord next winter your list will not be complete. Remember, stock is all sold until March 20. PRICE: $2.00 per doz., $10.00 per 100, $75.00 per 1000.

Catalogue ready now containing full description of the above as well as the other big new ones and standard sorts. A postal card will bring it. Also complete list of new and standard Chrysanthemums.

Ethel Crocker. Absolutely the Best Pink Carnation ever offered the trade.

A fact fully borne out by its record, being equally good with Craig, Hill and myself (an assurance that it is not a success in one soil and a failure in another.) By its having been shown at the flower shows and clubs since early in September (an assurance that it is not a good late carnation but an all season variety.)

In color, size, fragrance and stem it is just what the "storemen" want. In habit, constitution and freedom of bloom it is just what the grower wants. It produces more flowers to the square foot than any other known variety, and is never out of crop from September to July.

With 18,000 stock plants to work from there is no danger of it being overpropagated, and all orders entrusted to me will be filled with cuttings selected from the plants and also in filling the order, by myself, thus doubly assuring good stock. Honest sample blooms furnished prepaid at $1.00 per dozen, amount deducted from all orders for 100 or over. Up to date every sample excepting one out of several hundred sent has brought an order.

Price per 100, $10.00; per 25, $2.50. Per 1000, $75.00; per 250, $18.75. HERR'S PANSIES, good little plants at 75c per 100; $4.00 per 1000.

THE FLORISTS' MANUAL.

After reading Mr. Wm. Scott's Manual, we wish to say that we consider it without equal as a book of reference for busy florists.

GEO. M. KELLOGG.

Pleasant Hill, Mo.

Mr. Scott's superb work, "The Florists' Manual," was indeed worth waiting for. When compared with the amount of practical information it contains, the selling price, $5.00, seems a mere bagatelle.

Oakland, Md. H. WEBER & SONS.

It is the best book of the kind ever published. There is more in it than in any other book I have ever seen. I am delighted with it.

Chicago.

JOHN THORPE.

The copy of the "Florists' Manual" was duly received. I am very well pleased with same. The more I read it the better satisfied I am with it, and there are one or two articles alone in it that are each worth all you ask for the book, for everything is made so plain and all details are right to the point. I trust you may have a good and ready sale for the same.

M. S. WORDEN.

North Adams, Mass.

The only fault to be found with it is when you get reading it the midnight oil is liable to run low and you have to go on to gas or reluctantly break off, either going to bed or first taking a look over the houses to see if the temperature tallies with the Manual.

GEO. S. OSBORN.

Hartford, Conn.

We are in receipt of "The Florists' Manual" by Mr. Scott and may say it is the right book for the florist, published at the right time. It is what we all need.

BOBBINK & ATKINS.

Rutherford, N. J.

Am much pleased with the Manual. It is just what I have been looking for. Something that we can understand, and enjoy reading.

M. NAUMAN.

Etna, Pa.

I am very much pleased with the Manual. It is just what we have needed for a long time.

N. ZWEIFEL.

Milwaukee, Wis.

It is certainly a neat and handsome book and does you credit.

BENJAMIN HAMMOND.

Fishkill-on-Hudson, N. Y.

It is a work of art and should be in the hands of all live florists. Its useful and instructive contents can not fail to be a benefit to all in the trade.

C. C. POLLWORTH Co.

Milwaukee, Wis.

The book is written for the working gardener, and Mr. Scott's reputation is so well secured that he will find among his gardening friends a host of genuine admirers. As a writer on practical gardening subjects, he is a recognized authority. * * * Mr. Scott has long been an employer and knows what information young gardeners, or those with little experience, need, and he has his whole subject so perfectly at command that he can give the most desirable and essential information in the clearest language and with satisfactory brevity. The book is a distinct and important gain to the practical garden literature of this country, and it should be in the hands of every gardener, and everyone else engaged or interested in ornamental horticulture. The price of the book is $5, which seems somewhat high, but for useful information it is worth every cent of it.—Vick's Magazine.

Am well pleased with the Manual. It is a practical, everyday helper, concise and to the point.

W. A. KENNEDY.

Milwaukee, Wis.

Am very much pleased with the book; it is very handy for reference.

Macomb, Ill.

F. E. BONHAM.

Unlike so many of our books, it has the very flavor and essence of actual experience.

L. H. BAILEY.

Ithaca, N. Y.

We find the book very useful as a reference in answering the many questions about plants that we receive almost every day.

Philadelphia. JOS. KIFT & SON.

Detroit, Mich., January 6, 1900.—Mr. Wm. Scott, Buffalo, N. Y. Dear Sir: The Commissioners of Parks and Boulevards some time since directed that a library be started of such books as deal with subjects pertaining to park work, and to that end, an order has been given for a number of books, among which is your "The Florists' Manual."

After reading this book carefully, I am greatly pleased, and wish to congratulate you on the practical manner with which you have treated the subject.

This book is placed where it will be accessible to all of our greenhouse employes, where this board expects to reap a reward many times the cost of the book. Respectfully yours,

COMMISSIONERS OF PARKS AND BOULEVARDS,

R. J. CORYELL, Gen'l Sup't.

I am more than pleased with The Florists' Manual.

OTT BROWN.

Cape May City, N. J.

Manual to hand. Am well satisfied that it is the best work of its kind ever published.

JAS. HARTSHORNE.

Joliet, Ill.

I am greatly pleased with the Manual.

C. J. REARDON.

Lake Geneva, Wis.

Enclosed find $5.00 in payment for the copy of the Florists' Manual. No progressive florist, old or young, can afford to be without the Florists' Manual. The old florist needs it, for reference, to aid a defective memory, and the young florist wants it as a guide in this progressive era of the florist's business.

J. T. TEMPLE.

Davenport, Ia.

Electricity.

Electricity is still an unknown quantity; no one now living can tell what uses it may yet be put to. The possibilities are immeasurable. The great benefits it has rendered to floriculture will never be fully appreciated, because we live in an age when people are accustomed to all manner of phenomena, and quickly cease to wonder at anything except, perhaps, the cupidty of fame and fortune according to magnified ideas.

Let us consider electricity as an adjunct to decorative art, or merely as a means of illuminating your place of business. Some of you even today continue to use gas, to the detriment of plants and flowers, and consequently your purse. Any florist with any pretension to either artistic temperament or any degree of ambition has his store illuminated by electricity; but what puzzles us most is the poor taste displayed in the arranging of the lights. Everything seems to be left to the electrician, who, although a good mechanic, is more often a bad artist, and despite the fact that everything about one's store is supposed to reflect the judgment or ability of the proprietor.

Electricity employed in lighting up a store should not be considered merely from an economic point of view, but as a means of producing and illustrating beauty. The manner of doing this depends much on your own ingenuity, because recent inventions and improvements place almost every effect within easy accomplishment. Now supposing you took away those evenly arranged rows of incandescent lamps 'round the framework of your window and inserted, say, six or ten of them, in a large cut glass globe in the center of the top of the window; the effect is far more beautiful. Whatever pretty effect may be got from frosted electric globes there is absolutely none in plain ones, especially when arranged in rows and devoid of reflectors. If you will study your window you will find that more pleasing results will be obtained from shaded lights; the glare of the light is too common to attract; hide it with a shade that will cast the rays on your plants and flowers.

Electric signs outside your window are not only a foolish waste of money and effort, but are an indication that you ape the sporty and vulgar. A good name and business need no brazen illumination; have all your light artistically arranged inside, for even if your trade be in poor quarters the poorest appreciate the refinement of quietness; people will not patronize you for the quantity of lights you display, but rather for yourself and your methods.

Now, when we consider electricity from a decorative standpoint, we must cut loose from any indifferent feeling. We are too well aware of the fact that there are many florists who imagine they cannot be taught anything, but most of their work cannot stand analysis; that's where bluffs are boomerangs. We must first remember how difficult it was and is to decorate where gas is used; the dread of fire many times prevented the execution of certain designs and made our work seem incomplete. It is not so with the light of the times; electricity not only adds its glory to decorative work, but it has encouraged and increased the fashion and forms of floral art by its imparting a confidence of security. We should not be content to rest at that, but convert it into being a part of our design. You may hang all the garlands you like among incandescent lights; the effect is glarish and spoiled, unless you take steps to make the whole a symphony.

Colored glass is undesirable because the colors and effects are circumscribed; much more satisfactory results can be got from shaded lights; the shades can be made of silk, cheese cloth or crepe paper; these can be had in every shade of color; they cost very little and can be used for many affairs. Decorations always appear best under a mildly subdued light, such as that as is commonly known as Oriental; this is particularly so where a large quantity of greenery is used, but even in the most brilliantly lighted hall or ballroom soft hued lights are best.

There is no reason why you should not take entire charge of the total effect in a particular decoration; we have often done so. In rooms where an abundance of vines and plants were used we have covered the lights with green silk shades; if we thought a contrast would emphasize beauty we have put red in some alcove or corner to be used for a cozy retreat. In rooms where yellow, pink or red prevails there is no reason why the lights should not be the same shade, always remembering that harmony is the greatest producer of pleasure in art as in society.

The time will come when electricity will be used instead of the, in most cases, dirty and annoying candles for table decoration. Nay, even now it is often used more satisfactorily in this way; not only can batteries be placed beneath the table, but the power can be obtained from any ordinary circuit; careful insulation is all that is necessary; the wires can be hidden beneath rugs. As for a lamp, you can get them in any shape, size or color, and they can be inserted inside many kinds of flowers; only one color is permissible on a table.

Alexander McConnell, at 45th street and Fifth avenue, New York City, has had a small electric fountain in one of his windows all this season; it is very attractive; six distinct colors are shown; it is conducted by connection to the wires in the store and doesn't cost very much. The possibilities in this line are very great, not only in store and decorative attractions, but they might also be a leading feature in flower shows.

The florist who is always anxious to be ahead will find much to help him in a study of light and shade. It is possible now to have shower effects in "fairy lamps"; they can be made very beautiful where the electrician works in harmony with the florist. Keep the wires, even the lights, away from your plants, for they will not stand a too close proximity; 'tis better for you to use string than wire when working close to electrical wires.

There were many thousands of incandescent lights used in the decorations illustrated this week, and though the whole scene was very brilliant, there were places here and there where if clustered shaded colors were used the effect would have been still more beautiful.

Ball Decoration.

The Arion Society of New York is perhaps the leading German society in the United States. Every year they give a carnival ball in the Madison Square Gardens, New York. The expenses amount to about $28,000. The price of admission for lady and gentlemen is $10.00. The affairs are very successful.

Hanft Bros. have always had charge of the decorations, and this year we had some photographs of them specially taken for this department of the Review. These pictures were taken by time exposures and under great difficulties. The reason why we don't show you illustrations of the fine decorations done by New York florists is because the proprietors of the halls where banquets and festivals occur dread flash lights, and usually otherwise the light is too poor.

These pictures show you the interior of the main hall of the Madison Square Gardens; it is the finest exhibition building in the country. It is a very difficult building to decorate, perhaps the second hardest we have in New York; the stretch of roof is enormous and the decorator must creep out on each girder and carry his stuff with him; even the nerviest man in such a case holds his heart in his mouth and carries his life on his finger tips. Imagine yourself there struggling with hands and feet to guard your life and with eyes to create a beautiful scene.

These decorations are the highest type of American work in the composite class. Of course this is for a masked ball; a hired ballet and several floats are used, and all is arranged to produce the finest spectacular effects. The details of the affair may be faulty, but the whole creates a very beautiful picture. In the center of the floor they erected a white and gold pagoda; this was also a blaze of electric lights. (We ourselves would prefer an electric fountain there.) A promenade walk about 20 feet wide is partitioned off all around the hall; this is done by a 4-foot hedge of hemlock; here and there, especially at the base of the statuettes shown, are grouped cinerarias, azaleas and various kinds of bulb stock without particular attention as to color harmony, the idea being to give the impression of what are known as "Dutch Garden" effects.

The ceiling is almost covered with colored bunting and heavy garlands of hemlock roping, to which are attached strings of electric lights and paper paeony flowers. Some very good decorative work can be seen on the sides of the building. Several thousand yards of red, white, green and yellow cheese cloth is gracefully looped and outlined, and framed with garland or greenery.

At one spot near the center of the ceiling is suspended an 8-foot ball of green; in this are heaps of favors and fifty live doves; when the festival is at full swing this ball is opened by means of a cord and the contents scatter over the floor.

In these decorations are used ten thousand yards of hemlock roping, 10,000 paper flowers, 250 bundles of hemlock branches, 20 cases of wild smilax, several hundred long needle pines, a great quantity of spangled bannerettes and bunting. The job was an herculean one, and Fred Hanft, who had charge of it, deserves great credit for the manner in which it was done. It affords us much pleasure to be able to show it to our readers, no matter what part of the world they may live in. It shows the kind of work no American need be ashamed of, and that the others may get points from.

The Carnation Cup.

The conditions under which the American Carnation Society offered its silver cup for carnation design at Buffalo are vastly amusing. Some genius twisted lots of spaghetti strings around that little cup. Now if it could only be awarded for some "new use" for carnations, why didn't they gather up a company of chefs to make concoctions of carnation soup, carnation stew, carnation pie, a timbal, ragout or compote of carnation? A "new" use for carnations, forsooth; what is badly wanted is a new and sensible element on that schedule as well as in many more.

CYCLAMEN—SWEET ALYSSUM.

Please tell us what culture is the best for cyclamens, and how to keep them in the summer.

Where can we get the long-stemmed alyssum?
B. B. & S.

The culture of this most important plant, the cyclamen, has been often written up in the columns of the trade journals. Presuming that you now have small plants in 2 or 2½-inch pots that were sown in October or November, the principal points to observe will be that they be given plenty of light. If the house is not a modern one, then put the cyclamen on a shelf near the glass. Shift into 3 or 4-inch as soon as well rooted in the smaller pots. Put a little drainage in bottom of pot, because the cyclamen needs plenty of watering and syringing. Never let them get killing dry, and to avoid this a shade during the brightest hours of the day is most desirable, but a permanent shade that would be on them at all hours would be very hurtful to them.

The finest cyclamen are now given the hotbed treatment during June, July, August and September, and even with care part of May and October. The bottom heat of the hotbed is most beneficial, but at no time should be violent, as from a newly made bed. Some growers keep the top of pot about even with the top edge of frame, and by a slight framework of wood keep the sash (either glass or slats or cloth shading) a few inches above the plants. By this method there is a current of air continually over and among the plants. This has a tendency to make compact plants with a moderate amount of foliage and very floriferous.

Other growers, among them the large market growers, sink the plants lower, so that the sash when on the frame in the ordinary way will be but a few inches above the plants. The sash can be tilted at one end, or on very warm days at both back and front. By this latter plan the largest and finest plants are produced. The ammonia arising from the fermenting material of the hotbed has undoubtedly the result of producing fine leaf growth, but by no means to the detriment of the quality or number of flowers.

Briefly, cyclamen should never be stunted for want of pot room up to September, and never suffer from extreme dryness. A good turfy loam, with a third of well rotted leaf mould does well for the soil. Few plants are troubled more with greenfly and more easily hurt. A regular fumigation is most essential. This is not so easy to do when in a frame, but then a weekly syringing with a solution of either the "Nikoteen" or "Rose Leaf" extract will keep the aphids down.

The sweet alyssum subscriber inquires about is the double form of the well known little plant and is most useful for edges of flower beds or boxes. Look in the trade journals and you will see that several people advertise rooted cuttings. It roots easily and quickly. It is continually wanting to flower, so keep the flowers pinched off or you won't get growth.

RATS DESTROYING CARNATION FLOWERS.

A distressed correspondent wishes to know how to prevent this; and as we have been annoyed as he is, and have apparently solved the difficulty, I hasten to give our brethren the benefit of our experience.

The rats destroyed several hundred flowers for us in a very few nights; and although we had box traps, spring traps, steel traps, and wire traps set in various ways and places, the loss kept increasing, until Mus rattus became a wholesale customer, and the only collections we were able to make on his account were of the shattered remains of the flowers every morning. We put strychnine in the center of little blocks of fresh beef, which were laid on the benches, convenient for rat lunches, but although these were moved about by them, I think we succeeded in poisoning but one rat. The same poison was mixed with cornmeal in little pot saucers, and temptingly displayed, but they would not partake; and poisons are always dangerous things to have about, even if you do succeed in killing some of the vermin they are meant for.

The situation grew worse, until as a last resort we got a ferret and turned it loose in a large potting shed connected with our carnation houses. The first night we had it about six flowers were eaten, but since then (now over two weeks) we have seen no evidence of either rats or mice, and mice are often very destructive about the seed pans.

The ferret so far has not injured any

BULB GROWING IN THE SOUTH.

Why not grow the million dollars' worth of bulbs that we import each year into this country. We have in this country every kind of climate and soil that is to be found anywhere on earth, and is there any reason why we cannot produce in this country all of the bulbs and plants that we import? A protective tariff of 25 per cent ought to be sufficient to encourage this infant industry, if it needs protection. For my part I can see no reason why bulb growing cannot become the most profitable industry in this country.

I have been studying the possibilities of bulb growing for some time and believe there is nothing that will pay as well. Last season on one-third of an acre I planted $60 worth of gladiolus bulbs and bulblets and produced a crop worth $400. I believe that with a milder climate and a longer season, such as can be found in our southern states, even better results can be obtained. I recently spent a few weeks in southwestern Alabama looking for a suitable location for bulb growing and studying the possibilities of that part of the country, and

I am more than pleased with what I learned there. Gladiolus and cannas are left in the open ground all winter in the gardens that I visited, and I never saw finer narcissus bulbs in my life than I dug up in an old garden there. All bulbs that have been tested seem to be perfectly at home, but hardly any one has ever given a thought to the commercial possibilities of bulb culture.

In a short time I intend to return to the south and put out a stock of bulbs, and meanwhile I wish that any of your southern readers who have had even a slight experience with any kind of bulbs in the south would give us through the Review a few notes on their experiences.

ON THE HORNS OF A BUFFALO.

I read Buffalo's severe remarks in the Review of last week to my friend Sam De Graw, who feels sorry that his half-joking impressions should have been taken so seriously by Buffalo, and hopes that no one else will feel so much hurt by them.

The show was a grand one, and I myself heard Sam tell Buffalo as much, but when everybody praises a thing sometimes a few notes in a minor key will set those most interested to thinking, and Buffalo has evidently thought about the scoring nonsense or he would not have said what he did of it.

He admits, as very few scorers are willing to do, that scoring is done by comparison, as Sam said it was, and why not stop at that? Sam says that he would be perfectly willing to allow Buffalo to judge a seedling of his, if he was fortunate enough to have one, and tell him whether or not it was good enough for a certificate, without the humbuggery of scoring it to eighty-seven and three-quarter points, as some pretend to be able to do. Sam has had to do with scoring and scorers before Buffalo ever split fractions in its application, and has seen so many absurdities result from it that he has always opposed the plan, but he has no expectation that Buffalo and others will drop it for that reason.

From Buffalo's remarks one might infer that Sam would scarcely know a carnation when he saw one, but this is wrong, for there are few florists in the country who have watched the development of the carnation more closely than he has, or with more interest. He was growing Day-break—the most profitable commercial carnation for years if not to date—for one or two seasons before Buffalo had it; tests the best new ones as they appear, already has some of the best newest ones of this year, and is intrusted with kinds that will not be distributed for some time to come, that the grower may have his

MISCELLANEOUS SEASONABLE HINTS.

Seed Sowing.

It will soon be time to sow the main crop of all our so-called hardy annuals, such as asters, zinnias, Phlox Drummondii, Ten-week stocks, French and African marigold, calendula, dianthus (under which name we know the different China pinks).

Cobea should also now be sown. In sowing Cobea there is a right and wrong end to press in the soil, but it is not easy to explain which is the proper end to insert in the soil, and you will do very well by squeezing each seed in edgeways. Don't cover with soil; by pressing the seed into the soft soil it needs no covering, and if kept in a night temperature of 60 degrees and moderately moist it will all germinate, for the seed we get nowadays is mostly all good.

The annuals mentioned above are best sown in flats, or if smaller quantities, in pans. In flats 3 inches deep (they are the same that we use for forcing bulbs) we put 1½ inches of the siftings of our potting soil, and then one inch of sifted loam and leaf mould, about equal parts. When the surface has been pressed down slightly firm and with even surface, give them a good soaking, and when the water has soaked clear away sow the seed and then cover with the same compost finely and evenly, and then the slightest watering will suffice. They will hardly need a heavy watering before the seed is up.

Florists know generally how much of a covering of soil is needed. A balsam seed would push up through several inches of soil, but in our operations just soil enough to cover the seed out of sight is sufficient. About 50 degrees at night will suit all these seeds, and light is of no importance till they are up, when a full exposure is of the greatest importance. If you don't have these little seedlings well in the light they will immediately get drawn up and spindling, and with seedlings it is most essential that they should start right. Seeds sown the middle of this month will be in good shape to transplant into other flats and be placed in a cold-frame or very mild hotbed by the middle of April; utilizing space economically is the great effort in greenhouse management, and it would never do to occupy much bench room with these cheap annuals.

Ivy Geraniums.

There should be no time lost now with the propagating bench. Ivy geraniums can be put in now, and if grown on in good, rich soil, will make very acceptable plants for baskets and vases. These beautiful geraniums are often inclined to flower early and profusely; if you want them to grow, which you certainly do, you should keep all buds picked off. The ivy geranium requires entirely different treatment from the zonal type. If not droopers they are trailers, and for our vase work we have to grow them on shelves, where the growths can hang down and receive fresh air; but when tied up with a couple of stakes they make a fine plant for Decoration Day and answer the desired purpose just as well as a zonal, for of the thousands of plants in pots taken to the cemeteries, there is but a small proportion expected to last more than a few days. Where a permanent summer effect is wanted, the ivy geraniums should not be planted, for they quickly go out of flower. But, again, where the roots are confined, as in a vase, they continue to bloom quite satisfactorily.

Propagating.

No part of your sand should be vacant a day now, for spring will soon be here, and the conditions for propagating many things is then less favorable. Acalypha, salvia, achyranthes, coleus, ageratum, feverfew and all the ordinary bedding plants should be multiplied as fast as possible. And don't forget lobelia and the double-flowered sweet alyssum, two of the most useful plants for veranda boxes.

Vincas, Etc.

The vinca, both variegated and the faintly striped, which I believe is Harrisoni, that were propagated in October, should now be soon shifted into 3 or 3½-inch pots. They will soon make shoots from the bottom, and if given the edge of a bed, where they can hang over, will make splendid plants by middle of May, and they are so convenient to use, as they are in small pots. I might add that the soil for these should be of the richest, as it is growth you want.

The Abutilon vexillarium should also be treated the same way, but a 3-inch pot is always large enough for them, and never let them get rooted into any bed, or they make a rank growth, but suffer badly when used.

Club Exhibition.

The carnation show of the Gardeners' Club, February 26th, was successful, so far as heavy attendance of visitors went, as seems usual here with free shows, though the exhibits were far behind those of a year ago. But for the handsome collection of cinerarias and cyclamens brought in by Mr. E. Holden, gardener to Mrs. Robert Garrett, and the well grown group of foliage plants staged by Halliday Bros., there would have been a paucity of material. The decorative pieces of S. Feast & Sons, which gave distinction and graceful effect to the exhibition of 1899, were not replaced. Nor were the carnations up to the high water mark of the preceding year, and there were, indeed (although several exhibitors had each some good ones), no such notably well bloomed collections.

Mr. John Cook's white seedling from Mrs. Bradt was immense in size, handsome in form, well built up, and of good color and foliage. It was rated superior to any white yet shown, though H. Weber & Son's unnamed seedling was a close and promising second. This firm had also, of course, a vase of their Genevieve Lord, upright of growth, bright of color, and with perfect calyx. Isaac H. Moss showed Mrs. Bradt and White Cloud, well done, and Halliday Bros. a collection of standard sorts and good examples of their Mack Raymond, red, introduced to the public this season.

The gem of the show was a vase of Jubilee staged by Lehr Bros., which left nothing to be demanded in form, stem, brilliance of hue and fine finish. Fredk. A. Bauer entered good Daybreaks, and H. F. Michell, of Philadelphia, the new candidate for favor, Mrs. Bertram Lippincott. Some were disappointed that The Marquis and Olympia were not seen on the tables.

The varieties originated by Charles M. Wagner were exhibited by Halliday Bros; one of these is a cerise pink, 3½ to 3¾ inches; another a maroon with 3-inch flower, perfect calyx, and good, strong grower; and a striped pink or clear white, with stiff stem and good calyx.

John Cook's new rose "Baltimore,"

a rich, creamy white, suffused with pink, of great size and with fine, heavy foliage and good stems, attracted great attention, as did also the white rose Ivory, of the American Rose Co., of Washington, D. C. This is a sport from Golden Gate, of large size, great substance and fine stems. The vase of Gates of this concern was not up to the splendid show they made last year. The demand upon their houses has been such that their roses have not had a chance for perfect development. Mr. Edwin A. Seidewitz had some well bloomed azaleas.

Club Meeting.

At the club's meeting in the evening, Mr. Wm. B. Sands and Mr. James Pentland withdrew from the club. Mr. Sands was the instigator, if not the originator, of the club, and had been its treasurer since its start. He had been the secretary, almost during its entire existence, of the Maryland Horticultural Society. This was mainly a plant society, composed of amateurs, especially men of means with a fondness for plants and flowers, and of commercial growers. Some attention was paid to fruits and vegetables, but at its shows the collections at private places were mainly drawn upon to make noteworthy public displays. Mr. Sands saw that in a society of this sort there was no place for the practical men, and after some discussion with the managers he received authority to call, and assembled a meeting of the working gardeners and florists, employers and employes, to provide for regular meetings to discuss topics of interest to the trade. The idea proved a success, and from this initiative began the Gardeners' Club.

Mr. Sands, who had long been editor of the American Farmer, an agricultural paper, was for years the only amateur member, but later became engaged commercially in the production of cut flowers. He continues to describe his place as "amateurish," but it is said to be now quite considerable in extent and to give products of average quality. He has as its manager Mr. John L. Hogarth, an intelligent and competent young cultivator, formerly known to the trade here.

Mr. Pentland, as the readers of The Review know, is one of the oldest and most respected florists here, and was quite recently president of the club. It is understood these resignations resulted from dissatisfaction with a recent admission to the club. Differing from most organizations, where two or three black balls reject, here a majority must vote against a candidate to defeat him.

Some preparatory steps were taken to prepare for the carnation convention.

Notes.

Plans have been drawn for and work will soon begin on three new greenhouses, each 12x106 feet, at St. Mary's Industrial School. This is a reformatory institution for boys, under church control, but largely supported by the city. There is already quite a large amount of glass there under which is grown bedding stuff and cut flowers, which find their way to our market.

The houses, and all the necessary labor, which is furnished by the inmates of the school, are leased to a florist, and the competition of products grown by this class of labor is antagonized strongly by the trade. It is a development of the ever recurring opposition to the employment of the inmates of penal institutions and reformatories in trades competing with other workmen. Indeed, the training of the class of boys to the gardener's business is much objurgated.

Up to this time (March 3) the demand for flowers continues quite equal to the supply, and the promise is that whilst large social functions will be less numerous, the milder and smaller festivities of Lent will continue to require pretty much all the output of flowers which this market affords.

Whatever else the "Spindle" city may lack in, it has made noteworthy strides in so far as modern, up-to-date floral establishments are concerned. I doubt if any other city of its size can opinion of their merits; and he is, I assure Buffalo, fully awake. He is a fossilist but not a fossil.

Buffalo must not assume that because a man does not dwell on the classic banks of Conjockety Creek or does not enthuse over the antics of Steve Brody's Undines—but that won't do; Undine was a water nymph.

MISCELLANEOUS SEASONABLE HINTS.

Seed Sowing.

It will soon be time to sow the main crop of all our so-called hardy annuals, such as asters, zinnias, Phlox Drummondii, Ten-week stocks, French and African marigold, calendula, dianthus (under which name we know the different China pinks).

Cobea should also now be sown. In sowing Cobea there is a right and wrong end to press in the soil, but it is not easy to explain which is the proper end to insert in the soil, and you will do very well by squeezing each seed in edgeways. Don't cover with soil; by pressing the seed into the soft soil it needs no covering, and if kept in a night temperature of 60 degrees and moderately moist it will all germinate, for the seed we get nowadays is mostly all good.

The annuals mentioned above are best sown in flats, or if smaller quantities, in pans. In flats 3 inches deep (they are the same that we use for forcing bulbs) we put 1½ inches of the siftings of our potting soil, and then one inch of sifted loam and leaf mould, about equal parts. When the surface has been pressed down slightly firm and with even surface, give them a good soaking, and when the water has soaked clear away sow the seed and then cover with the same compost finely and evenly, and then the slightest watering will suffice. They will hardly need a heavy watering before the seed is up.

Florists know generally how much of a covering of soil is needed. A balsam seed would push up through several inches of soil, but in our operations just soil enough to cover the seed out of sight is sufficient. About 50 degrees at night will suit all these seeds, and light is of no importance till they are up, when a full exposure is of the greatest importance. If you don't have these little seedlings well in the light they will immediately get drawn up and spindling, and with seedlings it is most essential that they should start right. Seeds sown the middle of this month will be in good shape to transplant into other flats and be placed in a cold-frame or very mild hotbed by the middle of April; utilizing space economically is the great effort in greenhouse management, and it would never do to occupy much bench room with these cheap annuals.

Ivy Geraniums.

There should be no time lost now with the propagating bench. Ivy geraniums can be put in now, and if grown on in good, rich soil, will make very acceptable plants for baskets and vases. These beautiful geraniums are often inclined to flower early and profusely; if you want them to grow, which you certainly do, you should keep all buds picked off. The ivy geranium requires entirely different treatment from the zonal type. If not droopers they are trailers, and for our vase work we have to grow them on shelves, where the growths can hang down and receive fresh air; but when tied up with a couple of stakes they make a fine plant for Decoration Day and answer the desired purpose just as well as a zonal, for of the thousands of plants in pots taken to the cemeteries, there is but a small proportion expected to last more than a few days. Where a permanent summer effect is wanted, the ivy geraniums should not be planted, for they quickly go out of flower. But, again, where the roots are confined, as in a vase, they continue to bloom quite satisfactorily.

Propagating.

No part of your sand should be vacant a day now, for spring will soon be here, and the conditions for propagating many things is then less favorable. Acalypha, salvia, achyranthes, coleus, ageratum, feverfew and all the ordinary bedding plants should be multiplied as fast as possible. And don't forget lobelia and the double-flowered sweet alyssum, two of the most useful plants for veranda boxes.

Vincas, Etc.

The vinca, both variegated and the faintly striped, which I believe is Harrisoni, that were propagated in October, should now be soon shifted into 3 or 3½-inch pots. They will soon make shoots from the bottom, and if given the edge of a bed, where they can hang over, will make splendid plants by middle of May, and they are so convenient to use, as they are in small pots. I might add that the soil for these should be of the richest, as it is growth you want.

The Abutilon vexillarium should also be treated the same way, but a 3-inch pot is always large enough for them, and never let them get rooted into any bed, or they make a rank growth, but suffer badly when used.

Club Exhibition.

The carnation show of the Gardeners' Club, February 26th, was successful, so far as heavy attendance of visitors went, as seems usual here with free shows, though the exhibits were far behind those of a year ago. But for the handsome collection of cinerarias and cyclamens brought in by Mr. E. Holden, gardener to Mrs. Robert Garrett, and the well grown group of foliage plants staged by Halliday Bros., there would have been a paucity of material. The decorative pieces of S. Feast & Sons, which gave distinction and graceful effect to the exhibition of 1899, were not replaced. Nor were the carnations up to the high water mark of the preceding year, and there were, indeed (although several exhibitors had each some good ones), no such notably well bloomed collections.

Mr. John Cook's white seedling from Mrs. Bradt was immense in size, handsome in form, well built up, and of good color and foliage. It was rated superior to any white yet shown, though H. Weber & Son's unnamed seedling was a close and promising second. This firm had also, of course, a vase of their Genevieve Lord, upright of growth, bright of color, and with perfect calyx. Isaac H. Moss showed Mrs. Bradt and White Cloud, well done, and Halliday Bros. a collection of standard sorts and good examples of their Mack Raymond, red, introduced to the public this season.

The gem of the show was a vase of Jubilee staged by Lehr Bros., which left nothing to be demanded in form, stem, brilliance of hue and fine finish. Fredk. A. Bauer entered good Daybreaks, and H. F. Michell, of Philadelphia, the new candidate for favor, Mrs. Bertram Lippincott. Some were disappointed that The Marquis and Olympia were not seen on the tables.

The varieties originated by Charles M. Wagner were exhibited by Halliday Bros; one of these is a cerise pink, 3½ to 3¾ inches; another a maroon with 3-inch flower, perfect calyx, and good, strong grower; and a striped pink or clear white, with stiff stem and good calyx.

Whatever else the "Spindle" city may lack in, it has made noteworthy strides in so far as modern, up-to-date floral establishments are concerned. I doubt if any other city of its size can boast of as many flower stores within a radius of four square blocks. However, it is quality, rather than quantity, that I wish to dwell upon briefly.

A surprise in store for the writer was a brand new flower store at No. 8 Merrimack Square, in the very heart of the business center. Messrs. Patten & Roberts are the presiding geniuses of this new establishment, having moved thither some six months ago from 293 Centre street. As they never do things by halves, it goes without saying that their new establishment is all that could be desired. An immense prospects brighter and more encouraging. S.

PHILADELPHIA.

Up to this writing Lent has cut little or no figure with the retail florist in this city. The majority report business as exceeding their expectations. Transient trade has been very good.

Prices.

would be time well spent, there being an exceptionally fine lot of roses to be seen. The following varieties are represented: Two houses of Bridesmaid, two center tables of Beauties, and four side tables of Brides. There is no question as to the quality of this stock. There are 5,000 Beauty cuttings in the sand bed, which look very promising. Half a house is devoted to Nephrolepis Bostoniensis, principally in 6 and 7-inch pots; the other half is filled up with Pandanus Veitchii, ranging from 3 to 8-inch pots, which are also very fine. He also grows lily of the valley, which he does very fine. Mr. Y. has added a vault to his establishment for keeping cut flowers.

Mr. Ed. Seidewitz, of Annapolis, Md., favored us with a visit the past week. R.

BOSTON.

The inevitable has struck us. We have "Lent" our customers to the prevailing season to a large extent. But funeral work is in good demand and we ghoulishly live upon the proceeds. Any line of goods that cannot possibly be used upon funeral occasions feels the situation most keenly, but as high colored material is not very plentiful, things are not so bad after all, and best grades of pink and white roses seem to have fewer friends than usual. Still, a few of the best are said to be bringing as high as $2.50 per dozen, while many of the poorest change hands on a basis of $2 per 100. Red roses are getting rather overgrown in quantity, but are good in quality, with prices wavering a little. Beauties from $1 to $6, Meteors from 25 cents to $2 per dozen, and Jacks, Brunners and Liberties as yet too scarce to obtain a rating.

Carnations have been almost scarce, white ones really so. Prices? Oh, from 1½ to 3 cents on standard kinds and more on fancies if it could be obtained.

Bulb growers are feeling good on account of late results. Prices not high, but everything moving on fair profit. Easter lilies cropping out in all directions and selling quite well at $2 per dozen. Violets in full supply and selling all the way from 20 to 75 cents per 100.

Naturally our trade exhibit is the most formidable subject for an item, but as I had neither time nor talent, I delegated that subject to an accommodating friend, and hereby refer to his column in this issue.

[At time of going to press nothing had been received from the accommodating friend.—Ed.]

There has been a grand changing around of the working force among the city stores lately, but it excited but little comment until news was out that E. M. Wood's head salesman, Malloy, had surrendered his position. This causes talk. He has been a power in the distribution of the millions of the Waban sheds of roses year after year and was supposed to be as much a fix-window, showing an artistic display of the choicest the market affords; a magnificent ice chest, elaborate counters and fixtures, incandescent lights, and, last but not least, their cozy little office up a flight of stairs—a sort of sanctum sanctorum—all this cannot help but attract as well as invite the passer-by.

Next in order, I am informed, will be a delivery wagon, one to be fully in touch with the progressive spirit of the age as well as with the store and their span of spirited horses.

J. J. McManmon reports a decided improvement all along the line. Both his roses and carnations do well.

Whittet & Co. have opened a store at 293 Centre street, the place formerly occupied by Patten & Roberts.

Business has never been better, nor nary, $1 to $2; fancies, $3 to $5; cypripediums, $15; hyacinth, $1 to $4; valley, $3 to $4; narcissus, $2 to $4; daffodils, $2 to $4; sweet peas, $2 to $3; tulips, $2 to $4; mignonette, $3 to $4; callas, $10; violets, single 30 to 40 cents, double 50 cents to $1; asparagus, $50; smilax, $15; adiantum, $1.

Notes.

W. L. Schaffer, of 223 North Sixteenth street, has been very busy the past week, having considerable funeral work to execute. One would wonder how he gets all this trade, being one of those side-street florists, but he gets there just the same. Mr. S. is a man of push and ambition, which undoubtedly accounts for his success.

ture as one of the huge boilers on the place. Doctors disagree as to the most frightful way to exterminate mankind, Boer generals as to the best methods of "kopjering" General Roberts on the veldt, or in the donga, but this is supposed to be the first case on record where a disagreement might exist between employer and employe in the florist business. But it looks that way.

While Mr. James Quinn, one of our best known, best liked and most respected florists, was in the Park street market Monday morning, word came to him of the sudden death of his wife, who has been ill a short time. While but few of us had the pleasure of her acquaintance, she had the assured reputation of a most estimable woman in every way. Her rare business qualities also made her of much assistance in Mr. Quinn's extensive retail trade in Brookline.

Much sympathy is expressed for the family in its affliction. B. T.

CARNATION THE MARQUIS.

We present herewith an engraving from a recent photograph of a house of this new pink carnation at the establishment of the originator, Mr. L. E. Marquisee, Syracuse, N. Y. It is certainly a very interesting picture, and the large number of buds indicates that the variety must be a very free producer. That the blooms rank with the best there is no doubt in the minds of those who have seen the splendid flowers exhibited.

We also present an engraving of a vase of blooms from a recent photograph.

ST. LOUIS.

The Market.

The cut flower market shows no sign of decline and trade has been running just about as usual, with business good and prices regular. Flowers are none too plentiful, except violets. Carnations are not increasing in quantity, but roses are coming in more freely.

Prices the past week were about the same as week before. Today (Monday) good roses bring from $5 to $8 per 100; for extra grades, $10 is being asked. Perles and Woottons, $4 to $5. Last week Kuehn received a batch of the old Papa Gontier, very finely grown and high in color, which puzzled some of the growers. On being asked if they could name it, some said it resembles the old Bennett; others wondered if it could be the new Liberty. It was hard to make them believe it was the old Gontier, as none has been seen in this market since '94. Beauties are still scarce and first-class stock is out of the question; $3 to $6 per dozen is asked for those coming in.

Carnations hold up remarkably well and are bringing good prices; $2 is asked for the common ones and $3 and $4 for fancy stuff, and not half enough comes in to supply the demand. Violets are selling cheaply; Californias, $2 per 1,000, 30 cents per 100; small single and southern stock, 10 cents per 100, and hard to sell at that. Bulb stock is in fair demand, owing to scarcity of other stock. Harrisii still holds at $12.50 and callas at $10; daffs, Dutch hyacinth, paper whites and Romans bring 2 and 3 cents; freesias, the best, sell at $2; tulips are very fine at $4; smilax still holds at $12.50, but sells slowly, with plenty of it on hand.

Various Notes.

The weather the past week has been very bad. Tuesday night a great rain, sleet and snow storm set in, causing much damage to fruit and shade trees, especially in the city parks and Shaw's Garden. The damage can hardly be estimated and will take years of labor to replace.

Wm. Schray, who was reported sick, is well again, and John Young, who was also on the sick list, is now O. K., and reports that hereafter he will be on hand every Monday.

Riessen Floral Co., on Broadway, report an excellent business since the first of the year, with plenty of orders ahead even during Lent.

The West End florists, Weber, Walbart, Mrs. Ayers, Miss Newman and Miss Ostertag, say business has kept up remarkably well since the first of the year.

More interest will have to be shown in our bowling club. This is the first time since we organized, in May, 1893, that the boys have failed to bowl regularly. It used to be twelve regulars every Monday night; now it's only five. No other florists' bowling club has such a record. We never failed to bowl once a week during the past seven years, but rolled at only three conventions. At home we came in third (good enough for greenhorns); at Omaha we won the cup and the championship, and at Detroit came in second, a record to be proud of. We must regain at New York this summer what we lost in Detroit. A full attendance is requested, as only twenty-three more bowling nights are left for practice.

Bowling.

The bowling club on Monday night had a very slim attendance. Only three dyed-in-the-wool cranks braved the rain storm and rolled five games. The scores are as follows:

	1	2	3	4	5	Tot.	Av.

Your correspondent received a letter this (Tuesday) morning from Mr. A. Henderson, secretary of the Chicago Florists' Bowling Club, inviting the St. Louis Florists' Bowling Club to visit them in the near future and play a match game, which will be acted upon next Monday, our regular bowling night, and no doubt the boys will gladly accept the challenge. So look out for us.

The February series of twenty games ended with Charlie Kuehn as our champion, with an average of 152 in twenty games, and Fred C. Weber as high single score man, with 211. Beneke came in second to Kuehn with 147 average in twenty games and second to Weber with 209. The averages are as follows:

Club Meeting.

At the meeting of the Florists' Club last Friday evening there was a good attendance and four new members were added to the roll. A few changes were made in the by-laws and the secretary instructed to have them printed and mail a copy to each member. It was decided to invite the S. A. F. to hold its annual convention in this city in 1901. A committee consisting of G. L. Grant, W. Kreitling and W. N. Rudd was appointed to arrange for transportation to the convention at New York next August.

Mr. C. J. Stromback, of Lincoln Park, announced that he expected to display at the next meeting flowers from the Washington grown bulbs that had been sent him for trial. They were doing better than he had anticipated and thought the members would find them very interesting. It was decided to make "Bulbs" the subject for the next meeting and to invite short papers on the subject from a number of well known growers, it being believed that a very useful and instructive discussion would result.

The Market.

Business has kept up remarkably well since Lent began, and though demand has fallen off somewhat, the dark weather has cut the supply in proportion, and the relation between the two is about the same as last week, with no appreciable change in prices. The call for white stock is noticeably strong and whenever there is a slight surplus it is generally in color. Good bulbous flowers are moving fairly well, but there are large quantities of inferior tulips and daffodils on the market that are cleaned up at "any old price."

Violets go slowly and will no doubt continue to hang until bright weather arrives. The Grand Rapids train due here at 7:15 a. m. Tuesday was reported stuck in a snow bank and hadn't arrived at a late hour in the afternoon.

We hear of considerable snow on the glass at some large establishments, which has materially darkened the houses. And as a result a good many split calyces on carnations. Varieties that never split before have done so during recent weather conditions. Dark houses and a close atmosphere seems to make the best of them split.

The season so far has been a very satisfactory one to the majority of the growers and dealers. During the twenty days preceding Lent the business done was enormous and far in excess of previous seasons, and the average returns on consignments were better than ever before at the season. There were no real gluts at any time and under-grade stuff had a much better chance than usual.

Various Items.

Wednesday morning of last week fire destroyed a shed and burned away the ends of three greenhouses at the establishment of Brant & Noe, at Forest Glen. The fire was quickly controlled and the loss was comparatively light. The ends of the houses were soon tightly closed with boards and builders' paper, and there was no trouble in maintaining desired temperature in the houses, as the plant is equipped with both steam and hot water heating apparatus. The loss on buildings was covered by insurance. There was some damage done to the plants in two houses, and, of course, this was not covered. The cause of the blaze is not known. It did not start from the heating system.

Mr. G. H. Pleser is back at his post at Kennicott Bros. Co., and deals in money now instead of justice.

Mr. Wm. Falconer, superintendent of Schenley Park, Pittsburg, spent last Thursday in the city. He was on his way home from his trip to California.

McKellar & Winterson are displaying an unusually fine lot of tuberose and caladium bulbs.

Mr. C. L. Washburn is suffering from an attack of grippe, and will leave Friday of this week for a two weeks' stay at West Baden, Ind.

E. H. Hunt is receiving some remarkably fine Brides and Maids.

NEW YORK.

Business? Well, dear reader, if we were to take heed of everyone's definition or description of business just at present, we'd write a polyglot of contradictions. People seldom know when they are well off, or perhaps it's a growing pain 'mong florists to complain. There is one thing, however, indisputable—that the florist of today has less cause to grumble than those of other years. If the trade papers would sometime publish all they hear or know, what a condition affairs would be in; it's more difficult to forget things than to write them down.

Our New York letters may be short in comparison to the importance and size of our city, but really, Mr. Editor, we have so many small things here, and so much foolishness, that it's hard to select things the same as they do in Buffalo, Hoboken, St. Louis and San Francisco; the only diversion we have is an occasional bowling match. We have no "Immortals" or home-like club houses, same as our suburbs, Boston and Philadelphia, and what does it matter if a Greek opens a flower stand on the corner of such a street; who cares?

Yes, to be sure we will have something here in the way of a rose show this month, and our friend, the Florists' Exchange, becomes alarmed because the New York Gardeners' Society wishes to have a carnation show at the same time. This city is big enough for a dozen shows; it's only the men and the circumstances that are at fault. In this present case the officers of the Rose Society not only wanted the carnation show, but also promised to give some prizes for carnations; all this was afterwards taken back. Now, notwithstanding this action of the Rose Society, no one wants to interfere with any possible success. The executive committee of the Gardeners' Society is urging all gardeners to exhibit at this rose show, and in order to make it worth many men's while to walk five miles across mountains and travel hundreds of miles on railroads they have arranged that the quarterly meeting and social gathering and carnation show of the Gardeners' Society will be held on the 27th of March. There is no thought of opposition; there can be none in this case; it's a matter of economy, so don't get alarmed. The Gardeners' Society have never received much encouragement from our contemporary; it can afford to treat the ambitions of its special agents differently.

Now, a word to growers. Most of you have worked hard to produce fine stock for Easter; you have succeeded; you depend on it for coal bills, etc., etc., etc.; then be careful whom you sell it to, and at what price. The man who has good plants need not give them away, nor yet sell them to those who never intend to pay for them; be a little careful, protect yourself as well as the honest retailer; look out for the "mushroom florist."

It's a funny thing gets into one's ear betimes. We have free lectures here in the public schools and they are under the jurisdiction of the Board of Education. Well, last week we attended one and the learned professor showed a picture of Strelitzia Reginae and told his audience that it was a "Tiger lily." Now, what we want to know from School Commissioners Schultheis and Rath, who have the greater honor to be florists in these parts, if this is the kind of education to give New York?

The New York bowlers have not yet recovered from the effects of their recent victory at Flatbush. The latest sayings are that the "Juniors" will be sent to tackle the Flatbushers next. Won't Philadelphia please come and settle the matter? Scores last night were:

SAN FRANCISCO.

Market Conditions.

Business and prices much the same as last week. The weather continues fine and crops of all kinds look well so far. The chrysanthemum and violet growers are busy just now making new plantations, and the weather at present suits such work. The acreage will be larger than last year.

Prices: American Beauties, $1 to $4 per dozen; Brides, Bridesmaids, and Testouts, 75 cents to $1; Meteors, 50 to 75 cents; Cecil Brunners, 12½ cents per dozen. Carnations, Hobart $1, Crocker 75 cents, Hill and mixed fancy 50 cents, Bradt and Gold Nugget 35 cents, Scott 25 cents, Portia 20 cents. Violets, Princess of Wales 50 cents to $1, Californias 40 to 50 cents, doubles 50 cents. Harrisii, $2 to $3 per dozen. Valley, 30 to 35 cents; Daffodils, $1 per 100. Tulips, 75 cents per 100.

Various Notes.

J. J. Williams, of Oakland, is now head gardener at the Masonic Home, Decoto, Cal. The grounds contain 200 acres and has its own water supply.

Mr. J. Nelson, lately with the Mountain View Cemetery Association, will go into partnership with H. Morse, Blair's Nursery, Oakland, Cal.

Mr. Thomas Sheppard, of Piedmont, Oakland, is bringing in some very good outside Homer roses. He says they sell. Well, perhaps they do; but I am inclined to think he brings Homer than he can sell.

Mr. N. Symnacopolus, our Broadway florist, has fitted up a snug little room at the back end of his store, and for many days his brother florists have been wondering what it all meant. Some declared he was going to bunk in the store; others said he had a safe in it. So, to settle the dispute, I called in one evening this week and found Mr. S. making a terrible noise on a twenty-dollar piano. Mr. S. is said to be a crank on music. I believe it. It was the crankiest music I ever heard. What a pity the piano don't have a crank. However, the instrument will be useful when he finds the cash register empty; he can ring up a few notes on the piano.

E. Gill, Oakland, Cal., reports business good with him this year. Many large orders for trees and roses keep him very busy.

Lacazettes & Co., on Fourteenth street, Oakland, Cal., report their first month in business as very satisfactory and beyond their expectations.

FLATBUSH, N. Y.

The unexpected has again happened; the New York beat the Flatbush team on their own alleys. The last of the series of games in the bowling tournament between the New York, Flatbush and North Hudson florists' bowling teams took place on the Flatbush alleys March 1st. Over fifty were in attendance, and every possible contrivance was adopted to encourage the bowlers. So much was this so that many became nervous and no amount of logic appeared to be able to upset the stubborn headpins. The excitement and overanxiety of the occasion seemed to have played havoc with many of the best bowlers. These gentlemen will of course know better next time. Determination to win seemed to have spurred the New Yorks; the Flatbushers became thoroughly demoralized and even allowed the Jerseyites to beat them by two pins.

Those who had the good fortune to be present will remember it for many a day. Whatever there may have been attached to the games played elsewhere, the affair at Flatbush was certainly the most enjoyable of all. The generosity of the "boys" here is known far and near, and when the whole crowd was taken to the Prospect Park Hotel to dinner, even the victors felt somewhat ashamed of their victory. We wish continental writers could have been at this social gathering, if only to hear Germans singing "The Marseillaise," and the French reciprocating by giving the "Watch on the Rhine."

Charles Zeller opened the short talks, and he, with Captains Traendly, Dailedouze and Brown, hoped they would see many more such gatherings. Butterfield sang "Sally in Our Alley," Stewart sang "Annie Laurie," Schmutz made a stump speech in Gaelic, Raynor was too full for utterance, Donlan spouted for "The Press," Hafner got hysterical from laughing, and so on. All thoroughly enjoyed themselves, and gave three cheers for the Flatbush Club. Following are the scores:

NEW YORK.

F. Traendly	124	128
P. O'Mara	142	136
L. Hafner	123	166
J. Manda	110	151
T. Roehrs	145	159
T. Lang	163	166
	897	906

FLATBUSH.

P. Riley	164	155
J. Raynor	136	84
L. Schmutz	141	119
W. Prosser	118	112
A. Zeller	109	152
E. Dailedouze	150	124
	818	746

HUDSON COUNTY.

M. Hansen	132	143
G. Kogge	111	120
P. Fischer	131	128
W. Hillebrecht	122	121
L. Hansen	121	96
G. Brown	121	140
	738	748

New York won the tournament, Flatbush taking second and Hudson County third place. When the games were decided and dinner was over, the whole party tried to beat their records, but the scores made are too incredible and we'll leave them out for peace's sake. D.

MAMARONECK, N. Y.

'Twill do anybody good to visit William Anderson at Mr. Constable's place here, because there's always something good in the way of flowers to be seen there. Mr. Anderson's antirrhinums are very grand; he has saved the seed for years and the strain is distinct and perfect. Some fine wisterias will be in bloom for Easter, and there is an immense variety of flowers for cutting, such as Canterbury Bells, sweet peas, myosotis, ranunculus, flowering shrubs and bulbous stock. Mr. Anderson's house of grafted Bridesmaid and Bride roses are very fine; he had poor results from those on own roots. His house of carnations is in splendid condition.

Thorwald Jensen has been having great luck with his violets. His extensive establishment is well worth visiting. He is at present sending on an average 26,000 Lady Campbell violets to the New York market every week and could send many more. The violet grower who is fast becoming gray headed pondering over the mysteries of successful violet culture would do well to see these houses; they are a sight; there are no theories employed, just common sense, systematically dispensed.

Mrs. Jensen is an expert on bunching; we never saw better or quicker work done; the flowers are counted and roughly tied in fifties by the picker; afterwards rebunched and single violet leaves are used for foliage. We wonder who has the record for quick gathering and bunching; here they calculate that one person can do over 1,500 a day.

The single violet, Princess of Wales, growing here, is very fine; the flowers are as large as small pansies and the stems a foot long. The California looks insignificant alongside of them. It is by far the best of all single violets.

Several hundred thousand Freesias are growing here; Mr. Jensen has been cutting freesia flowers since Dec. 16th. Daybreak is the only carnation grown and they have given much satisfaction. Immense quantities of lilac are being forced, and violet plants for Easter will be in good condition. D.

DENVER, COLO.

One notable feature in February was the lecture given to residents of Denver by Landscape Gardener Samuel Parsons, Jr., of New York. A number of prominent people and professionals were present. The subject was "American Landscape Gardening and Beautifying of Homes," and was well handled by Mr. Parsons to the satisfaction of all, except the professionals, who expected to hear of something more extraordinary in that line. The western nurserymen should send him a vote of thanks for aiding them in creating a demand for shrubs and low trees; the florist and tree trimmer, however, was not benefited thereby.

It is not my object to criticize the lecturer, but climatic conditions often change a man's notions, and the tastes, surroundings and experiences are so varied that it is impossible to suit everybody by imitating nature, especially when it is at the cost of comfort and convenience of the people with whom we have to deal.

The Swiss, German and French styles of landscape gardening all have their beauties, and the last named will surpass any for convenience and comfort, especially in smaller parks in cities, and it is more suitable to the surrounding architecture.

It is very true many Colorado people trim their trees too much; there are reasons for it, which Mr. Parsons has not had time to study or experience. One of these reasons why Colorado people trim their trees is the high winds, and to leave the trees in their natural shape would often mean disaster within a few years. Another reason, which Mr. Parsons has not considered, is that all trees which, when transplanted, were improperly pruned or cut squarely off, have not their natural shape, and after a time look more or less dilapidated, and they will not stand a heavy snow, while the leaves are on, without splitting to pieces.

The crippling of trees is not done by tree trimmers, but by tree butchers.

By imitating nature around the city residences one may make a very fine picture, and it has long been advocated, but whether it will fill the pockets of the florists is another question, and it is a good thing that different people have different tastes, which was clearly shown by the smiles of the audience when Mr. Parsons preferred the cottonwood, which has long been condemned here, to the maple, which is the most beloved and cleanest shade tree in the west.

A continuous row of trees on each side of a walk does not make a good landscape, but the people at large find more comfort walking in the shade than by looking at a fine landscape in the broiling hot sun, and it looks very queer, but we cannot help sticking to the English style, which has nearly crowded the French out of existence. Of course, the florist will stick to the flower beds every time, and will let the next generation imitate nature as they please. F. A. HAENSELMAN.

WASHINGTON.

Since the beginning of Lent business has taken a tumble. Dinners and luncheons of all kinds have stopped, but, owing to scarcity of good stock, prices keep up to the standard, with the exception of bulbous stock and violets.

Prices: La France, 10 to 12½ cents; Gates and Meteors, 8 to 10 cents; Maids and Brides, 6 to 8 cents; Perles, 6 cents; tulips, 1 to 4 cents; jonquils, 2 to 3 cents; Romans, 1 cent; valley, 4 cents; carnations, 1½ to 3 cents; smilax, 20 cents; asparagus, 50 to 75 cents.

One of the most brilliant occasions of the season was the marriage of the daughter of the British ambassador, which took place last week. The handsome decorations at St. John's Church were executed by J. L. Loose, and those at the residence were arranged by Shine & Davidson.

Our ex-president, W. F. Gude, was presented on Valentine eve with a handsome valentine in the shape of a bouncing baby boy, which makes No. 3. Keep it up, Will.

Holland has been well represented during the past week.

Wm. Crawford, of the Grant Place Flower Store, reports business good.

CINDERS FOR DRAINAGE.

Subscriber asks for information about cinders for drainage for rose bed.

I have a solid middle rose bed. In June, 1898, I removed part of the filling and put in 6 or 8 inches of coke cinders or ashes and gave them a thorough watering. I then put on 6 inches of rose soil and planted the roses the first of July; strong, thrifty plants from 3-inch pots. They started right on growing fine, and on August 1st were staked with galvanized wire stakes that were pushed through the cinders into the earth below.

About two weeks after staking two or three plants wilted and in a day or so dried up. This went on for a few days and it began to look desperate, when I saw that the soil on the surface around each dead plant was covered with rust. The sulphur in the coke cinders was destroying the stakes and this sulphur action on the stakes in turn was killing the roses.

I at once removed all the stakes and replanted the bed where plants were missing, and the trouble stopped as suddenly as it began.

I did not have quite enough coke cinders and filled in about 15 feet with cinders from the furnace without screening, in which the stakes were left. The line was very distinct where the coke and furnace cinders joined.

I traced some of the roots into the cinders and found them in a healthy condition. So I feel sure that the coal sulphur acted on the galvanized stakes and generated the poison that killed the plants. I have used the coke cinders in rose pots for drainage without injury to the plants.

Connellsville, Pa. P. R. DE MUTH.

NOTES BY THE WAY.

BUFFALO, N. Y.—Wm. Scott is making a big display of carnations from Corfu. Red Jacket and White Cloud are immense; so are Marie Louise violets.

ROCHESTER, N. Y.—A fine bed of myosotis may be seen at J. B. Keller's Sons. A very useful flower; it takes up very little space, being usually grown along the edge of the bench where a path is least used. Chatterton Warburton, of Fall River, grows a large quantity in this manner.

HORNELLVILLE, N. Y.—W. A. Wettlin has a healthy young stock for spring sales. Carnations have not flowered so good as usual, while the demand has been ahead of any previous season.

LANCASTER, N. Y.—Those of the convention crowd who visited the plant of W. J. Palmer & Son were well rewarded for making the trip. The sight of Daybreak was one to be long remembered. Although the day's picking had been done and the Buffalo store was supplied with the best blooms, even the casual observer could not fail to be impressed with the enormous crops that these plants must yield.

MONTREAL, QUE.—S. S. Bain was the first Canadian to invest in the new ageratum Stella Gurney. Mr. Bain sees a bright future for this acquisition. M.

Geo. L. Miller regrets having missed the opportunity of seeing "the grandest display of carnations" at the recent exhibit in Buffalo. Too bad, but another opportunity, George, will present itself in February, 1901, in Baltimore, "Maryland, My Maryland." Don't miss that!

There is still another opportunity—on Saturday, the 10th inst., at Cincinnati. Come ye all to the Queen City; it will be worth your while!

The two new houses, one 130x30 and the other one 100x12, built during the late fall, are stocked with as fine a lot of carnations as I beheld during my recent travels. The coming spring will see many other improvements about Miller's establishment. Besides building an additional carnation house of respectable size, Mr. Miller intends to extend six of his houses about ten feet each; he will also equip an office, which will adjoin a fine conservatory.

Mr. Miller reports trade good all along the line, his retail, wholesale and mailing business having surpassed his most sanguine expectations. S.

WASHINGTON.

At the Bromley-Pauncetote wedding the bride's bouquet was a large cluster of valley, with shower of white orchids, tied with sash of chiffon lace new open worked fancy satin ribbon. The four bridesmaids carried violet bunches tied with the same effects in violet color.

The church chancel was overshadowed by immense arecas eighteen feet high, their base being banked with white rhododendrons. The railing was entirely hidden by growing lilacs. On each side of the aisle stood a row of standard lilacs six feet high; these were covered with garland sashes and huge rosettes.

The above were supplied by J. Louis Loose. D.

COLLEGE POINT, N. Y.

If you are looking for extra fine flowering plants for Easter go and visit School Commissioner Anton Schultheis at College Point. His houses of pot roses are simply grand; not mere carelessly grown stock, but splendidly trained specimens. We never saw better Crimson, White, Yellow and Pink Ramblers; they are in all designs, and besides these there are houses of Moss roses, Baroness Rothschild, Brunners and several other fine sorts in nice size boxes and in good condition. Several beautiful new ericas are being introduced to the American public from here, and there are immense quantities of specimen plants of Ericas Cavendishii, cupressiana, translucens and many other sorts in prime shape for Easter.

A house of about 5,000 Japanese longiflorum cannot be surpassed. Then there are azaleas, lilacs and a host of other varieties of suitable flowering stock. Several very promising seedling carnations are to be seen here; one of a deep pink color measured over 3½ inches; another fine illuminated pink after the form of Lawson is highly scented and a good keeper.

Mr. Schultheis besides being a Greater New York school commissioner occupies many positions of trust at College Point, but his success as a plant grower and his extensive place speaks best.

BEGONIA CALEDONIA.

A pure white flowered variety of Begonia Gloire de Lorraine is offered by Mr. John Forbes, Hawick, Scotland. It is said to be identical with Gloire de Lorraine in every respect except color of the flower.

Mr. Forbes also offers a dwarf form of Gloire de Lorraine under the name "Nana compacta." Both of these are sports from the type, and as we hear of other sports from this begonia we may soon have quite a number of varieties of this important new begonia.

AMERICAN ROSE SOCIETY.

The annual meeting of the above society will be held in the Fifth Avenue Hotel, New York, at 2 p. m., March 28. Officers for 1901 will be elected and other important business will be transacted. A paper on "Some Diseases of the Rose" will be read by Prof. Byron D. Halsted, New Brunswick, N. J. Any further information desired may be obtained by addressing Leonard Barron, Sec'y, 136 Liberty St., New York.

MILWAUKEE.

The market remained firm until the beginning of Lent, when prices weakened a trifle, but as stock is not overplentiful the effect was not as noticeable as it might have been had there been plenty of stock.

In roses good Maids and Brides find ready sale and the supply of medium grade Beauties is short of demand. The supply of carnations is equal to demand, but most varieties are inclined to be weak in the stem. Violets are plentiful and only extra choice stock finds a ready market. Sweet peas have made their appearance. A look among the growers indicates a scarcity of bulbous stock for Easter.

Notes.

A. Klokner had the decoration for the Batchelors' ball. About twenty-five large cases of wild smilax were used, this being intermingled with incandescent lights encased in pink tissue paper to represent pink paeonies. The effect was pleasing.

Miss Edlefsen has gone to Pittsburg to visit her sister.

Bowling.

In the bowling contest between the Oconomowoc team and local florists the visitors won all three games.

ELM CITY A Grand New Carnation White....

Seedling of Lizzie McGowan
in its fifth year.

The flowers are large, finely shaped and of strong fragrance. Petals are heavy, of good substance and nicely fringed. Calyx is very strong, after the style of Mme. Albertini, and none bursting; the stem strong, holding the flower erect. The plant is a good grower and free bloomer, not subject to stem rot or any disease. Rooted Cuttings ready February 1st, $1.50 per doz., $10 per 100, or $70 per 1000. Cash with order. We shall prepay the express where money accompanies the order. Orders filled in rotation.

GENEVIEVE LORD. The Peer of Light Pinks.

(Stock for delivery prior to March 20, all sold.)

The people know a good thing when they see it. If you haven't seen it ask someone who has concerning its appearance. It has proven itself the most popular selling carnation we have ever grown, and as it combines quantity with quality it is no surprise to know it is the most profitable we have ever grown.

Some of its Features: The finest stem of any carnation. The color is just right, the ladies go wild over it. It is large, grades easily as a fancy. Odor is very sweet. Form beautiful, calyx perfect. It is a perfect non-bursting carnation. Every grower will appreciate this. If you don't grow Genevieve Lord next winter your list will not be complete. Remember, stock is all sold until March 20. PRICE: $2.00 per doz., $10.00 per 100, $75.00 per 1000.

Catalogue ready now containing full description of the above as well as the other big new ones and standard sorts. A postal card will bring it. Also complete list of new and standard Chrysanthemums.

Ethel Crocker. Absolutely the Best Pink Carnation ever offered the trade.

A fact fully borne out by its record, being equally good with Craig, Hill and myself (an assurance that it is not a success in one soil and a failure in another.) By its having been shown at the flower shows and clubs since early in September (an assurance that it is not a good late carnation but an all season variety.)

In color, size, fragrance and stem it is just what the "storemen" want. In habit, constitution and freedom of bloom it is just what the grower wants. It produces more flowers to the square foot than any other known variety, and is never out of crop from September to July.

With 18,000 stock plants to work from there is no danger of it being overpropagated, and all orders entrusted to me will be filled with cuttings selected from the plants and also in filling the order, by myself, thus doubly assuring good stock. Honest sample blooms furnished prepaid at $1.00 per dozen, amount deducted from all orders for 100 or over. Up to date every sample excepting one out of several hundred sent has brought an order.

Price per 100, $10.00; per 25, $2.50. Per 1000, $75.00; per 250, $18.75. HERR'S PANSIES, good little plants at 75c per 100; $4.00 per 1000.

GRAND RAPIDS, MICH.

We are having the worst attack of bad weather of any we have had this winter. It has snowed and blowed and hailed and rained by turns, then froze up solid, with a gale a-blowing, all of which has had a bad effect on trade, which is a little quiet this week. However, it has allowed the crop of roses to catch up with the demand, while carnations are still scarce and need a few days more in which to prepare for a renewed demand soon as this blizzard-like weather is over.

The favorite white for this fall's planting is White Cloud, of which some very fine blooms are being cut. Flora Hill ranks next. Lately considerable improvement has been noticed in the stiffness of her stem. The outlook for a fine Easter crop of this carnation is good. Evelina and White Daybreak will continue to be planted largely, while John Young will be given another chance to show his opening ability.

G. F. CRABB.

COLUMBUS, OHIO.

The fourteenth annual police ball, which was held on February 22 at the Goodale Street Auditorium, was a decided success. The hall was tastefully and artistically decorated by Mr. Charles, especial attention being paid to the stage, which was draped in the national colors and decorated with cut flowers, palms and ferns. In the center of the stage were large pictures of the mayor, the director and the chief of police.

The exhibition drill was very attractive, given by 32 members of the police department, all of whom wore bouquets of red and white carnations, and the mayor, chief, director and other officers were decorated with Marechal Niel roses, which were also furnished by Mr. Charles.

Mr. Nienhearte, formerly with S. F. Stephens, has left for California, where he expects to start in business.

Miss Hester A. Getz has brought injunction proceedings against Cross & Co., from whom she leased a part of the store at 9 North High street. The defendants have declined to deliver the lease and threaten to oust her. It is said that another florist is interested with the defendant.

A HARD LIFE.

A New Jersey florist gives us a very interesting report as to the way his time is occupied.

He writes: "I am working from 6 in the morning until 6 at night, and after tea I am chasing snails, cut worms, moths and mice, and looking after the fires until 12 o'clock. The florist's life is not as smooth as it looks."

PRICE OF GLASS.

The present discount on greenhouse glass is 85 and 5 per cent from the price list. We understand, though, that glass manufacturers are at the present time well supplied with orders for sizes generally used on greenhouses and that the dealers find it difficult to place orders for same with the manufacturers.

CONNELLSVILLE, PA.—P. R. De Muth has ordered material for a new carnation house, 24x100, to be built during the coming summer. It will be a short span to the south house and will be glazed with 16x24 glass.

A FULL LOAD.

The new catalogue of Messrs. McKellar & Winterson, Chicago, is at hand, and it certainly carries a full load. The variety of supplies offered is really remarkable. From cut flowers to pipe wrenches and from flower seeds to complete greenhouses the range is complete. The boys must have lain awake nights trying to think of something else that florists use, so that they might add it to their collection. It contains 52 large pages, fully illustrated, and is itself an illustration of the very great variety of supplies now used by florists.

THE FLORISTS' MANUAL.

If every one has enjoyed your book as I have it's a successful publication. It is different from our usual horticultural works, being plain and concise—just what one wants.

THE RETAIL FLORIST

Easter Plants.

The "In time of peace prepare for war," which the florist knows best, is in the dull season prepare for the busy one. So it is that now, when our wealthy customers have taken refuge under the protection of Lent, giving us an opportunity to dust the shelves and straighten things, we of course give much thought to the question of Easter. And make your mind easy, it's going to be a very good Easter for plants—yes, and flowers, too. We think it will even be a record breaker.

There is one great danger before us; it is the matter of price. We have all complained bitterly about the high prices demanded for cut flowers at Christmas; we may have much more cause to complain of the high prices of Easter plants. We seem to go to extremes whenever a chance occurs; that "grow rich quick" disease is very prevalent and destructive among florists. To be sure, the season is short and we are justified in making all we can out of it, but care should be given to two things—make your plants appear to be worth what you charge for them, and above all satisfy and keep your particular trade.

You will need to be diplomatic and over careful this year because the market has spread and some grades of stock are over plentiful. The lateness of the season and the many chances of it being warm weather will probably cause many to make large sidewalk displays. We even expect many to open florist stores just for the sake of getting all the plants they can from growers, selling them for what they promised to pay for them, defrauding the grower and ruining your dearly paid for established business. Isn't it funny how easily some poor growers can be buncoed? No matter how bad a man's reputation may be, all it seems necessary for him to do is to hire a store or basement next door to you, put up a glaring "Easter Plant" sign, go out to your own grower and get all the stock he wants for nothing. That has been done many, many times and we have seen nothing to indicate that matters will be different this year. How very quick we are to note and denounce the frauds in other professions; how dull and blind to those practiced in our own.

The grower should be careful to protect his good customer the same as you have to do yours, and the man who fails to do so should be made to feel the error of his way. Business requires many great exertions; it is the main long battle of life, and whenever trickery or deceptive methods are used one is justified in using drastic strategy. Though the present age may be polished in all its mannerisms and dealings, yet it is behind the times to bother selecting words when denouncing frauds.

The flower business is a most peculiar and tender one—yes, erratic in most of its whims. Often will you see that they who know the least about it succeed best; this would appear as putting a premium on ignorance, but it is not. Flowers appeal to everyone, no matter where they are, and if a person takes a fancy to buy any particular flower or plant, they care not whether the salesman is a college professor or a common laborer. There is the great danger—the drawback to our trade. Easter plants attract the public, and it doesn't sometimes matter if the "mushroom florist's" stock is not quite so good as yours, your best customer is liable to compare prices. Easter is a great time for shopping. People go 'round to see what is most beautiful or novel, or they are interested in prices. Therefore prepare for every emergency, give all the space you can for display, and arrange your plants to show to best advantage; but we will talk of this point later.

What is most important for you now is to know what there is good for Easter. Bermuda lilies have been a bad failure this year. Growers in the vicinity of New York have lost fifty per cent of the bulbs they got from Bermuda. Lilium Harrisii in particular suffered, and now it is not a question of lilies being scarce (because a great many more were being grown than usual), so much as it is that of quality. Most of the lilies to be offered are Japanese longiflorum; they will not average many flowers and are short in stem; so much is this so that lilies are bringing a higher price. The growers are asking from 12 to 15 cents for flowers and you will be fortunate if you get good clean stock for less. You can sell them as cheap as you want to but the prevailing retail prices will be as usual—20 to 25 cents—and you'll not be able to get any more unless for made-up work.

It appears to us that it will not only be desirable but necessary to "make up" more lilies than usual this year, because you will not be able to sell them or give satisfaction with them otherwise. It is not wise to offer a customer a lily with four or five flowers on it when that same person wants or will take one with twelve or eighteen. It is very important to have your salespeople know this. Have quite a few of your lilies made up out at the grower's place, and be willing to either send your man out there to do it, or pay for having it done; it will be cheaper for you to do so. Put three plants in a pot, a tall one and two small ones, some all small, others all tall—have a variety. Then try some with six or even more in a pot or cheap tub painted white, green, or blue. Of course it all depends on your class of trade, but most folks are willing to pay $2.50 for a nice pot or tub of lilies—many of them want them at from $5 to $20.

Roses in pots and boxes are going to sell well this time providing they are good and reasonable. There are some good moss roses and hybrid perpetuals in nice sized boxes, five to six plants in a box; they cost you from $2 to $2.50, and when they are trimmed up you ought to get from $5 to $10 for them. Crimson Ramblers are to be had in any shape, some trained in crosses six feet high; these cost you $10, and if you put a broad sash of white ribbon with crimson lettered Easter greeting on it around the arms, you ought to get $20 to $25 for them. They are specially suited for churches. These roses are procurable in basket, fan, pillar, crowns and other designs, and they vary in prices. The trouble with Ramblers is that when grown close together the growth and bloom are all at the top; thus many of these set designs are deficient in quantity of bloom; in any case they appeal to most people from a novelty rather than a beauty standpoint. Good Ramblers in natural shapes can be bought for from $2 to $6, and if you care to make up some large tubs of them, take care to have them furnished well down to the tub.

Hydrangeas are coming back in favor again, but we think only in the larger sizes. Some fine plants are being grown; the growers are asking too much for them in comparison to other stock. The country will be swamped with small sized Azalea indica, and most of you will get stuck on them if you don't use lots of them in basket work. You will be able to buy them at your own sweet price if you hold off for a while; this you can do because they are not a scarce article.

English(they are just as much Irish, because every bog in Ireland is covered with 'em) primroses will sell very well either in pans or baskets. There's more money in them than in most other things; get some of them—you may have to pay from 10 to 15 cents for them, but you'll get it back treble.

Ericas ought to sell well, though many of the varieties don't show up enough for the price you must pay, and the people ericas appeal to from a sentimental point of view are few. There are one or two varieties out this year which are very beautiful, such as Cavendishii, translucens and cupressi-ana; a few of them will enrich your display and ought to sell.

Calceolarias will be somewhat of a novelty this year, and they are going to make a big hit if properly handled. The colors are magnificent and they are a change from what the people have been drugged with.

This is too big a subject to deal with in one week, and we'll continue it next. Only just one word of caution: be careful what you buy, don't begrudge a grower his price for anything new or good, for you can get a big price for them. Where you are apt to lose money is on trashy, small stock. Scour your district for what's best in it and be generous yet sensible. IVERA.

year ago cut down and potted and grown all summer under glass, where they made good canes and were ripened off in the fall. By this method you do not get quite so large a plant as those lifted from the field last fall, but they are easier to force and are covered with flowers and just now need plenty of liquid as the pots are necessarily one mass of roots. Old plants that were forced last year and did not flower and again forced this year I don't believe in.

The Acacia armata that is not at all satisfactory the first winter after importing makes if cut down and grown in pots over summer a beautiful plant. They are just showing a few of their globular yellow flowers and will come along nicely in our "cold storage."

You cannot do anything with the spiraea (astilbe) but give it room, an abundance of water and keep the tobacco smoke away. But as you are possibly now using aphid punk no care is needed. It is too cheap a plant to put much labor on, but if you can set each spiraea in an 8-inch saucer and keep the saucers supplied with weak liquid manure you will have a spiraea as it should be grown.

Marie Legraye, the white lilac, and the Azalea mollis both want about four weeks under glass. Last year the mollis sold well decorated with crepe and ribbon to match the beautiful orange tints.

I might add here that any of these deciduous shrubs that you are forcing are greatly benefited by a frequent syringing till the flowers show color. We are forcing a few dozen plants of the Japan maples for decorations; they will be an acquisition.

Last year I gave you some rather misleading advice about violets in pots. I said lift them two or three weeks before Easter. I was wrong, at least we found it so. Unless you have violets most particularly well flowered don't bother with them at all, but if you have, as we expect to have, plants that will go into a 5-inch pot, with 25 to 35 flowers, then mark them three weeks before Easter, so that they are not picked, but don't lift them till a day or so before they are wanted for sale; they will be just as satisfactory to your customers and far more attractive than those you attempted to establish. The same with the pansies. Mark a lot of your best plants two weeks before Easter, but don't lift them for pans till the last moment.

I cannot say much to you about bulbous stuff just now, except to remind you that the 15th of April is very near their natural flowering time and but a few days will be needed under glass, so don't make the mistake of bringing them in too early. Ten to fourteen days will be plenty for hyacinths and daffodils, fifteen or sixteen days for single tulips, and perhaps twenty days for Murillo and other double tulips. But watch the weather; one bright, warm day will do more to open a tulip than a week of dark weather with fire heat alone.

A fancy paper man called today for

MISCELLANEOUS SEASONABLE HINTS.

Easter Crops.

There will be nothing so interesting to most of the growers, and the plant men particularly, as the state of your Easter crop. Easter is a little later than the average date and we must remember that the fifteen days of April are worth as a forcing time nearly double the same period in March. We are sure even with the most unfavorable spring to get some fine, warm weather.

You do not get your batches of plants in at the right time without a good deal of thought and labor. Move, move, move, is the order of the day, but with most all plants it is not safe or wise to take a plant out of a night temperature of, say, 60 degrees and put it in one of 45 degrees, unless the flowers are open or about to open. It is an unnatural and chilling treatment and hard on the plants. It is better to let them open up if you find them too early, and then put them in some shaded house or shed where they will keep in good order many days.

It is not alone the night temperature that will control the plants, but rather the sun, which is increasing daily in power and has the greatest effect on opening up the flowers. So you should have at least one house where the glass is shaded either by board or cloth, or if you cannot do better, whitewash the glass, and this house will do for many things, bring some on fast enough and for storing others that are fully out. Keep it shady and air on all possible occasions, and it will keep a lily or azalea for at least two weeks after being well out. Boards are much to be preferred to whitewash, because you need the house afterwards and do not need the shade.

At this date, March 13, we find the early azaleas, among them the popular Mme. Van der Cruyssen and the beautiful Prof. Walters, just showing color. They will come along all right in this cool house while Empress de Brazil and later flowering kinds may need a bright house and a night temperature of 60 degrees.

By keeping the Cytisus racemosus very cool it is only just showing flower and will be all right in the cool shaded house.

The lilies are of first importance, both on account of the quantity we grow and their popularity. Those showing buds distinctly can with a strong heat be got out, but I would prefer to see the buds at this date two inches long. There is not likely to be an oversupply. The Harrisii with us is fairly healthy, but the Bermuda longiflorum which looked so promising up to New Year's have taken a terrible tumble and it is consoling to know that "we are not the only one." They have not gone off here and there a plant, but hundreds in a batch. They look as if they had had a bath of scalding water.

Japan longiflorum are free of disease and will be largely depended on as the late Easter has given them a good chance to be in. Easter is not the only time you see a lily, so those without hope put aside and let them come on gradually.

The Crimson Ramblers will want your brightest and warmest house. Make sure of their being in time. They will keep a long time should they be too early. Ours were nursery stock, a orders for crepe. He was not a drummer but a neighbor, and it reminds us that by placing our orders now for crepe and the fine grades of colored tissue paper we saved almost 25 per cent. You will need lots of it and at the last moment will be paying 10 cents a roll for crepe when you can order it now for 8 cents. You want green and violet and orange yellow and white, and some other shades to match the azaleas. It is a fad, but really an excusable one, and so enhances the appearance of a gift. What would a peacock be without his tail, and what would some of our dear friends be without their feathers, etc.?

PIECE ROOT GRAFTS.

Mr. George M. Kellogg, Pleasant Hill, Mo., kindly sent us last week a few specimens of the piece-root grafted roses mentioned in his notes on page 378 of our March 1st issue. We had a photograph taken, from which the accompanying engraving is made, but from the appearance of the roots in the photo the photographer must have allowed them to dry out a few hours before attending to business.

Mr. Kellogg writes that of the 2,500 piece-root grafts only seven failed to grow.

BULBS IN THE SOUTH.

I have read with interest a communication from Bro. Read in The Florists' Review of March 8 on bulb growing. I agree with him that our bulbs can and should be grown somewhere in this great and glorious country.

I have had some experience in that line. In Bladin County, N. C., I have raised from bulblets as fine hyacinths as ever came from Holland. Gladiolus, narcissus and tuberose were grown to perfection and multiplied with a rapidity equaling nut grass.

In this sunny land I have grown all the standard bulbs, with good and poor results. Our soil is sand and should be suited for hyacinth culture, but the winters are too warm. The bulbs come up in November and are kept in a growing state nearly all winter. This might not be against them were it not for the cold spells that visit us every few weeks during the winter; then it is hot enough to seek the bathing resorts between these cold waves. This kind of weather is not good for any kind of "craps."

Paper white narcissus have done well with me and some of the monster bulbs that I have grown are "out of sight."

Gladiolus do fairly well. When left over winter in the ground they begin to grow in November to December, and are often cut down by the January freezes, which we have not failed to get these past ten years. They should be dug when the tops die down and stored away in dry sand until February. Cannas grow and make fine roots if planted in a moist situation or watered freely.

Lilacs of all kinds do well the first year and then dwindle away. This I cannot understand, as they should do well here with the right kind of treatment.

Freesias will grow as well here as in California. My bulbs grow very large and could be grown in large quantities very cheaply. C. S. TAIT.

COMMERCIAL AND CHEMICAL FERTILIZERS.

By JOSEPH COENEN.

[Read before the Kentucky Society of Florists, Louisville, March 7th.]

The use of commercial and chemical fertilizers by florists is still in more or less of an experimental stage. Some of our best and largest growers of roses and carnations use these fertilizers to some extent. Few of us here are using them as they should be used. We seem to be afraid of them, and so we should be, for there have been many failures due, not to their use but to their abuse, because we have not made a proper trial of them.

If one man killed a house full of roses by giving them too much bone meal, and another killed his roses by giving them a mulching of four to six inches of fresh cow manure, and a third destroyed the buds and foliage by giving too much chicken manure, must we therefore think that bone meal and cow and chicken manure are not good? If these persons had given less manure at a time and oftener they would have succeeded instead of making a failure.

We are all liable to make mistakes. Only a few weeks ago a good grower of roses and carnations and who uses liquid manure every week told me how he had made a donkey of himself by giving his roses a good dose of liquid manure immediately after they had been rested, pruned and tied down. It nearly killed them and he said: "I ought to have known better than to feed my roses when they had no stomach and could not digest the food." When such men fail no wonder we do. Be careful never to make your liquid manure too strong. Give it often but weak and you will be successful.

In order that we may properly understand the use and value of commercial and chemical fertilizers we ought to know our soil better—what it is composed of and what it needs. Too often we hear florists say, my soil is not good, my soil is this, my soil is that, and blame everything on poor Mother Earth—for the earth is our mother, she being the mother of all organized life, and when our course is run we have to go home to her and rest in her bosom.

We will see later on that soil or earth does not have so much effect on plant growth as we think. It depends upon what we intelligent workers give it or restore to it whether we get a good crop and plenty of good, large blooms. I will therefore try to explain to you what soil is, what it contains and what it needs. I will also mention the principal chemical fertilizers used by florists, how to use them and the benefits we can gain by their use.

Chemists tell us that water and the air around us make up from 88 to 90 per cent. of our crops. Soil, they tell us, does but little more than help the plants to stand upright, while water and air, obeying chemical laws, build up their structure. But what is soil? It is nothing but disintegrated and decomposed rock mingled with vegetable waste and dead animal life. From the granite class of rock we get the mineral feldspar, mica, hornblende and quartz, and from these the silicon, potash, iron, soda, alumina, lime and manganese. The sedimentary rocks, of which the various slates are the types, have the particles in finer form, hence the soils formed from these, such as clays, have their mineral constituents in finer condition. But the finest subdivision of all in which the mineral matter of the soil exists is that supplied by dead plants and animals, into whose structure the minerals entered in so fine a state as to be held in solution by water.

If we give some plant ashes to the chemist he will tell us that these ashes contain silicon, iron, potassium, calcium, phosphorus, sodium, sulphur, aluminium, chlorine, magnesium, etc. These are the elements that all plants take from the soil, and the soil itself obtained them from the solid rock. The order in creation then is that the rocks supply the minerals, plants feed on these minerals, animals feed on these plants, and omnivorous man, lord of all, feeds on these animals and plants.

Most of the dozen elements that enter into the composition of plants are found in sufficient quantity in almost all soils, leaving but three—potash, nitrogen and phosphoric acid—as the three essentials that we must supply to the soil if we want a good crop. All plant food is manure, and all manure is plant food, whether it is in the form of artificial manure or the natural product of the barnyard. Where do the fertilizing elements of barnyard manure come from? From the food the animal eats. What are the manufactured fertilizers made of? From the animal itself—blood, bone, flesh, etc. What does barnyard manure contain? A common one-horse load will contain 802 lbs. of water, $5\frac{1}{2}$ lbs. nitrogen, 118 lbs. silica and sand, $6\frac{1}{2}$ lbs. alumina, $3\frac{1}{2}$ lbs. lime, $3\frac{1}{2}$ lbs.

magnesia, $4\frac{1}{2}$ lbs. potash, 1 lb. soda, 1 lb. sulphuric acid, 1 lb. chlorine.

As a rule the soil has all it needs of these except nitrogen, potash and phosphoric acid, in all about 15 lbs. There is, however, a value in barnyard manure in addition to its fertilizing properties, and that is humus. Humus is all dead vegetable and animal matter in process of decay. Humus holds a great store of carbonic acid, which decomposes the minerals in the soil, setting free potash and phosphoric acid. It is a great argument for the use of barnyard manure in preference to commercial fertilizers that it forms humus, but if we turn under grass or clover sod or any green crop we get the same result, and these we can raise with the help of commercial fertilizers.

As we have seen, the three elements we need most as fertilizers are potash, nitrogen and phosphoric acid. What is potash? Potash is the element potassium combined with oxygen (potassium oxide). The name potash was given it because it was made in iron pots from ashes. Potash is a most caustic, biting alkali, dissolving and decomposing all organic structures it comes in contact with. In the vegetable kingdom it is held by plants in the process of growth in a soluble state combined with oxalic, tartaric, silicic and sulphuric acids. Potash is not only one of the three essentials for all plant growth, but it is also found in the fruits, vegetables and grains, such as the grape, the apple, the potato, etc.

The principal sources from which we obtain potash are the nitrate of potash from India, the sulphates, muriates, etc., from Germany, and in this country from wood ashes, burnt cotton seed hulls, etc. Some soils are already over rich in potash. Soils in which beech, maple, oak, walnut and elm trees grow with thrift, also tansy and purslane, are pretty sure to be naturally rich in potash in food condition.

Nitrogen is the second essential element in plant growth. The air which surrounds us is made up of four-fifths nitrogen and one-fifth oxygen gas, but this nitrogen is not available as plant food. When nitrogen is combined with hydrogen—18 parts hydrogen to 82 parts of nitrogen—we have ammonia, one of the most common forms in which nitrogen is fed to our plants. The other most important source of nitrogen is nitric acid, which is a combination of nitrogen and oxygen, and forms nitrates which are a combination of the nitric acid with soda, potash and other bases, and form the nitrate of soda, nitrate of potash, etc. The principal sources from which we obtain nitrogen are Peruvian guano, sulphate of ammonia, nitrate of soda, tankage, dried blood, cotton seed waste, hoof and horn shavings, etc.

The third substance is phosphoric acid. It is composed of the element phosphorus combined with oxygen gas. The four great sources of phosphoric acid are the mineral apatite, the phosphatic guanos, the bones of all animals and the mineral phosphate rocks.

I do not recommend the use of chemical fertilizers alone, but used with care in connection with barnyard manure we will get very good results. Most all of our large growers use one or more kinds of chemical fertilizers. The principal kinds of chemical fertilizers that may be used by florists are:

For nitrogen: Sulphate of ammonia, nitrate of soda, dried blood.

For phosphoric acid: Guano, bone meal and bone black, phosphate rock, etc.

For potash: Muriate of potash, sulphate of potash, wood ashes, etc.

There are several reasons why florists should use more chemical fertilizers. We have seen that a one-horse load of barnyard manure contains only 15 pounds of real active fertilizer (humus not considered). One bag of phosphates or a few pounds of chemicals will do as much good, if not more, as a two-horse load of manure. Consider the saving of labor and time over putting into the greenhouse a two-horse load of manure. Barnyard manure takes several months to decay, for plants cannot feed upon it until it is rotted. Chemical fertilizers, being mostly used in solution and at once available as plant food, are taken up by the plants in a few hours, or at least in a few days.

Chemical fertilizers, containing no seeds of weeds or grass, keep our soil free from weeds, resulting in less work and cleaner houses, with no scratching of face or hands in pulling weeds from our rose beds. Chemical fertilizers contain no germs of animal life and do not fill our greenhouses with worms and flies of all kinds, which are hatched out of manure by the heat and often bring death to the plants.

How to Use Chemicals.

Sulphate of ammonia, nitrate of soda, muriate and sulphate of potash should be used in solution, only about a 3-inch potful to 50 gallons of water. Use only one of these at a time, and only every two weeks. One week use one kind of chemical fertilizer, next week use a liquid of cow, chicken or sheep manure. Never make any liquid manure very strong. Better use it oftener but weak.

Nitrate of soda and sulphate of ammonia are two great stimulating fertilizers. They induce rapid growth, but will not make plants produce large blooms. If only one kind of fertilizer can be used, let it be bone meal and phosphates. We have used with success the fertilizer called blood, bone and potash in our potting soil for geraniums, roses and chrysanthemums. We use about a 6-inch pot to a wheelbarrow of sifted soil, mixing it well with the soil.

When fertilizers such as bone meal or phosphates and blood, bone and potash, are used, either on the bench or in the potting soil, the soil should be kept damp, as these fertilizers do not do much good in dry soil. Therefore it is best to use these in spring, summer and fall rather than in the dark days when plants are apt to suffer from overwatering. Where any of the nitrates or sulphates are used in solution the soil should not be kept too damp, as these chemicals are easily washed out of the soil. They are therefore good for winter use.

Warning.

If anyone should, after hearing my remarks on the use and benefits of commercial and chemical fertilizers, feel disposed to try some, let him be cautious. While with care there is not the least danger, I desire to forcibly impress upon you the fact that you are dealing with concentrated forces and that an overstrong solution will work serious damage. Make your solutions weak, feeding often rather than heavily. Use some kind of liquid every week when the plants are in condition to assimilate the food, changing about from one kind to another.

Should you wish to try some new fertilizer, experiment on only a few plants. If you kill these you can stand the loss.

Avoid wetting the foliage of your plants when using chemicals, but if it cannot be entirely avoided syringe with water immediately afterwards so as to wash off the leaves.

Never use chemicals on small plants or seedlings. Wait until these have absorbed nearly all the food of the soil in the pot. Then give them a very weak liquid.

After lifting plants from the field do not give them liquid manure until they have growth well started again. Never give liquid manure to plants that have been rested or cut down until they have made roots to take up the nourishment you give them.

Do not give your plants liquid manure when the soil is very dry. Better first give them a little pure water. If the soil is dry the plants will absorb the liquid manure so greedily that it will often injure them if not kill them outright.

Manufactured Fertilizers.

Following are some of the ready prepared fertilizers: Bowker's chemical fertilizers, Mapes' chemical fertilizers, Acme phosphates. All these and many more can be obtained from our wholesale seed stores.

The following preparation recommended by Professor Wagner has been used by him with good results on carnations.

Phosphate of ammonia.....	2 oz.
Nitrate of soda	1 3/4 oz.
Nitrate of potash	1 3/4 oz.
Sulphate of ammonia	1 1/2 oz.
Water	50 gallons.

A light application each week is as strong as it should be given to the plants.

Notes.

In the fall before housing your carnations mix some good pure bone meal with the soil. It may be mixed with the soil before being put in the benches or the bone meal may be spread over the soil after it is in the bench and then worked in.

As soon as the plants have started to grow give them liquid manure each week. One week use a solution of a 3 or 4-inch potful of nitrate of soda to a barrel of water. The next week give liquid cow manure with a little chicken manure added. Let this stand at least a week after the liquid has been drawn off, add a 3-inch potful of sulphate of potash, allowing it to become well dissolved. Every three or four weeks give a light dressing of dissolved bone. The chemicals will act on the bone and other food in the soil and set free the potash and sulphuric acid. You can use the same for roses.

The keynote of success in the use of these fertilizers is to apply weak solutions and often. Above all things, avoid too strong a dose at one time. And give variety. Plants don't want exactly the same food week after week any more than we do.

For chrysanthemums in summer I suggest an application every two weeks of a solution of nitrate of soda and every other week liquid cow, chicken or sheep manure. Stop feeding as soon as the buds show color. Give also now and then a small dose of liquid sulphate of ammonia. This will make your plants bloom early.

ESTABLISHMENT OF A LOUISVILLE FLORIST.

The accompanying illustration represents Wm. Mann's greenhouse establishment. As can be seen readily, it is a model commercial place, consisting of eight modern, well-equipped houses and comprising about 15,000 feet of glass. It ranks among the very best establishments of the kind in the Blue Grass state.

The history of Mr. Mann's business career, uneventful though it is, is nevertheless interesting. Away back in the seventies, when a mere boy, he made his first start on Franklin street. With no experience to guide him, save that acquired as "he moved along," but with an indomitable will that surmounted all obstacles and a perseverance that has for its motto "Try, and try again," Mr. Mann soon forged his way to the front, having achieved the success born of hard work.

In 1889 he removed his place to Brook street, one of the finest residential streets in the city. While growing a miscellaneous stock of plants for his retail trade, Mr. Mann pays particular attention to cut flowers, his roses and carnations invariably being of the choice grade. Aside from being a good, all-around grower, Mr. Mann is a floral artist of the first degree, first prizes for floral work having been his whenever his work was exhibited. S.

HEATING.

I want to heat two greenhouses, each 18x100 feet, with hot water in 4-inch cast iron pipes, one overhead flow pipe and six return pipes under benches in each house. One house will be three-quarter span, short side to the south, for roses, and the other will be equal span, for carnations, both running east and west.

My boiler is an upright, 3x6 feet, 55 flues, 1¾-inch, water space all around fire box. Is the boiler large enough to heat the two houses? How large a boiler will it require to heat four such houses? D. C. N.

The boiler described by D. C. N., being of upright design, 6 feet high, with fifty-five 1¾-inch tubes, will heat the two houses each 18x100 feet easily. If he desires to install a boiler to heat four such houses, it should be a twenty-horse-power, preferably of the horizontal tubular pattern.

New York.

HENRY W. GIBBONS.

The troubles described by your correspondent John S. are caused by a lack of capacity of the mains. Considering the amount of heating surface in the several coils, and also the great length of the return main, this pipe should not be less than two and one-half inches in diameter. The flow main is also small; it should be three inches, or even three and one-half, from the boiler to the far end where it branches.

The reason that the short coil nearest the boiler gives the most trouble is that the weight of the greater volume of water from the coils in the longer houses entering one end of the tee at the boiler forces back the warmer and consequently lighter weight of water coming from the short house.

It may also be stated that there exists some structural cause for the latter trouble, but from the description he gives of the apparatus none is apparent. HENRY W. GIBBONS.

Easter Outlook.

Easter is the all absorbing question of the day. What's it going to be? Will I sell out, or what should I buy? are more than passing thoughts to the vast majority of the trade. Growers here report a loss of over 50 per cent. of the Bermuda lily stock through disease, and it seems to us this costly and vexing matter should be solved and made impossible to occur by the overflowing intelligence of today. There will be an abundance of flowering plants on the market. Already many of the retailers have bought most of their stock. From 12 to 15 cents seems to be the prevailing asking price for lilies, the majority of which are Japan longiflorum, and are short in stalk.

Novelties are very scarce and buyers are skeptical of the few which are offered. There will be a deluge of cut flowers, for most of the rose houses promise immense crops. Prices will have to be moderate on much of the stock in order to clear out.

Club Meetings

The Florists' Club held its regular monthly meeting March 12th. Mr. O'Mara was reported sick, and Vice-President Arthur Herrington presided. Matters pertaining to the S. A. F. convention were the leading questions before the house and most of the committees reported progress. The horticultural show committee requested that the $100 trophy prize to be given to the society whose members win the largest amount of prizes be reconsidered; the principal reason for this recommendation was that such trophy might become a burden to the society winning it, as none had a home of its own, and it was thought if any prize was offered in this way cash would be most satisfactory; the matter was laid over till next meeting.

The club decided to offer three gold medals in the following classes in the horticultural section: Group of foliage plants covering 200 square feet, group of foliage plants covering 100 square feet, and for group of flowering and foliage plants to cover 100 square feet.

Wm. Plumb, by offering $10, started a fund of a hundred dollars or more to be given to the exhibitor winning the greatest number of prizes. Mr. Plumb was appointed a committee of one to take charge of this fund. F. L. Atkins made a strong plea for a representative exhibit of nursery stock at the convention, and the horticultural committee was requested to provide if possible for a class in ornamental shrubs.

A vote of thanks was ordered sent to the Buffalo club for their kind and generous care of the pilgrims from here on the occasion of the carnation convention.

The entertainment committee pleaded for an extension of time to consider their duty; three months of the year have already gone, and though convention matters take up lots of time yet it becomes tiresome. There were times at this meeting when members wondered what they came for; the importance of Easter, its supply and prospects were ignored, but the committee promise to provide for the next meeting, when most will not be able to attend. All the committees are expected to meet at the club's rooms, Monday, March 26th. Max Richter, New Springfield, Staten Island, exhibited a vase of very fine Princess of Wales violets, for which an honorable mention was awarded.

Various Notes.

Dahlia growers will hold a meeting at 1:30 p. m., March 27th, in the Berkeley Lyceum, 21 West Forty-fourth street, for the purpose of reorganizing the National Dahlia Society. Some thirty of the most prominent dahlia growers in the country have promised to be present, and the invitation is extended to all interested. New York will have many gatherings during the week of the rose show, and it would be wise to be present at as many of them as possible. Full particulars of the Gardeners' Society meeting and carnation show will be given next week; in the meantime all are requested to prepare to send an exhibit of all the new carnations whether they are in commerce or not. This will be the best chance to show your products to the leading private gardeners of the country, and we hope they themselves will show whatever seedlings they may have in bloom. Save your flowers for March 27th.

We are informed and hear it with regret that John Fink, an old-time Broadway florist, is dead. Many have cause to pleasantly remember John in his capacity of foreman for Butler in the good old days of long ago.

Peter MacDonald, ex-president of the New York Gardeners' Society, later in the wholesale cut flower business, is at present foreman in the department of public parks. Here Peter has the good wishes of a host of friends.

Bowling.

There was quite a large crowd at the bowling alleys last night. Unfortunately only two of the alleys could be used and there was in consequence less vim and fun. Following are the scores:

BOSTON.

The Market.

We have just finished a good healthy week's work. Just a touch of scarcity along most lines except in violets and a marked stringency among the light colored carnations. American Beauties are selling from 50 cents to $6 per dozen; Meteors, 50 cents to $3 per dozen; other red kinds scarce; pink and white, from 25 cents to $3 per dozen, and other colors scarce. Yellow ones beginning to show up in little spots.

A noticeable feature of the rose situation is the lack of demand for the Papa Gontier, which was such a favorite as a bud for the past few years. But few grow them, Dana being the only large producer. He is sending in very fine ones just now at from 2 to 6 cents each. Its popularity was on the decline last year, with a limited call for its parent, "the old-fashioned Bon Silene," but this is not so marked this year and that for the Gontier little improved, if at all.

Prices on carnations have been much as last reported, 1½ to 3 cents, ordinary kinds, and a cent or two higher on fancy.

Violets not a question of price, but how to get rid of them. Of course the best have a slight air of independence about them.

Bulb goods coming good and going good. Prices right. Lilies showing in the horizon in good shape. Looks like a good cut for Easter, with perhaps not so many per stem as usual, making more decrease than may be expected.

Probably a little falling off on green material, as smilax is on the ascend.

So my "accommodating friend" left you in the lurch upon his advertised account of trade exhibit. Grippe. But your readers who were not present were losers. Come next time.

Welch Brothers' team mistook the iron fence around the common for a row of British bayonets a few days ago, and being strongly Oom Paulish, charged furiously through it and clear across the common. Not much damage.

Weather freezy and breezy.

BUFFALO.

Since last you heard from Buffalo we have had one of those old-fashioned snow storms that uncle tells about; three feet on the level is pretty good for Buffalo, but it was far eclipsed by our neighbor, Rochester. Since the streets have been passable business has been fairly good, and judging by one man, very good. "How is business, Mr. Anderson?" "Fine! grand!" Flowers of all kinds are very plentiful and prices have and will take a tumble. Violets particularly will soon be overdone.

In company with W. J. Palmer, Sr., the best of companions, for he has not those periodical and frequent attacks of thirst which afflict many, we journeyed over to Toronto to participate in their first Canadian carnation show. They might have had an impromptu show before, but this was the first attempt at an exhibit on a large scale, and it was a very successful one. Your Toronto correspondent will doubtless report it in full and I have no wish to encroach on his domain, but will only mention a few things that impressed me.

Everything was there, new and old. The only absentee was "666," and that was not there, much to the regret of Messrs. Dailedouze. It was very noticeable that several varieties showed up in better and fresher form than at Buffalo, notably Ethel Crocker, from Albert Herr. The Marquis was never seen larger, brighter or with a finer form and stem. Mrs. Lawson was in magnificent form, and so was the glorious Enquirer and Estelle. If these two turn out good growers and free they must displace several varieties now held in high esteem. The scarlet Estelle is a winner. Miller & Sons staged Lady Van Horne and Lady Minto in fine form and several good seedlings. All the flowers kept well and the show was a success.

The observed of all observers was a vase of the new rose "Liberty." We have seen this rose on several occasions and thought that it would supersede Meteor, which requires so much heat in the winter, but what we had seen of it before gave us but a poor conception of it. Whether these two dozen blooms were the pick of thousands we can't tell, but if they were it only shows its possibilities; stems 30 inches long, flowers as large as American Beauty and color the richest, warmest crimson. As shown there, as far as our commercial roses go, it is Liberty first and the rest nowhere.

A pleasant reunion of members and their friends took place at the close of the show and as genial Park Supt. Chambers, who was toastmaster, said: "We know how to make a show a success. Let it be free to the public and you will get lots of visitors." We found that to be the case in Buffalo, but our labor is not all in vain. We are educating the public, our goods are a perfect luxury, and some time and money spent in showing the public eye our beauties is well spent. Patriotic toasts were prominent and the visitors were duly honored.

If anyone wants to see automatic stoking they should visit the mammoth establishment of Harry Dale. The only manual labor from the time the coal is put into the coal shed in the fall till it is dumped as ashes into wagons for carting away, is taking out the ashes from under the fires and shoveling them into a hopper. The coal shed or cellar looked to me as big as the hold of an ocean steamer, but Harry says it only holds thirteen hundred tons. Everything on the place looks fine, particularly of course the leading article, roses. A 600-foot house of Maids in fine order is certainly a great sight. Mr. Dale, like John Dunlop, has all the latest built houses, ventilated by the hydraulic automatic system, and they greatly approve it.

Mr. Dunlop's place is in most excellent order. Strange that both he and Harry Dale can grow such magnificent roses under butted glass! Two houses of Beauties at Dunlop's are particularly fine, 5 and 6 ft. stems and scarcely a blind one. You see here in this great field of glass two roses that are no longer generally grown, and yet both are beautiful and distinct, viz., Wootton and Morgan, both grand roses when well done and not difficult to do. He says the demand for them is excellent, and so it ought to be. How is it that Carnot and other hybrid teas show a decided inclination to want to rest during midwinter, while Wootton, which is American bred and the most perfect of hybrid teas, is the freest possible rose the year round?

There are many things about both these large places that are worthy of mention, but space forbids. Among them is the thought, Where does the enormous cut of these places go? Canada is not all backwoods and there are hundreds of small towns and cities that look to Brampton and Toronto for their supply. At each place there was a gang of men with sharp knives, grafting plump flowering wood on Manetti stocks. Other strong grafted plants were being shifted into 4-inch. They both agreed that for a strong, vigorous growth and early crop the grafted plants far surpass the ordinary cuttings.

On my return I found that a half-tamed Buffalo bison had attempted to gore old Sam Degraw, and that Sam in return had seized him by the horns and nearly twisted off his woolly (?) head and now he is quite tame and seeks for perfect peace and reconciliation.

CHICAGO.

The Market.

The supply is about the same as last week in volume and everything is moving freely except weak stemmed carnations, particularly colored ones. In fact, there is little call for short stemmed colored flowers of any kind.

Business has kept up remarkably well since Lent began and the season of sackcloth and ashes seems to have had no appreciable effect on the general call for flowers.

Tulips are plenty and are moving fairly well, though at low prices. Violets are in the dumps in spite of the fact that weather conditions are favorable, and we hear dealers express the fear that many people are tired of them. Prices now range from 30 to 50 cents a hundred, while some are cleaned up as low as 5 cents a bunch. Double daffodils seem to average rather poor in quality. They sell, but at low figures. There are a good many callas in the market and demand is not very brisk.

In Beauties, medium lengths are in best demand and it is found difficult to move the extra long at the extra price.

Bentley & Co. are receiving some fine Princess of Wales violets that sell well at a good price.

Kennicott Bros. Co. show a fine lot of mahonia leaves. This is an admirable decorative material and will certainly be widely used when well known.

Various Items.

The Schiller greenhouses at Niles Center have been purchased by Mr. John Brod and they will be in future conducted by his son.

Sam Pearce has an unusually fine lot of Easter plants. Lilies and Crimson Rambler roses are in extra good shape. A lot of carried over azaleas are remarkably good. He also has a splendid lot of spring stuff in fine condition.

Mr. N. H. Gano, for some years past with Peter Reinberg, at Summerdale, has removed to Martinsville, Ind.

Recent visitors: Walter Mott, representing H. A. Dreer, Philadelphia; Wm. Sharpe, foreman for Samuel Murray, Kansas City; Aug. S. Swanson, St. Paul; John Bertermann, Indianapolis; E. R. Sackett, Fostoria, O.

The Florists' Club will hold a regular meeting at 40 Randolph street tomorrow (Friday) evening. The subject for the evening is "Bulbs," and an interesting discussion is promised.

We hear of quite a few lilies coming blind.

There was no quorum at the meeting of the bowling club last Friday evening. The club has withdrawn from the local league. It is hoped that the promised visit of the St. Louis bowlers will waken up things a bit.

Geo. Piepgras has leased a part of E. C. Amling's new place.

ST. LOUIS.

Club Meeting.

The regular monthly meeting of the Florists' Club was held March 8th, at Odd Fellows' hall. The meeting was well attended and the proceedings were of much interest to those present. Although it was our annual rose meeting there were very few exhibits. E. G. Asmus, of West Hoboken, N. J., exhibited his famous rose, Liberty, which attracted much attention and was pronounced the best red rose on the market. W. J. & M. S. Vesey, of Fort Wayne, Ind., showed two fine vases of well grown Brides and Bridesmaids. Fred Ammann had a vase of his fine Meteors and Frank Fillmore a vase of mixed roses.

The exhibition committee made their final report and they were ordered to pay the money on hand, and the money made at the euchre, to the prize winners at our late show.

The committee appointed to draw up resolutions in memory of our late brother, John M. Jordan, read the following:

Resolutions in memory of Mr. J. M. Jordan, by the committee appointed by the St. Louis Florists' Club:

WHEREAS, death has removed from our midst Mr. J. M. Jordan, a member of this Club, and

WHEREAS, in the demise of Mr. Jordan the Club has met with irreparable loss, and

WHEREAS, the deceased was known to us as a man of sterling worth, as a good neighbor and citizen, Mr. Jordan has ever exemplified the highest qualities,

THEREFORE, be it resolved, that his memory will ever be cherished, an example of faith, friendship and true nobility, an inspiration of public fidelity, so to have lived and so to have died, is not to have lived and died in vain. The St. Louis Florists' Club mourns with a host of friends his taking off. To his bereaved wife and family we extend our deepest sympathy in this their hour of affliction. In the memory of the nobility of his character, the faithfulness of his private and public life, and the sincere attachment of the vast host of friends who with them mourn, may they find some sunshine of consolation to lighten the darkness of the present gloom.

Be it further resolved, that these resolutions be spread on the minutes of this Club, and that a copy of same be transmitted to the bereaved family.

A. S. HALSTEDT, Chairman.
C. C. SANDERS.
R. F. TESSON.

Ed. Walters, of South St. Louis, was elected a member of the club by a full vote.

Committee on next year's show was given until next meeting to make their report. A recess was taken to inspect the roses. Fillmore, Herzog and C. Beyer were appointed judges. The club's prize of $5 for the best vase of roses went to Mrs. Vesey, of Fort Wayne, Ind., for a vase of Bridesmaids, very fine. Mr. Asmus' vase of Liberty, not for competition, was given a certificate of merit. Fred Ammann's vase of Meteors was given special mention, also Frank Fillmore's vase of mixed roses.

The trustees were ordered to have an essay for the next meeting without fail.

The meeting then adjourned to meet again on Thursday afternoon, April 12th, at 3 p. m.

The Market.

Trade in the cut flower line has been very good the past week. The fine weather the latter part made stock more plentiful and prices went down a little. Judging from the way the weather opened this week, prospects are good for a warm, bright week, with plenty of stock for everybody. From all reports there will be an abundance of stock of cut flowers and plants for Easter.

Commission men report business good and have been selling out every day, the early part of the week, but later they had some left for later sales. But very little stock is going to waste, except a few Dutch hyacinths or some southern violets.

Carnations are still holding up and are none too plentiful.

The best of roses are now sold at from $6 to $8 per 100, but the bulk go at $4 and $5 and are at their best, fine in color and foliage. First class Beauties are still scarce and in good demand at $6 per dozen; shorts at from $1 to $2 per dozen. Carnations, Day-break and Scotts, are very fine at $2 and $2.50. Whites the same; all other varieties bring no less than $2 and are in good demand. Harrisii and callas sell well and bring from $10 to $12.50 per 100; Dutch hyacinths, daffs, Romans and tulips sell at $2 and are quite plentiful.

Next week several large millinery houses will have their openings and no doubt keep some of our florists on a jump with decorations of plants and cut flowers.

Notes.

Visitors the past week were Dr. Halstedt, E. W. Guy and Adolph Fehr, of Belleville, Ill.; F. J. Ammann, Edwardsville, Ill., and Henry Johan, Collinsville, Ill. All spent a day with the trade and attended the club meeting in the afternoon.

Mr. Johan reports that he will build a new residence and a new greenhouse for carnations this summer. Messrs. Guy and Fehr report business good in Belleville. Fred Ammann reports that he has so many orders for Perle cuttings that he can hardly fill them all. His advertisement in the Review for his famous Perle stock did the business.

A Mr. Potts, who claims Chicago as his home, will open a floral store at 3838 Finney avenue. We welcome you, Mr. Potts, to our city.

Ellison & Tesson, through R. F. Tesson, reports that business with them has been of the best since the first of the year, with work of all kinds.

J. W. Kunz (better known as the old sport) reports good business. John's show windows are always very attractive to passers-by.

Joe North, of North Floral Co., reports that their cut of California violets and carnations is the largest they ever had, and the demand good.

August Schuermann, of the Schuermann Floral Co., will leave this week for Webb City, Mo., to decorate a large summer resort at that place.

Wm. Bouche, the landscape gardener, will soon leave to lay out several new summer resorts in the west.

The Schisler-Cornell Seed Co., on Saturday, March 10, sold their stock of field and garden seeds at underwriters' sale. Quite a number of florists were in attendance.

The Engelman Botanical club will give the third exhibit of the season on next Saturday afternoon and evening in the Board of Education building. The subject of the exhibit is "Winter Botany." The collection will be large and interesting and has been carefully classified. Efficient persons will be in charge of the exhibit to explain its significance to the uninitiated.

Bowling.

The bowling club had a better attendance Monday night. The challenge of the Chicago Florists' Bowling Club was accepted and the latter part of the month was decided upon to visit the Chicago boys. Any of the florists wishing to go can call up President Kunz or Secretary Beneke at once, so we may know how many are going. Four games were rolled and some very good scores were made, and the Chicago boys can look at the following scores:

BALTIMORE.

Surprise may be occasioned those who think of this as a southern city, still cherishing the prejudices thought inseparable from that section, to learn that one of our florists here doing a volume of trade which puts him 'way up on the list, is a colored man, and that he is a veteran in the craft, fully up to the requirements of modern trade, with several specialties, and possessing skill in adapting himself to the changing demands and fancies of the retail business of a modern city. This is J. H. Siddons, whose experience as a gardener began, as he tells us, when he was a boy of eight years, and with his father's family was daily engaged in growing out-of-door stuff. Back as far as 1866 he commenced to sell flowers in the markets and on the streets, and his business has steadily enlarged ever since, until now he keeps two stores, one on Myrtle avenue and the other at the corner of Pennsylvania avenue and George street, both of which are doing a good business.

Mr. Siddons does not own any glass, but he is amongst the heavy purchasers at the Florists' Exchange. The convenience of this medium of exchange between growers and retailers is much commended by him as he recalls his daily journeys years ago through the country, north, south, east, and west, to secure his necessary supplies. At that time, when it was the vogue, he kept from ten to twelve boys constantly on the streets selling buttonhole bouquets and small bunches of flowers. In this way he used thousands and thousands of pansies, violets, stocks, and other flowers every week. This trade has absolutely faded away, and many growers feel the loss of the output of this class of flowers.

Mr. Siddons has the call on the ever-green and wreathing trade in this vicinity and when large decorations are in the market his aid is always invoked. At both his establishments he does an active traffic in designs for weddings, funerals and festive occasions, and in cut flowers; nor must it be supposed that his dealings are restricted to people of his own race, for quite two-thirds of his business is with white people.

Mr. Siddons stands well in this community, is esteemed as honorable and honest in his dealings, and respected accordingly. He served in the army during the civil war, and for several years has been on the department staff of the Grand Army of the Republic. As an example of the thrift and success of one of his race, we think he deserves this mention to the trade.

Various Notes.

Mr. Philip B. Welsh, one of our young and enterprising florists, has been unfortunately on the retired list for several weeks from the effects of a severe surgical operation, but he is now on the road to convalescence, to the gratification of his many friends.

The white Maman Cochet rose will be largely planted here this season. One firm will set out three thousand plants for blooms for its store trade. Other growers have large quantities which will be in full flower, notably Messrs. Moss, Bauer and Rider. This fine rose, which is full, long stemmed and handsome in contour, with a beautiful blush in early autumn, has come to stay for out-door white flowers in summer.

The Golden Gate rose is growing rapidly in popular estimation in this locality. As the season advances, it is throwing splendid blooms on long, stiff stems, and the delicious fragrance of the flower and its lively tints combine to give it a place amongst the standard varieties. It is selling now at about the same figure as Bridesmaids and is a welcome variety for the long, unbroken monotony of Brides and Maids. Mrs. Charles Held, whose trade is proverbial for demanding fine stuff, is using great quantities of this rose and with great satisfaction.

It is said that one of our decorators, who recently lost heavily on plants used to adorn a church, by reason of frost penetrating the edifice, has directed suit to be brought against the trustees for $100, the sum he alleges he lost by reason of injury of his palms and other foliage plants. We hear of another florist who gave the carter handling his plants too much latitude as to bringing them back home from a decoration, and by that worthy's error of judgment is suffering a loss estimated at about the same sum. Both instances point to the importance of personal attention to such vital matters.

The usually accurate compositors on the Review failed to correctly decipher the hieroglyphics of your correspondent's last letter, and the bright and energetic foreman of the Halliday Bros., for whom their new carnation is named, was transformed from Mack Richmond into Mack Raymond, and John L. Hogarth, who is up-to-date and very much alive, was said to have been formerly known to the trade, when it was written that he was favorably known to it—he coming from a family whose members have been gardeners for several generations.

The market for cut flowers for the week ending today (March 12th) was fairly active. There was some sagging the first two or three days and prices gave way, but later roses were in good demand and figures recovered, whilst carnations were not enough in evidence to meet all demands. In fact, one grower remarked in our hearing that at his place the buyers were sitting around on the hot water pipes waiting for the flowers to open out. This season, as in every season, the old truth is taught again and again, which so many know and so few follow, that good stuff is always in demand, whilst it does not pay to fall into the ranks of the great army of mediocre qualities!

The Gardeners' Club at its annual meeting tonight elected the following officers for the ensuing year: President, Robert Halliday; vice-president, N. F. Flitton; secretary, John J. Perry; financial secretary, Harry Ekas; treasurer, Fred Berger; librarian, John Wagner. After the meeting the usual banquet was enjoyed, toasts were proposed and speeches made, Edwin A. Seidewitz acting as toastmaster.

RIX.

SAN FRANCISCO.

The Market.

The past week has been a wet one. The rains are with us once more and business remains quiet. All kinds of stock is coming in more plentiful and prices are commencing to drop somewhat.

A slight improvement can be noticed in the quality of American Beauties coming in and it is to be hoped they will keep it up right along. Calla lilies are now in full bloom and large quantities could be cut if a use could be found for them. However, they will be in demand at Easter, when other blooms are not so plentiful.

Our farmers and fruit growers all over the state feel happy over the recent rains, as in some counties the moisture came just in the nick of time. All kinds of fruit trees are in bloom and if the frosts hold off the indications point to a heavy crop of fruits all over the state.

Prices: American Beauties, $1 to $4; Brides and Bridesmaids, 50 to 75 cents; Testouts, 75 cents; Perles, 50 cents; Siebrechts, 50 to 75 cents per dozen. Carnations, Hobarts, $1; Crockers, 75 cents; Schwerins, 50 cents; fancy mixed, 35 cents; Scotts, 20 cents; Portias, 15 to 20 cents per dozen. Harrisil, $2 to $3.50 per doz; daffodils, 75 cents to $1 per 100. Violets, Princess of Wales, 50 to 75 cents; Californias, 40 cents; double violets, 50 cents per dozen bunches; lily of the valley, 35 to 50 cents per dozen; smilax, 5 cents per string; asparagus, 10 cents per string.

Various Notes.

Mr. Frank Peterson, Mr. Lacazette's able partner, is making quite a reputation as a maker of floral pieces and some work done by him lately would be hard to beat. Symnacopulus called for his services this week on some funeral work that gave satisfaction. If Mr. Peterson keeps on at this rate he will soon be champion of the world "and other places."

A. Danhem, Powell street, San Francisco, has given up his florist business and will try some other means of making a living.

The California State Floral Society held a meeting on March 9th at Occidental Hotel parlors. A few seasonable exhibits were made by the members. Mrs. H. P. Tricon is secretary, and E. E. Smith, president. J. N.

CLEVELAND.

On a recent flying trip around town we called upon A. Graham & Sons. Found everything in its accustomed good order. Lilies coming in about right for Easter, while a good batch was in bloom. Mr. Graham calculates that about one-fourth will be lost through the disease. All other Easter stock was coming along nicely. Carnations were looking well, and were blooming freely.

Our next stop was in Painesville, where we visited the Storrs & Harrison Co. Business thrift and order dominate every department here and make this establishment always a profitable place for the florist to visit. Large quantities of young roses in 2 and 3-inch pots and a number of spacious houses were devoted to them especially. They enjoy a heavy catalogue trade, besides much commercial business. Mr. Robert George, who has charge of the plant and seed departments, is always ready with his quietly expressed thoughts and suggestions, which are valuable as they are the result of close study and analysis, and which makes the time of the florist visitor pass quickly and profitably.

In one of the first houses visited a mass of Gloire de Lorraine begonia in flower was an impressive object lesson, and we predict a large sale for this new favorite next season. They were working up a large stock of it. The new geraniums were here in large numbers; but very few were in flower, so could not judge them in their individual bloom. As our time was limited we only looked into the forty greenhouses which comprise the establishment.

Herman A. Hart's place is another orderly, well kept plant. Hart believes in order firstly, secondly, and thirdly, and his belief is practically carried out. Easter stock looks well, but some of the lilies show the same disposition to disease as elsewhere. A fine batch of primroses and cinerarias were in flower, and other promising stock was coming on.

The stores are looking very brilliant just now. J. M. Gasser is cutting very fine carnation blooms, some of the best coming into the city. Some very well done azaleas, lilacs and rhododendrons in pots were recently noted in his window, which is always attractive, with choice stock always in evidence.

Smith & Fetters, on the opposite side of the street, always have a pretty and attractive window display, and they carry a choice stock of flowers. For Washington's birthday they got up a unique decoration of Jerusalem cherry trees which were well berried, and clusters of the same branches arranged with hatchets tied with narrow cherry ribbons. It makes a much more effective simulation of the cherry tree episode than Ardisia crenulata does, which is generally used for this purpose. This firm believes in ribbons, and immense, stunning bows are used in profusion on bouquets, baskets and plants. Their choice valentine boxes were tied with pink taffeta ribbon, No. 30, two separate bands around and tied in swell bows.

Mrs. Ella G. Wilson used real apple blossoms in a wedding decoration. They were forced into bloom especially for the occasion lately. Bulbs, azaleas, smilax and a batch of lilacs are all in first class condition at this place.

Wm. Brinker has recently doubled his store room capacity, and expects to do a large business this year in seeds and florists' supplies.

Business for past week has been very good. Roses of the finest grade were sold out clean every day, but poor stock found no sale at any price.

Violets are a drug on the market, and it is really surprising how low they are sold. Lady Campbell sold all the week from $1.50 to $2 per 1,000. Fakirs sold them on every corner from 10 to 15 cents per bunch of 50. Bulbous stock can be bought at any price, but roses still hold out at 8 to 10 cents for best grade, poprer stock from 2 to 4 cents; carnations, 1½ to 2 cents; Lilium Harrisii, 8 cents; callas, 8 cents; mignonette, 4 cents; Romans, 2 cents; tulips, 1 to 3 cents.

The windows of J. L. Loose, Gude Bros. and Z. D. Blackstone were handsomely decorated with Beauties and violets for the past week. The above firms report fine business.

PHILADELPHIA.

The Market.

The lenten season has taken its effect at last and business is rather dull as a result; however, this was more or less expected. Light flowers sold very well, there being a number of funerals the past week. Violets have been a glut on the market, the street fakir making a specialty of them. Balls and social events seem to have become a thing of the past and will be likely to remain so for the next four weeks, hence sympathies are in order for the poor florist.

Prices.

Beauties, 75 cents to $6; Brides, Maids, Golden Gates, Morgans, Meteors, Kaiserins, $4 to $10; Gontiers, $3 to $4; Perles, $3 to $6; carnations, ordinary, $1 to $1.50; fancy, $2 to $4; cypripediums, $15; hyacinth, $1.50 to $4; valley, mignonette, $3 to $4; narcissus, $3; daffodils, tulips, $2 to $4; sweet peas, $1.50 to $2.50; callas, $10; violets, single, 25 to 50 cents; double, 50 to 75 cents; asparagus, $50; smilax, $15; adiantums, $1.

Notes.

J. Stewart, late with Julius Wolff, Jr., has resumed his old position with Ed. Seidewitz, of Annapolis, Ind.

Chas. Fox, Sr., did the decorating for the wedding of Major Ashbridge's daughter, which took place the past week. It was a large event. Mr. Fox did the decorating at both the house and church. The reception was held at the Stratford Hotel. Mr. Fox reports it as being the largest affair he has had in many years.

Julius Wolff, Sr., has been very busy the past week with funeral work. He also reports having a number of garden orders on file.

Mr. H. C. Strobell, of the firm of Strobell Bros., Newark, N. J., favored us with a visit.

INDIANAPOLIS, IND.

The greenhouses of the Indianapolis Flower and Plant Co., corner of Thirty-fourth street and Central avenue, were seriously damaged by fire the morning of March 6th. The loss is estimated at $5,000 on plants and $1,000 on buildings, the latter being covered by insurance. The fire started in the boiler room in some unknown manner. W. J. Hasselman is the principal owner of the concern. The greenhouses will no doubt be rebuilt, though the destruction of the stock may cause rebuilding to be deferred for a time.

ORANGE, N. J.

Mr. Samuel Henshaw, of the New York Botanical Gardens, addressed the society, March 7th, upon the flora of the West Indies. The speaker dwelt with praise upon the magnificent botanical gardens of Trinidad which are maintained by the British government, and where almost the entire tropical flora is represented.

The growth in this climate is something wonderful. Two palms, 2 feet 6 inches in diameter, which form the gateway to the gardens; an Eucalyptus globulus, same size of the palms, and an Acalypha tricolor 18 feet in diameter, were pointed out by the curator as having been raised in thumb pots only five years before. Among the commonest weeds are Tradescantia tricolor and discolor. In Port-au-Spain Mr. Henshaw counted six varieties of oxalis growing wild and twenty-one varieties of begonias. He found but few orchids. In the English possessions floriculture is cherished and tree growth encouraged, but the opposite has been the custom in the Spanish possessions, where a rich and varied timber growth has been almost destroyed. In Porto Rico, the Latania borbonica, the sensitive plant, ipomoea and thunbergia grow as weeds. It may be mentioned that among all this loveliness the boa constrictor, the alligator and the poisonous centipede also flourish.

In the business preceding the address, the committee appointed by the society at a previous meeting, to devise some method of advancing a knowledge of floriculture among the school children by the free distribution of plants for cultivation, with cultural directions, reported favorably upon the project, which was received with approval by the society. John N. May, W. A. Manda and others pledged a donation of rooted plants required.

It was decided to confine the experiment to the chrysanthemum and offer prizes for best grown of same. This was extended to also include the salvia, Mr. Manda adding one thousand of his variegated specialty to his first pledge. The plants to be distributed not later than May 15, and collected for judging and exhibition as a part of the society's fall show. The committee, J. B. Davis, J. C. Williams and John Hayes was instructed to report further details at the next meeting.

One new member was elected.

ELM CITY A Grand New White....

Carnation

Seedling of Lizzie McGowan and Mme. Diaz Albertini, in its fifth year.

The flowers are large, finely shaped and of strong fragrance. Petals are heavy, of good substance and nicely fringed. Calyx is very strong, after the style of Mme. Albertini, and none bursting; the stem strong, holding the flower erect. The plant is a good grower and free bloomer, not subject to stem rot or any disease. Rooted Cuttings ready February 1st, $1.50 per doz., $10 per 100, or $70 per 1000. Cash with order. We shall prepay the express where money accompanies the order. Orders filled in rotation.

GENEVIEVE LORD. The Peer of Light Pinks.

(Stock for delivery prior to March 20, all sold.)

The people know a good thing when they see it. If you haven't seen it ask someone who has concerning its appearance. It has proven itself the most popular selling carnation we have ever grown, and as it combines quantity with quality it is no surprise to know it is the most profitable we have ever grown.

Some of its Features: The finest stem of any carnation. The color is just right, the ladies go wild over it. It is large, grades easily as a fancy. Odor is very sweet. Form beautiful, calyx perfect. It is a perfect non-bursting carnation. Every grower will appreciate this. If you don't grow Genevieve Lord next winter your list will not be complete. Remember, stock is all sold until March 20. PRICE: $2.00 per doz., $10.00 per 100, $75.00 per 1000.

Catalogue ready now containing full description of the above as well as the other big new ones and standard sorts. A postal card will bring it. Also complete list of new and standard Chrysanthemums.

Ethel Crocker. Absolutely the Best Pink Carnation ever offered the trade.

A fact fully borne out by its record, being equally good with Craig, Hill and myself (an assurance that it is not a success in one soil and a failure in another.) By its having been shown at the flower shows and clubs since early in September (an assurance that it is not a good late carnation but an all season variety.)

In color, size, fragrance and stem it is just what the "storemen" want. In habit, constitution and freedom of bloom it is just what the grower wants. It produces more flowers to the square foot than any other known variety, and is never out of crop from September to July.

With 18,000 stock plants to work from there is no danger of it being overpropagated, and all orders entrusted to me will be filled with cuttings selected from the plants and also in filling the order, by myself, thus doubly assuring good stock. Honest sample blooms furnished prepaid at $1.00 per dozen, amount deducted from all orders for 100 or over. Up to date every sample excepting one out of several hundred sent has brought an order.

Price per 100, $10.00; per 25, $2.50. Per 1000, $75.00; per 250, $18.75. HERR'S PANSIES, good little plants at 75c per 100; $4.00 per 1000.

Trade is improving to some extent. There is a good deal of funeral work. Good roses are in demand. Harrisil lilies are poor; lots of disease.

Jos. Coenen & Co. intend to put in a new boiler this summer. Their stock is looking fine.

George Schulz is cutting some fine roses and violets.

Victor Mathe's place is in excellent shape. He has a sport of Daybreak carnation which is a fine pink.

Jacob Schulz had some very large orders for funeral work and used lots of American Beauties.

Wm. Mann is the "Lily King" of Louisville, and his azaleas are grand.

C. H. Kunzman's carnation house is a splendid sight. His Bradts are especially fine.

Mrs. Henry Fuchs is very ill with typhoid fever.

Frank Lichtefeld, father of Henry Lichtefeld, who has been confined to his room for over three weeks, is out again.

Nanz & Neuner report a very good shipping trade.

E. Heitz has bought the greenhouses on the old Epping place and will remove them to his new place. His Rose Queen and Daybreak carnations are very fine.

The Holland bulb men have made their appearance.

H. LITCHEFELD.

TOPEKA, KANS.—Skinner Bros. have purchased ten acres of land in North Topeka and will engage in the nursery business. They will build a number of greenhouses.

LEADVILLE, COLO.—A Floral Society is being organized here. A. E. Thomas is interested.

THE CANADIAN HORTICULTURAL ASSOCIATION.

Executive Committee Meeting.

A meeting of the above committee was held at Toronto during the carnation meeting of the Toronto Gardeners' and Florists' Association, for the purpose of arranging the date and program of the third annual convention, to be held in Montreal. The days selected were Thursday and Friday of the week prior to the S. A. F. convention in August, the actual date of which no one appeared to be quite sure about. Various other matters in connection with the convention were discussed and a program arranged which will be interesting to everyone in the profession—commercial or otherwise—and which should attract a large number of delegates.

Messrs. McKenna and Bennett, of Montreal were present and said that the Montreal brethren hoped to have the pleasure of entertaining a big crowd and gave assurances that everything would be done that possibly could be done to make the convention a grand success.

Market Notes.

Bulb stock is in its glory at the Park Floral Co.'s window. Mr. John Berry, who attends to the retail trade since their store manager from Thorley's left them, reports business good.

Hyacinths in pots sell well, also azaleas, for which the demand exceeds the supply. Roses retail at $1.50 to $2 per dozen; carnations, 50 to 75 cents; lilacs, $1.50 to $2 per dozen; daffodils, 75 cents; valley, 75 cents; sweet peas, 35 to 50 cents; mignonette, of which the Park Floral Co. have their own strain, is very large and fine and brings $1.50 per dozen.

Mr. Charles Webb, of Glauber & Webb, reports trade fair. Beauties are $3 to $5; violets, $1.50 per 100; snapdragons, $1 per dozen; lilies, 25 cents.

The biggest demand is for flowers put up and arranged in boxes. There is a "knack" in arranging a box of flowers, and the first sight of nicely arranged flowers makes the impression.

Mr. Wm. L. Lingenbrink, the wholesale florist, also reports business good. He is short of supply outside of carnations, on which he had to cut the price from $2 to $1.50; other flowers he cannot get enough of, and has to call on eastern growers. Roses are 6 cents; carnations, 1½ cents; daffodils, 3 cents; violets, 75 cents per 100; sweet peas, $1.50 per 100; smilax, 17 cents per string wholesale. Mr. Lingenbrink manufactures his own floral designs and appears to be working up a little trade of his own.

Mr. Wolf, of the Colfax Floral Co., says everything is selling out of sight and they expect to put up two more houses this summer. Their carnations are very good this winter.

Some growers report Easter lilies too early, others too late, and the chances are that they will bring a good price.

Flora Hill carnation is considered the best white, Crane is the best red, and Scott is hard to beat for pink, Mrs. Bradt is the largest variegated seen around here.

Daniels & Fisher expect to repair five houses which are said to have been empty all winter.

The Curtis Park Floral Co., now one of the oldest greenhouse firms in Denver, put up lots of floral designs and do a good business in pot plants.

J. L. Miller has resigned his position at the City Park Greenhouses and has leased Mr. Godley's place. He will grow vegetables and perhaps some carnations.

The business outlook is very good.
F. A. HAENSELMAN.

RUTHERFORD, N. J.

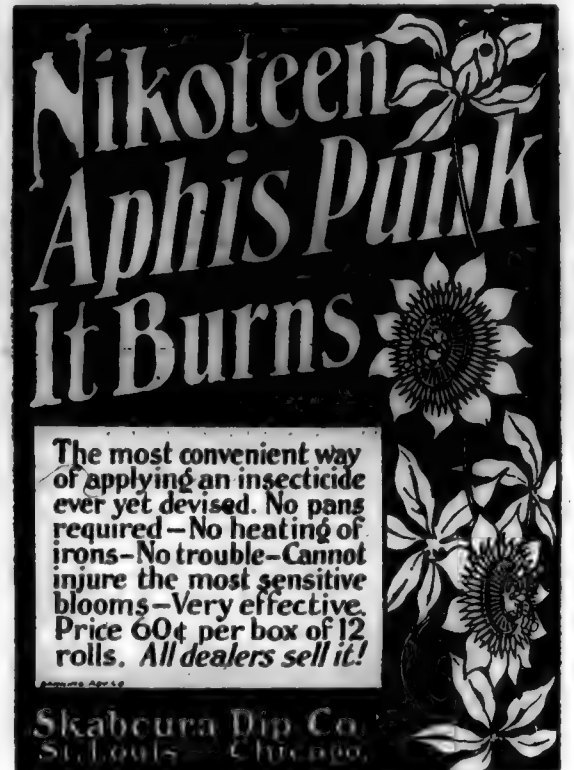

Julius Roehrs has a remarkably fine stock of Easter plants. His lilies are especially good; most of them have two or three stalks from a bulb and are easily the best we have seen this season so far.

Almost every variety of flowering plant can be seen here in immense quantity. Azaleas are in all sizes, but special attention is given to specimen grade stock. Houses of Crimson Rambler are in the best of form, so are hydrangeas, rhododendrons, acacias, boronias, etc. A special feature is being made of calceolarias this year; this will be somewhat of a novelty for Easter and there is a fine lot of them here. If you are interested in good stock or want to see a great display, visit Mr. Roehrs' place.

EASTER CARDS.

The Easter cards and folders designed for Easter announcements by florists prepared by Dan'l B. Long, Buffalo, N. Y., are certainly very attractive and should prove trade winners to the retail florist at this season. Samples will no doubt be sent on request.

BURPEE'S "Vest Pocket Guide to Culture of Flowers" is a neat little 24-page booklet giving a great deal of useful information in condensed form. It is issued by W. Atlee Burpee & Co., the seedsmen, Philadelphia, Pa.

THE FLORISTS' MANUAL.

After reading Mr. Wm. Scott's Manual, we wish to say that we consider it without equal as a book of reference for busy florists.

GEO. M. KELLOGG.

Pleasant Hill, Mo.

Mr. Scott's superb work, "The Florists' Manual," was indeed worth waiting for. When compared with the amount of practical information it contains, the selling price, $5.00, seems a mere bagatelle.

Oakland, Md. H. WEBER & SONS.

It is the best book of the kind ever published. There is more in it than in any other book I have ever seen. I am delighted with it.

Chicago. JOHN THORPE.

The copy of the "Florists' Manual" was duly received. I am very well pleased with same. The more I read it the better satisfied I am with it, and there are one or two articles alone in it that are each worth all you ask for the book, for everything is made so plain and all details are right to the point. I trust you may have a good and ready sale for the same.

M. S. WORDEN.

North Adams, Mass.

The only fault to be found with it is when you get reading it the midnight oil is liable to run low and you have to go on to gas or reluctantly break off, either going to bed or first taking a look over the houses to see if the temperature tallies with the Manual.

GEO. S. OSBORN.

Hartford, Conn.

We are in receipt of "The Florists' Manual" by Mr. Scott and may say it is the right book for the florist, published at the right time. It is what we all need.

BOBBINK & ATKINS.

Rutherford, N. J.

Am much pleased with the Manual. It is just what I have been looking for. Something that we can understand, and enjoy reading.

M. NAUMAN.

Etna, Pa.

I am very much pleased with the Manual. It is just what we have needed for a long time.

N. ZWEIFEL.

Milwaukee, Wis.

It is certainly a neat and handsome book and does you credit.

BENJAMIN HAMMOND.

Fishkill-on-Hudson, N. Y.

It is a work of art and should be in the hands of all live florists. Its useful and instructive contents can not fail to be a benefit to all in the trade.

C. C. POLLWORTH Co.

Milwaukee, Wis.

The book is written for the working gardener, and Mr. Scott's reputation is so well secured that he will find among his gardening friends a host of genuine admirers. As a writer on practical gardening subjects, he is a recognized authority. * * * Mr. Scott has long been an employer and knows what information young gardeners, or those with little experience, need, and he has his whole subject so perfectly at command that he can give the most desirable and essential information in the clearest language and with satisfactory brevity. The book is a distinct and important gain to the practical garden literature of this country, and it should be in the hands of every gardener, and everyone else engaged or interested in ornamental horticulture. The price of the book is $5, which seems somewhat high, but for useful information it is worth every cent of it.—Vick's Magazine.

Am well pleased with the Manual. It is a practical, everyday helper, concise and to the point.

W. A. KENNEDY.

Milwaukee, Wis.

Am very much pleased with the book; it is very handy for reference.

Macomb, Ill.

F. E. BONHAM.

Unlike so many of our books, it has the very flavor and essence of actual experience.

L. H. BAILEY.

Ithaca, N. Y.

We find the book very useful as a reference in answering the many questions about plants that we receive almost every day.

Philadelphia. JOS. KIFT & SON.

Detroit, Mich., January 6, 1900.—Mr. Wm. Scott, Buffalo, N. Y. Dear Sir: The Commissioners of Parks and Boulevards some time since directed that a library be started of such books as deal with subjects pertaining to park work, and to that end, an order has been given for a number of books, among which is your "The Florists' Manual."

After reading this book carefully, I am greatly pleased, and wish to congratulate you on the practical manner with which you have treated the subject.

This book is placed where it will be accessible to all of our greenhouse employees, where this board expects to reap a reward many times the cost of the book. Respectfully yours,

COMMISSIONERS OF PARKS AND BOULEVARDS,

R. J. CORYELL, Gen'l Sup't.

I am more than pleased with The Florists' Manual.

OTT BROWN.

Cape May City, N. J.

Manual to hand. Am well satisfied that it is the best work of its kind ever published.

JAS. HARTSHORNE.

Joliet, Ill.

I am greatly pleased with the Manual.

C. J. REARDON.

Lake Geneva, Wis.

Enclosed find $5.00 in payment for the copy of the Florists' Manual. No progressive florist, old or young, can afford to be without the Florists' Manual. The old florist needs it, for reference, to aid a defective memory, and the young florist wants it as a guide in this progressive era of the florist's business.

J. T. TEMPLE.

Davenport, Ia.

THE FLORISTS' MANUAL...

By WM. SCOTT

IS A BOOK of 224 large pages (same size as those of the Florists' Review) and contains about 200 articles on commercial plants and cultural operations, each giving "the meat" only, from the personal experience of a thoroughly practical man who is in daily touch with each department of the business and who has that rare quality of being able to tell others what they want to know. The articles are arranged alphabetically, like those in an encyclopædia, and in an instant one can turn to the subject upon which light is desired at the moment. The book is illustrated by over 200 fine half-tone engravings. It is and is a whole library on practical commercial floriculture in one volume. It is very handsomely and substantially bound in half leather, with specially designed title in gold.

THE RETAIL FLORIST

Easter.

Variety is not only the spice of life, it is a great incentive to business. No matter if the chances are small, or that you cannot even sell some things at any price, it is good to have a few just for variety's sake and to better show off the good things. Many will differ with us on this point and argue that it's foolish to buy what may not sell, but there are many ways to look at things and our business at best is a continuous speculation.

To have lots of lilies, azaleas, etc., for Easter is necessary, and people may come to your place fully determined to buy one particular kind of plant; this determination often vanishes at the sight of some old favorite or specially well grown flower, and everybody, even yourself, prefers to deal where there is a large variety to select from. Your only danger is in buying too much small stock or too many of a risky kind. No one can expect to clear everything out, at least it is unwise to buy so close, especially when plants are cheap, still care should be taken to have the surplus of a nature that will detract the least from your profits. There are plants, like azaleas and rhododendrons, which the growers will take back at half or one-third the price. Your largest plants should be bought on this condition as a protection to yourself, but you should never take them back from your customers unless you are sure they are willing to pay well for them; that is to say, the price of a new one. There are too many sickly boarded plants in this country; several growers' houses are disgraced with them and the system is injurious to trade. Therefore, when you sell an azalea or genista to your customer, try to avoid conditional purchase.

Easter plants are the cause of many hopes and fears to grower and retailer alike. In the first place, it is difficult to judge what to grow, and in the second, what and how many to select for your trade. Those who can see the merit of novelties, appreciate them at their full value, and offer them to the public in the best manner, are the ones liable to do the best business.

There are times when ugly or insignificant things are snatched up by the crank and others, when the prettiest and most interesting are ignored by the most fastidious.

We are inclined to snub many delicate flowers, perhaps because we have no suitable place in our store for them, and the danger of this will be that instead of encouraging a more extensive cultivation of variety, we will eventually wind up in having only those flowers or plants which will have the durability of leather or iron. We have at present a few fake floral artists in New York who cannot touch a plant or flower without destroying its beauty with artificial humbug; even artificial flowers and plants form a conspicuous part of their window decorations. Of course such people will never be able to retard the ever increasing demand for the beautiful in nature; it is only that they are mistaken in their profession, and a pity it is.

We must remember that Easter this year is very late. The weather is apt to be warm and some of the stock too open. Though it is cold now, and some things appear backward, don't forget that warm days will hasten them on, and that most people, especially in the case of azaleas, prefer to have plenty of buds on their plants. With lilies it is different; few care to pay for buds, and yet care should be taken to have no old blooms. Longiflorums may not be as profitable to the grower as Harrisii on account of number of flowers, but they are more satisfactory to the retailer and the public because they keep longer. Unlike at Christmas, delicate colors are popular at Easter; this is because spring is soft hued and there is more harmony in tones. In winter, the brighter the object the more it appeals to the eye, wearied with the dismal aspect of cold climates. The growing tendency here, however, as in Paris, is for bright colors at the commencement of every season, and this year you may expect much of your brightest colored stock to be sold first.

Though white and blue are essentially Easter colors, we, as a rule, have too many white flowers in the market. Many growers have a bench or house filled with undesirable stock, and they compel, whenever they can, the retailer to take a portion of this stock if he wants any of the select; it is always a pleasure to get even with such people. This year material is plentiful and much of it is good; be sure you mark whatever extra grade specimens you buy, and if the grower tries to cheat you by sending substitutes, refuse to take the stock; we mention this because unfortunately some people practice it, and we advocate opposition to everything dishonest.

Now, as to what is going to sell best, last week we mentioned a few, and the list could be extended far beyond all we name. Of late years there has been a marked increase in the sales of palms, ferns and general decorative stock at Easter time. Some people want to appear ultra-practical all the time, and they would rather buy a dish of ferns or a palm, where they should send flowering plants, simply because they begrudge the short period of exceptional beauty a flowering plant usually has, and send a plant which will remain a longer memento for remembrance. You can compromise with this element by making up composite pans or baskets of plants. Many kinds of plants really require some fixing up or embellishment. And in many cases you can increase your sales by adding a few small ferns to this or that plant. The man who grows his own stock can work off lots of material in this manner. The important thing is, no one wants a skimpy looking plant or arrangement of plants, therefore have all as well furnished as you can. You might make more money out of the modest and inexpensive thing than the gaudy and expensive one; it all rests on the way you present it.

It may be wise to have an early display, but it is wiser to have and to send out good fresh stock at Easter. Consequently don't rush things; it's foolish to waste your money and plants by making a special display three weeks or even two weeks before the time. Things, even be they beautiful, become monotonous, even eyesores, by a continuous presence; people rarely buy before Easter week, the most of the stock is sold on Friday and Saturday before Easter, and that's when you should have it in the best condition. We believe that special Easter displays in the florist's store and window should be kept back until the Saturday before Palm Sunday; even then it should be confined to the window, just to remind the people, and to show them the grade of stock you handle; a pretty basket or vase of flowers will suffice before that time.

Particular care should be taken in the case of violet plants. To be sure, you should have an early sample to sell from, but the violet plants intended for delivery Easter Saturday or Sunday should be kept in the greenhouse as long as possible. A stale violet is about the worst thing you can have about your store or send out, and every year the nuisance is increasing. In the first place, growers begin to leave flowers on the plants a month or more ahead of time and the retailer gets them in his store two weeks before it is necessary, all despite the fact that no violet will retain its fragrance more than a week—most of them only for twenty-four hours. A present of a basket of stale ones is an insult to intelligence.

There are not quite so many bulbous flowers being grown in pans or flats this year. When they are well done they sell readily; the trouble is ette, pansies, mixed crocus and such things are sure sellers if the price is reasonable. The trouble with most florists is that they spend too much money in ribbons, baskets, etc., and they try to exact big returns for this, in many cases, unnecessary outlay. We have found most people willing to pay well for flowers, but not a hundred per cent more than the value of superfluous trimmings, and we prefer to see the plant rather than the dry goods business encouraged by the florist. We are not averse to the use of adjuncts, it's only when in excess, and consequently a total disregard for art is adopted that we disagree. We will deal the store. You know very few flowers will stand overhead watering, and plants in flower require plentiful root sustenance. IVERA.

CARNATIONS AT BRIAR CLIFF, NEW YORK.

Briar Cliff is the romantic name of a beautiful section of country stretching away from Scarborough-on-the-Hudson. It is mostly composed of hill and dale, with here and there an assembly of trees or a meeting of laughing streams. From the summit of the hills several counties are visible, and yonder sweeps the lordly Hudson on its way to the mighty Atlantic. No wonder Washington Irving caught his grandest inspirations from here, for the scenery alone, apart from its historic interest, is well worth traveling a long way to see. In the midst of the loveliest part of this natural panorama is Mr. W. W. Law's handsome residence and extensive estate, comprising three thousand acres. Immense model dairies and other fancies are established here also, and everything is done to exact the fullest enjoyment as well as the highest practical results.

Mr. Law is passionately fond of flowers. At first he erected greenhouses to supply his home and his friends with plants and blossoms. The study of flora excited a deeper interest and became, as it does, more enchanting, until finally experiment and ambition led to produce even finer flowers than were procurable on the market. This was comparatively easy where unlimited resources were available, and to-day it can be safely said that the forerunner, the shadow as it were—nay, more, the very model of the horticultural house of the coming century—can be seen here.

You are interested in carnations, every florist is more so now than ever in the history of floriculture. Well, dear reader, if you can, go and see the carnation house at Briar Cliff. If you cannot, then imagine yourself with us. We are standing at one end of a magnificent glass palace, it is fifty feet in width and three hundred and six feet in length; it is three-quarter span and twelve feet at the ridge; it is of iron frame and every modern appliance; thin iron pipes are the only supports, and the view right through the house is entirely unobstructed, everything is light and fresh, but what an entrancing sight, what a galaxy of color radiating from perfect forms to glorify the divine flower. Every hundred and fifty feet is occupied by a different variety, a distinct color, the whole arranged to bring out the best contrast and all the value in individuality.

The best varieties of carnations disseminated up to last season are on trial here, and though all are grand, in their highest state of perfection, yet many, it seems sad to think, must be discarded or relegated to mere stock benches. The hunt for ideals causes many a pang of regret as well as many a throb there are not enough bulbs put in the pans, and the varieties, especially of tulips, are poorly selected. A pan or small flat of good Dutch hyacinths or tulips is a very pretty thing when trimmed, and a good profit can be made on them. Cardinal, pink and yellow are the three most popular colored tulips. White and pale blue in hyacinths, combinations of red, white and blue in hyacinths look well and have lots of meaning, and pans or boxes of mixed jonquills or narcissus are good.

It looks as if there were going to be very few candidum lilies, more's the pity. Tubs of mixed lilies would be a great seller, so would Lilium auratum. Baskets of growing blue cornflowers, edelweiss, freesia, carnations, dwarf nasturtiums, myosotis, dwarf mignon-with color combinations and the latest in baskets and bows next week.

It is important that you have a good man to take care of the watering of your Easter plants. This is a vital point, and don't, please don't, expect to find a man with a head and conscience and the passiveness of a slave for five dollars a week. Remember this is near the twentieth century and that you will be a long time dead. We have already too much ignorance in our business, the small wages offered damps off the intelligent element; there is more loss through this shortsightedness than from any other source. Take even the present time, neglect to properly care for stock may result in tremendous damage; this is more particularly so and most likely to happen in of pleasure. You can, if you wish, ponder long and deep over theories—the spiritualisms of cultivation, bacteria, with the point of keenest thought, experiment with your physics and chemicals, Nature can laugh at you when she will. The mysteries of successful carnation culture seem to be solved here in the application of abundance of light, fresh air, good soil and cow manure. Why, the very carnations themselves seem to lose their identity when compared with those grown elsewhere; the foliage is deep colored and luxuriantly sturdy, the flowers grand! White Cloud is indeed a white cloud of three-inch flowers on 3-foot stems; Mrs. James Dean, like the dear lady herself, is a gem to be proud of.

But here's Paul M. Pierson, who is manager of this establishment; let's listen to him. He tells us that the above two varieties are the best kinds to grow of their colors. Crane, the finest scarlet, brought sixteen cents each during Christmas and New Year's. Mrs. Geo. Bradt, the best striped; this has brought the highest average price of all the carnations. Gold Nugget, the best yellow; Maceo, for crimson; and Joost for dark pink. Of course there are many more kinds he will grow, but the above have given best results and will be most extensively grown.

In the propagating houses there are over 40,000 rooted cuttings, and we never saw a finer lot. No sickly consumptives, but sturdy stock that promise to produce similar results to their parents. If you are looking for this kind of valuable material, the product of intelligent cultivation and abundant nourishment, don't forget Briar Cliff.

STARTING A SMALL PLACE.

No. 1. Would you be kind enough to tell me if two men could make a living from two greenhouses, 20x50, growing carnations and a general line of bedding plants?

No. 2. The greater part of the cut flowers would be sold at wholesale, but the bedding plants at retail. Buffalo would be the wholesale market.

No. 3. Would it be advisable for us to borrow $2,000 each to buy land and build the houses? Can secure a good lot, 150x350, for about $2,200. Good soil and a good location.

No. 4. What would be the running expenses of such a place?

No. 5. One of us has worked at the trade for some time.

No. 6. Or would you advise the one who has had the experience to start in for himself on a small scale?

No. 7. What would be the average cost of two greenhouses, 20x50, shed, boiler, piping, etc., complete?

C. H.

To make the answers plainer I have numbered the questions and the corresponding answers.

No. 1. Two men could not make enough out of these houses to live decently. Neither would there be work enough to keep you employed. You would soon both get dissatisfied and one would have to make room for the other. "There is a difference between what a dog will eat and what he will live on," but this is not large enough for two, however well it was run or whatever you grew.

No. 2. It matters little whether the output of this place was sold at retail or wholesale, but if the latter there would still be less room for two in the business.

No. 3. If you can borrow two thousand dollars each you could build a much larger place. If you had three houses, each 100x20, it would keep you both fairly busy; more so if you grew bedding plants than planted out crops like roses and carnations. You can build a good deal of glass on the lot described, but four or five acres is much better. While starting in the country why not have enough land? If you intended to put buildings on the land the seller is most times satisfied with a payment of 25 per cent and the remainder to run on a mortgage, which would be a good one, if you bought the land right. Good soil is of the greatest importance, more so than location, but you should look to two things, viz., that the houses can be built running east and west and that you have ample drainage for stoke holes, etc.

No. 4. The running expenses of two houses, 50x20, after being stocked would depend on your ability. It would not be enough to keep one man busy, but you had better reckon your time and in addition $125 for fuel and $50 more for pots and incidentals.

No. 5. The one "that has worked at the trade for some time" is the only one that should attempt to run the greenhouses. When you have grown to a large firm the other one may be called in as bookkeeper, if he can afford to wait.

No. 6. This is answered by the last. Decidedly, if you are determined to start, don't be encumbered by anyone, especially one who knows nothing of the business.

No. 7. If you are up in building yourself and practical in heating you might build these two small houses with heating and shed all complete for occupying for about $1,200.

In conclusion, if you have no capital it would not be advisable to start in such a small way as there would be a great likelihood of always running in debt. Your profits would not be enough to get you out of debt. If you have confidence that you are an expert at the business and can borrow capital, go into it large enough so that you can use your ability to advantage and progress.

NEW YORK.

Amalgamation Rejected.

The past week was a most important one in the history of the florists' business in New York. A scheme was sprung to amalgamate the New York Cut Flower Company, now doing business at 119 West Twenty-third street, and the Cut Flower Exchange, at the Thirty-fourth street ferry. The former is a combination of large growers, organized a few years ago for the purpose of dispensing with the services of commission men, the latter is a market composed of most of the small growers on Long Island.

The Cut Flower Company have to either renew their lease or vacate this year, and the Exchange have two more years before their lease expires. It was proposed by the large growers that the present corporations be dissolved, and that they both combine and open a new flower market at the southwest corner of Thirty-first street and Broadway. A special meeting of the stockholders of the Cut Flower Exchange was held at their market on Saturday morning last, and the proposition was put before them and defeated by a stock vote of 186 for and 198 against.

Never was there a more exciting meeting held anywhere, it was pathetically picturesque. Here in the oldest and largest cut flower mart we have in the country, men were gathered together who have been identified with the flower business since the old days, aye, back to forty years ago, who have struggled and toiled on, winter and summer alike, working like slaves during the day, preparing their flowers at night, and arriving at the market at 6 a. m.; we have known most of them for over seventeen years. God only knows how they stand it, some of them can but grow ivy leaves and candytuft in the tumble-down houses—the nightmares of their lives—whilst others have splendid establishments and are famous for the quality of their products. These men, and women, too, are of all nationalities, but the majority are Germans.

Some years ago they formed a corporation, put their hard earned little moneys into the venture, and have prospered. Success, no matter how small, is capable of bringing contentment to those who have little or no pleasure in life, and any seeming device which threatens to destroy that success is met as a foe and fought most bitterly. This was the case on Saturday, the "well-to-do" element were willing to try their luck with the new venture, but the poorest dreaded the scheme with the full weight of desperation. To them it was a case of the sharks and the little fishes, and history and experience taught them to beware. It even went so far that these small growers were determined to open a market for themselves should the scheme of amalgamation succeed. It would seem assured that there will always be a market near this ferry, yet that there will be a new one on or near Broadway.

Sooner or later we suppose New York will have a creditable plant and flower market, that is inevitable, and there is nothing impossible to a united florists' wish here. The present system and the new proposition is, and would fall short of the requirements. If we could but eradicate the feeling of venomous distrust which seems to pervade and guide the actions of certain elements in our trade, poor New York might at least be a more pleasant place to live in. Some have lived so well, though, that they have become completely blind to the "live and let live" signs. There's an end to every rope. Let us have more honest good feeling; it's badly needed in these short lives of ours.

A Plant Market.

The New York Market Florists' Association held a meeting at the Clinton market restaurant, March 15th. It was decided to open the season on Saturday, March 24th. The above is composed of plant growers from New Jersey and Long Island. Clinton market is the only plant market we have in New York; it is situated at West and Canal streets. The season opens in March and closes in late summer.

New York Gardeners' Society.

The New York Gardeners' Society will hold its quarterly meeting and carnation show in the parlors of the New York Press Club, 34 West Twenty-sixth street, New York city, on the afternoon and evening of March 27th. Mr. C. W. Ward has offered a beautiful silver cup for the best collection of carnations, twelve flowers of each variety, three of the varieties must have originated with either Mr. Ward or Mr. Dörner. F. R. and P. M. Pierson have offered a prize for the best display of carnations. The Florists' Review, through its eastern representative, offers Wm. Scott's grand work, "The Florists' Manual," for the best fifty carnation flowers, not less than three varieties. This prize, value $5, is offered in this class to give the man with a small place a chance with the big one, and keen competition is expected. The publishers of American Gardening offer two years' subscription to that paper for the best seedling carnation. All the above classes are confined to private gardeners. Certificates of merit will be awarded to meritorious new carnations exhibited by commercial growers.

This is a chance to all to have the very highest recognition given to their products. The New York Press Club is composed of the brightest men in the newspaper and literary world of New York, the entire press of the city is represented here, and we feel it is only necessary to state that every courtesy and every opportunity will be afforded the entire floricultural community to exhibit their best that day. Mr. John A. Hennessy and Col. A. B. de Frece, the chairman of the house committee and chairman of the entertainment committee of the New York Press Club, have graciously tendered the use of the club's room for the day, and we hope all will send an exhibit of their new carnations. Any flowers sent to Jas. I. Donlan, at above address, on the 27th of March, will be carefully staged and attended to.

Various Items.

Everyone expects a very good Easter trade. At the present time wheels go slowly.

Mr. Thomas Young, Jr., intends to visit London and Paris this summer as usual, but denies that he intends to open branch stores in those cities.

New York will be a place of much interest next week. We hope to see a most creditable rose show at the Eden Musee on the 27th. Every rose grower in the country should be represented there. There are so many meetings to be held in this city in connection with one flower or another, that a large crowd of visitors is expected.

BOSTON.

The Market.

The week past was a very changeable one in many respects, as seen with a floral eye. The weather was particularly that way, varying from summer heat and dusts to winter's bleakest, and one of our wettest rains chased a vigorous snowstorm out of our borders in a way full of points for the burghers.

The first half of the week did a brisk business for us and we all wore our blandest smile. But that rain damped off everything for a couple of days except a fair movement on funeral trade, and although Saturday did its very best it could not retrieve the lost ground.

Red roses dragged the hardest. Small sizes of other colors sold fairly well and white were scarce Saturday. Holders of large ones wanted more than buyers were willing to pay.

Carnations in light colors went well enough all the week, darker ones at times being too plentiful. Violets are right where they may be expected at this date—a rising wave of them looming before us. Jonquils got very familiar during the middle of the week, but drifted away later. Fine white for finishing funeral work was called for.

News Notes.

News items did not come my way and had no time to go after them.

Mr. Elliott made his appearance upon his old beat around the city the first of the week, his strong appearance calling forth congratulations from his friends. He has interesting reminis-cences of his two weeks' hospital experiences, where a highly successful operation was performed upon him for one of the worst cases of appendicitis, so he was told.

Grippe has a firm hold of the profession and members are not signing the pledge very copiously just now.

May not a list of the awards at our trade exhibition be of value to your readers, since an account of the show dodged your columns?

They were as follows: E. N. Peirce & Sons, mignonette; J. L. Dillon, Queen Louise violets; Cottage Gardens, Mrs. G. M. Bradt, best variegated carnation; Wm. Sim, Princess de Galles, single violet; D. Carmichael, Eleanor Ames, best dark pink carnation; J. W. Howard, Bridesmaids roses; Wm. Sim, Eldorado, best yellow carnation; M. A. Patten, Gen. Gomez, best crimson carnation; W. L. Minor, Imperial violet; Cottage Gardens, G. H. Crane, best red carnation; L. E. Marquisee received two awards on The Marquis, one for the best vase of carnations and one for being the best light pink. The same exhibitor received an award for carnation novelty.

The present week, March 19th, opened under good auspices all around. Good strong pull on everything.

Various Notes.

M. F. La Roche, of Collingdale, Pa., is sending in some very fine La France roses, with stems 2½ feet long, which sell on sight at 12 cents.

W. K. Harris is supplying some fine tulips in flats.

J. J. Habermehl's Sons, Twenty-second and Diamond, have been quite busy the past week, having the decorating of several large dry goods stores that are preparing for their spring openings.

W. J. Moon is handling some very fine valley, which is supplied by Julius Roehrs, Carlton Hill, N. J.

Mrs. M. Plender reports doing a rushing business in funeral work the past week.

The theater benefit given under the auspices of the Bowling Club was quite a success.

Visitors the past week were: Fred and James Weir, Jr., of the firm of James Weir's Sons, Brooklyn, N. Y.; A. N. Pierson, Cromwell, Conn., and A. Gude, Washington, D. C.

Charles D. Ball has received a shipment of the Garland iron gutter to be used in the new houses he will build this spring.

Florists' at the Traps.

The first of the new series of handicap tournaments of the Florists' Gun Club was held on March 13th on the club grounds at Wissinoming and drew a big crowd of shooters to the grounds. Tuesday's shoot had fourteen entries, and was closely contested throughout, resulting finally in a tie between Cartledge and Barrett, with handicap of nine. Cartledge made high score with 52, while Barrett with a handicap of 12 scored one less. Coleman, who shot at the lowest mark, made the best score with 22 out of 25, at unknown angles.

Cartledge, 52; Barrett, 51; Dorp, 49; Coleman, 47; Wescott, 47; Parsons, 45; McKaraher, 43; Webster, 42; C. Brinton, 38; Eisenlohr, 38; P. Brinton, 37; Snow, 35; Cummings, 34; Burk, 16.

ST. LOUIS.

The Market.

The market keeps quite firm. There is no overstock and no scarcity in any one line. The quality of stock is generally very good. Bridesmaids, Brides and Meteors are coming in in extra fine quality from Ammann, Vesey, Kellogg, Kuhl, Emundt and others. Our home growers, too, are sending in an extra fine quality of roses, carnations and violets.

The topic for the present is Easter. Growers, retailers and wholesalers all have their interest and their hopes centered in the coming festival. The bright, warm weather of late has hastened the plants along and from appearances there will be an abundance of stock for the usual heavy demand. Last week carnations were very scarce, but are coming in better now, but hardly enough to go around.

Business in general has been good and no effects of Lent have been felt so far. Funeral work, of course, is the bulk of it and all florists as well as the commission houses are satisfied with the business they have done during Lent.

Prices on most lines are easy. Varieties such as Meteors, Brides and Bridesmaids are from $4 to $6 per 100; Woottons and Perles, $2 to $4; Beauties, extra long, are $4 per dozen. In carnations Scotts, Daybreaks and all whites head the list; reds are getting more plentiful. A few are sold at $1.50, but the bulk of them are sold at $2 and $2.50, with the demand great. Romans and paper whites are selling at $2 and $3; Dutch hyacinths, valley and tulips bring $2 to $4; callas, $6 and $10; Harrislis are still $12.50; good freesia brings $2. Violets continue very plenty; there are many more than the market under ordinary conditions can consume. Californias are down to 25 cents; some extra fine ones go at 30 cents; doubles, 50 cents; small single, 10 cents. Southern stock brings about 1 cent per bunch of 25, and lots of others going to waste. Smilax is still plentiful and the demand slow at $12.50 per 100 strings.

Notes.

Our visitor this week was S. S. Skidelsky, the man who sells everything in the florist line, in resplendent attire and with a smile that would make any man buy his goods.

Mr. Potts has opened his floral store at 3838 Finney avenue, under the name of The Eden Floral Co.

Max Herzog, at Gratiot Station, has purchased 50 feet more ground adjoining his place. Max will build a new house this summer, 100x27, supplied with the new iron gutter which Max thinks is a great thing.

Your correspondent was inquiring among the boys the past week as to how many would go to Chicago with the bowling club, and from their talk the chances are that the visit will have to be deferred until after Easter, but more will be known by Monday night at the club's rolling. We don't want to go without our best team and our own balls, as we well remember what happened to us on our last visit some two years ago.

Bowling.

The members of the bowling club rolled five very poor games on Monday night. It seemed that every one of the bowlers had an off night.

In talking over the Chicago trip it was decided not to visit our Chicago friends until after Easter and about the 22nd of April was set for the Sunday to be in Chicago. So any one wishing to go with us will have plenty of time to think it over and let us know.

The scores for the Chicago boys to look at for this week are as follows:

BALTIMORE.

Various Notes.

The firm of Madsen & Andersen, rose growers, will be dissolved April 1st. It is composed of William Madsen and Andrew Andersen, and has existed five years, during which time it has been noted for superior American Beauty, La France and Bridesmaid roses, which have been taken regularly by stores with the most exacting and fastidious customers. Their houses have been models of order, neatness and careful cultivation, whilst the copartners are respected alike for their integrity of character, frankness of speech and modesty of demeanor.

They are both Danes by nationality. Mr. Madsen worked for a time, as we believe, with the late Wm. D. Brackenridge, was afterwards for many years gardener to Mr. Edgar G. Miller, and later began business on his own account.

Mr. Anderson went from Copenhagen to London, where he was engaged with Hugh Low & Co., and was sent by that firm to take charge of the orchid houses of the late T. Harrison Garrett, near this city. He succeeded Mr. Madsen as gardener at Mr. Miller's, and then the two joined forces in the partnership about terminating.

It is said by some who profess to know that the enterprise—though not an extensive one—has been probably the most profitable of any in its line around the city. These two men carried on all the operations of their six houses practically without help, except in the roughest work, attending to all the details of propagating, firing, ventilating, gathering, packing and marketing the crop, etc., with the natural result that their products have long been conceded to be in the very lead in our market. Mr. Madsen will continue the business at the old stand, and Mr. Anderson, whose place adjoins, will at once build a range of houses with all modern conveniences. The change is due to personal considerations, and only friendly relations exist between the parties.

The old Wiedey greenhouses near Mount Washington are being dismantled and the materials removed. This place, except to the originator, has been an unfortunate one to all who have operated it, and a crop of numerous actions at law, civil and criminal, have resulted from the various phases of its occupation by a succession of gardeners.

Edwin A. Seidewitz contemplates radical changes in the conduct of his business, looking to widening his already extended trade. To protect and perpetuate the business, should his personal services be withdrawn, as they may be in part by the demands upon his time of existing and prospective duties, a corporation will be formed, including new and experienced parties, and with an additional capital beyond his present considerable investment. A range of houses will be built near Arlington, one of our accessible suburbs, to be used for the growing of plants, whilst the present establishment at Annapolis will be devoted to producing cut flowers. The store on Lexington street, which has a glass-roofed showroom for the display of plants, will be further improved and every department of the business developed.

Prices have sagged somewhat on flowers for the week ending this day (March 19th), but in some cases they have regained all they lost, and both roses and carnations have been fairly well taken up. This, notwithstanding two falls of snow and a winter temperature almost as low as any we have had this year. Naturally the Lenten season has diminished the demand for flowers, as is always the case, and big decorations have been entirely lacking, but teas, card parties and small affairs have made a steady if not wholly satisfactory trade, whilst funeral requirements are not at any rate below the average.

The Charles street stores feel the cessation of social festivities more than do the smaller dealers, and the consensus of opinion inclines to the verdict that Lent does not of late years so markedly and summarily decrease sales as it was formerly found to do.

Club Meeting.

At the last meeting of the Florists' Club a very interesting display was made by Mr. C. J. Stromback, of Lincoln Park, of the hyacinths that had been sent him from the state of Washington for trial. There were a dozen plants in 4-inch pots, all in splendid bloom, the varieties being Gertrude, Norma, Gen. Pellis, Marie and King of the Blues. These were three-year-old bulbs, having been imported from Holland when one year old and grown two years by a Mr. Larrabee, of Fairhaven, Washington, on land about five or six feet above the sea level. All bore two good spikes of bloom, and Mr. Stromback said the bulbs were the largest hyacinth bulbs he had ever seen.

Among the visitors at the meeting was Mr. B. D. Kapteyn, representing a firm of bulb growers at Sassenheim, Holland, and he said he was surprised to see such fine spikes of flowers from bulbs grown in America; they were far ahead of what he had anticipated. He expressed the belief that when experienced growers of bulbs were employed here that success in bulb growing would be assured. He doubted, though, whether American growers would be so successful in propagating their own bulbs as in growing on young bulbs imported from Holland. He stated that in Holland the bulbs were not grown to maturity in the same soil. The soil is varied from year to year, and long experience had been required to demonstrate which soil is best at each particular stage of development.

The Holland growers had found some varieties much easier to grow than others and he predicted trouble when American growers attempted to produce bulbs of such sorts as La Grandesse and Czar Peter. These varieties are subject to a bacterial disease that generally appears a few days after a rain and which sometimes in a few hours will destroy a large number of bulbs. Its presence is first shown by the appearance of small specks on the leaves. No remedy has been discovered and the Holland growers simply remove the affected soil and start afresh. They could never succeed with the delicate varieties when planted in a heavy soil.

Mention having been made of some Washington grown tulips that bore two flowers, he stated that this occasionally happened with certain varieties, Proserpine, Chrysolora and Rembrandt being the only ones he had known to bear twin flowers.

Mr. Simon, who had several times visited the bulb growing section in the state of Washington, read an article descriptive of the climate, soil, etc., of the Puget Sound country and answered inquiries as to the methods pursued in growing the bulbs.

The Chicago Carnation Co. displayed flowers of four of their seedling carnations. No. 44, a fine large red with ideal stem, scored 86 points and received a certificate. No. 82, a variegated in the way of Bradt and Olympia, and with an excellent stem, scored 88 points and also received a certificate. No. 64, a variegated somewhat in the way of Sandusky, scored 70 points, and Chicot, white, scored 81 points. The judges were Messrs. John Reardon, C. J. Stromback and P. M. Broadbeck.

Mr. John Reardon showed a small plant of Western King chrysanthemum bearing six very fair flowers. This variety seems inclined to produce flowers the year around.

Four new members were elected, as follows: Wm. Timme and Frank Fisher, Joliet; Martin Magnuson, Bowmanville; Chas. Hughes, city.

"Easter Plants" was the subject selected for the next meeting.

The Market.

The supply has been somewhat curtailed and flowers are rather scarce, especially white carnations. There is no appreciable change in prices, but selling figures are kept well up to quotations. Violets are an exception, however. The poor violet is badly in the dumps. They don't move and there are literally violets to burn.

The cut of Beauties has materially increased and they are selling well. Bassett & Washburn are now cutting 1,000 Beauties a day and they all go.

The cut of carnations has considerably fallen off and it is feared there may be a shortage for Easter, though a good crop of roses seems assured.

Various Items.

James B. Seward, for many years well known to the trade in this city, died March 17 of pneumonia, aged 70 years. Mr. Seward was a relative of Wm. H. Seward, who was secretary of state when Abraham Lincoln was president, and had been a resident of Chicago for forty-five years. He marketed his flowers personally for many years and the old gentleman with his basket was a familiar figure to the retailers.

He had lived in his house on East Forty-seventh street during the entire period of his long residence in this city.

Mr. Philip Scott, Buffalo, son of Wm. Scott, passed through the city last Tuesday on his way to Denver, having taken a position in the store of the Park Floral Co., of that city. He was accompanied by the wife of Mr. M. Bloy, who recently went from Buffalo to take charge of the greenhouses of the same firm. It was Mr. Scott's first visit to the city, and he seemed to enjoy the sights and the bowling in the evening, ere taking his train for the west.

Three games were played at Anson's and the scores were as follows:

	1	2	3	av.
Philip Scott	169	182	176	175
Ed. Winterson	151	183	151	161
Geo. Asmus	205	172	161	179
Jno. Degnan	153	122	141	141

The bowlers have arranged to visit Joliet this coming Saturday evening and try conclusions with a team selected from the florists there. The employees of the Chicago Carnation Co. will no doubt figure largely in the Joliet team.

Fire did damage to the amount of $170 to the store of Chas. Neiglick at 239 North State street, last Saturday morning.

The Weiland-Risch Floral Co., who have quite a range of glass at Evanston, will open a city wholesale store at 59 Wabash avenue about April 1.

Mr. Flint Kennicott, president of Kennicott Bros. Co., though decidedly an "old timer" in the trade, is still a comparatively young man and keeps in close touch with the details of the large business of which he is the head.

Mr. C. L. Washburn has returned from his sojourn at West Baden, Ind., considerably improved in health.

Mr. O. W. Frese has returned to his first love and is again in the wholesale line, this time as manager for George Reinberg. The retail store at 72 State street is now conducted by his brother, H. C. Frese.

Mr. Adolph Poehlmann has withdrawn from the firm of Poehlmann Bros., his interest having been purchased by his brothers John and August, who will continue the business under the old firm name. John will continue in charge of the city salesroom and August will look after the greenhouses at Morton Grove. Adolph is arranging to build greenhouses of his own, probably at Morton Grove.

Mrs. Bella Miller, who has conducted the floral store at 730½ West Madison street for the past five or six years, was found dead in bed the morning of March 16.

John Ring, a well known journeyman florist, was killed by the cars last Sunday at LaGrange.

Geo. T. King, of Boston, is in the city, in the interests of Nicholson's Dictionary of Gardening.

BUFFALO.

March so far has been like Mrs. Gargery, continually on the rampage. If well distributed there has been enough winter in March to cover the whole season, and still we live and perhaps in a few days will wake to hear the robin and bluebird piping a cheery note on a near-by apple tree. The croak or chirp of the frogs and toads in the nearest swamp or marsh is fine music for the first few days.

Mr. James Kidd, late of San Francisco, who recently passed through here on his way east, remarked how enjoyable it was to see the snow. He expressed himself as utterly tired of the Pacific slope weather. A few weeks of rain, perhaps, and all the rest of the year burnt up. A New Yorker sees California in March after the rains and thinks it charming. If the same man saw it in August or September, when everything but irrigated spots is brown and burnt, he would have a different story to tell.

This perpetual sun and balmy breeze may produce gold, grizzlies and greasers, but the supply of men and women who rule and lead the world must forever spring from the unfavored climes; "Land of brown heath and shaggy wood, land of the mountain and the flood." So I believe we should be thankful we are in the north where we get changes and variety of climate, and we greatly relish the changes as we do beefsteak and mushrooms after two days of pork and beans.

Business from one cause and another has been quite fair, and there has been an abundance of good flowers to fill orders. The writer gave up his downtown store last week, but fully expects to do more business and do it better in every way at the Cold Springs place, which, through the growth of the city, is very central for the residence district.

The sensation in getting rid of this store is precisely like a man who has been condemned to carry a back-breaking burden along a dusty road to a given milestone, and when he reached that he was allowed to throw the burden in the ditch.

The very severe weather has been unfavorable for work on the Pan-American, but excavation on the canals has kept steadily on and many large trees are being brought on the grounds and permanently planted. The greatest activity must start up directly winter loosens her icy grip, for most of the buildings will be started at once and Mr. R. Ulrich will be the busiest man in the country, for he will need an army of men to convert the rather unfavorable ground into the many beautiful landscape features.

I think that I entirely forgot to mention the very pleasant call of General John Walker on his way home from Cleveland some two weeks ago. "General John" sounds pleasant and hackneyed, but in this case there is nothing else fills the bill, for truly John is a pleasant fellow. If you can't spend a pleasant time with John you should "get thee to a nunnery," or a hennery, they are all the same to me. It should be noticed by young men in the business that Mr. Walker, who is certainly a success at it, is heart and soul in the business, loves to talk it, and like all enthusiasts is as anxious to learn a point as to impart one.

John's average here in a few games of bowls was 117. Now there must be something easy in those Broad street alleys where John Westcott can bowl 155. They are perhaps especially constructed for elderly men. We had one here like it, but they floored it over and now it's a soup kitchen.

Another of the Buffalo boys has left us. Philip Scott, with Mrs. M. Bloy and her little son, left last night for Denver. Mr. Bloy went there six weeks ago to take charge of the Park Floral Co.'s extensive place, and I think the sincerest proof of his success is for Mr. Valentine to send back for more of the same school. P. S. will take charge of the fine store of the firm and assurance that he is making a success of his charge will be a happy day for his parents. Philip is supposed to be a great bowler; he has been, although never shining out in our national games, but what he really is is a great ball player. So let Denver select its pitcher, for you have now a catcher. Manly sport and the desire to hunt and shoot is as natural in a healthy boy as to breathe, but like other instincts inherited from remote and savage ancestors they fade away with our present environments. Don't for our physical welfare let them fade too fast, but be sure to let them be subordinate both in thought and practice, to your business duties.

WATERTOWN, N. Y.

Death of W. W. Greene.

Westel Willoughby Greene, aged 80 years and 6 months, died suddenly from heart failure at his home, 83 Washington street, Watertown, N. Y., on March 9th, 1900.

The past winter has taken from our midst many of our old residents, those who have been ever watchful of the interests of Watertown and its surroundings and who have responded to every call with their strength to help push the wheel of progress and make the city one of the best.

We are now caused to mourn the death of W. W. Greene, who possessed all these qualities and more, one whose success in life was due to prompt business habits and strict integrity, one who was a thorough Christian and before all he placed his church and home, ever ready with a kind and loving word and helping hand to guide the ship of life. Modest and unassuming, he possessed that talent in that he loved nature, flowers. He was the oldest florist in Jefferson county.

In 1853 he founded the Jefferson County Nurseries, the first industry of its kind to be established in this county. The business increased and grew to enormous proportions under his management, and for many years was conducted by Mr. Greene and his son, J. F. Greene, under the firm name of W. W. Greene & Son.

In 1895 Mr. Greene retired from the business, owing to old age, but not until he had given it a standing that will cause it to live long. The business is now conducted by Greene & Underhill, the senior member being Mr. Greene's eldest son.

The deceased was born in this city in the year 1819. He was the son of Jacob Greene, who settled at Perch River in 1814. John Coddington Greene was the deceased's grandfather and was first cousin to Gen. Nathaniel Greene, an honored hero of the revolutionary war. Mr. Greene's ancestry was a notable one and their names may be found interwoven in all the great historical events of Jefferson county since the revolutionary war.

When 12 years of age Mr. Greene removed to Albany county, where he became a member of the Shakers' Community. After remaining there until 1852 he returned to this city and shortly after married Elizabeth Ingham, who survives him; also two sons, J. F. and W. C. Greene, of this city, and two daughters, Mrs. G. N. Sayles, of this city, and Mrs. F. P. Trench, of Lawrenceville, N. Y.

The funeral was held on Sunday, March 11, 1900, Mr. A. M. Dullay, pastor of the First Presbyterian church, of which Mr. Greene was a member, officiating. Interment was at Brookside cemetery.

OCEANIC, N. J.

The Monmouth County Horticultural Society held its regular semi-monthly meeting March 17th, with President Kettel in the chair. The meeting was well attended and the proceedings were of much interest to those present.

The ball committee reported all bills paid and a surplus of over $40 on hand. Short speeches were made by Prof. C. H. Walling, T. S. Barkuloo, H. A. Kettel, N. Butterbach and others.

The secretary was instructed to notify every member to be present at the next meeting, April 6th, for the transaction of very important business.

SYRACUSE, N. Y.

Trade has been quite a little brisker since Lent began. Flowers of all kinds are plentiful, with the exception of roses. Bulb stuff goes rather slowly, yellow tulips, daffodils and valley being the best sellers.

Yellow teas and functions more numerous in place of the red ones of last year. Golden Gate roses are fast becoming favorites, the extras on long stems bringing 75 cents each at retail.

THE GLASS SITUATION.

The following report, which recently appeared in the daily press, was referred by us to a large dealer in glass, who replies that the report is about correct, and that the Glass Workers' Union will build three tanks so as to manufacture glass this fall, and are to assess the workmen weekly to raise money to build the same. The dealer continues: "But whether they will be able to continue building them is another question, and our idea is that the present manufacturers will make prices low enough so that they will not be able to make the profit that they expect. We do not look for any lower prices certainly before fall, and really glass is being sold at a decline in price while most other building materials are sold at a considerable advance."

If the glass workers are really as strong as indicated in the report we print below it would appear that they will have little difficulty in eventually controlling the manufacture of glass, and the price at which it shall be sold, at least up to the point where it may be profitable to import glass from Europe. But the present manufacturers will probably not succumb to this "labor trust" without a struggle, and the "war" may bring prices to a lower figure than ever before. Still it would not be a safe proposition to figure on. But what will be the price of glass should the "labor trust" get absolute control?

We hear so much of capitalistic trusts that "labor trusts" seem strange to us. But they may prove to be even more powerful than the other type. Following is the report referred to:

Window glass workers are planning to force the manufacturers out of business and gain complete control of the industry in the United States.

By way of beginning it has practically been decided to construct three large "continuous tank" furnaces for the manufacture of window glass, and to have them completed and in operation by Sept. 15. This entering wedge will be followed by others as rapidly as the workmen can perfect plans, and it is said that inside of five years there will not be a foot of window glass manufactured in this country except by the capital of the workmen who make it. The scheme to invade the manufacturing field has been fostered in the breasts of the workmen for several years, and has been carefully nurtured to a great strength.

The beginning was the establishment of several small co-operative factories in various parts of the country, and the success of these has made the workmen confident that they can enjoy the manufacturing as well as the labor end of the industry. The plan has been carefully worked out and submitted in detail to the "preceptories" all over the country. Every window glass worker in the United States is a member of a "preceptory," and the "preceptories" make up the national window glass workers' organization, which is known as Local Assembly 300, K. of L.

In the voting sheets which were sent out by the executive committee the plan is set forth circumstantially, and the object is stated to be: "That said membership may attain industrial independence and receive a greater share of the profits and benefits of their labor." Apparently the workmen are in a position to organize the new trust without material opposition. Present manufacturers are at the mercy of the workmen's organization, which is the most powerful of its kind in the country. Its strength lies mainly in the fact that its cast iron rules have kept the supply of labor way below the demand.

The tremendous power this gives them is illustrated by the fact that, although there are 2,400 pots available in the United States, there are workmen to operate only 2,100 of them. Of this number 1,400 are in trust factories. The 700 outside of the combination have made the competition for workmen so sharp that laborers have been able to secure wages way above the regular scale. No one is eligible to an apprenticeship in this iron-clad labor trust unless he be the son or brother of a blower or gatherer. If, however, he is a skilled laborer from a foreign country and desires to become a member, he may do so if he proves acceptable by paying into the treasury the sum of $500. For years the manufacturers have endeavored in vain to destroy the effect of these rules by importation of labor and by other expedients, but the organization has remained in control of the situation.

As soon as the three furnaces now contemplated are completed they will be manned by skilled workmen taken from some of the factories of the combined or independent manufacturers, leaving the abandoned concerns powerless to obtain men to man their furnaces. From time to time the contributions of the workmen will be added to the profits of the factories in operation and the money used in building additional furnaces or in purchasing those already in existence. It is thought that as soon as the original furnaces are in operation and the manufacturers realize that they are going to be forced out of business, the workmen will have no difficulty in purchasing at reasonable prices all the plants they need.

So far as known there will not be an attempt on the part of the workmen to enter the field of distribution of the finished product, and it is likely that the present method of distribution will not be disturbed. The strength of the organization is so great and so generally recognized that no fear is felt that there will be trouble over the distribution when the output is under control of the workmen.

BULB GROWING IN THE SOUTH.

During the past twelve years I have experimented in various lines in this locality, with fine soil, seasons and climate, well adapted to growing many plants, trees and bulbs. The tuberose, gladiolus, etc., increase very rapidly. The season is long and favorable.

It seems to me that anyone who understands the growing of bulbs might grow them largely here at small cost, and be able to compete with the imported stock.

Roses and ornamental stock are easily produced, and with a growing season of about eight months our one-year-old stock competes with two-year-old stock grown in the north.

DUCHESS OF MARLBOROUGH VIOLET.

Several inquiries regarding the Duchess of Marlborough violet, quoted in our San Francisco news letter, were sent us, and these were forwarded to our San Francisco correspondent, who replies as follows:

"In answer to your letter of March 3d concerning Duchess of Marlborough violet, would say it is a grand violet, with fine fragrance, long, stiff stems, in color a rich magenta, and it keeps well. It also has the good quality of being a late violet; that is, good, large, salable flowers can be picked from the plants when the Princess of Wales and California are almost worthless, it stands the warm spring weather so well.

"Mr. Thomas Stevenson, The London Florist, is the gentleman that has it and the only grower here who has a stock. He obtained his stock from Sutton & Sons, Kent, England. He thinks so well of the violet that he has just completed a plantation of two acres of the Duchess. Its market value is double that of the Princess of Wales at retail just now. The Princess sells at 25 cents per bunch, while the Duchess sells for 50 cents a bunch. Our bunches in this market contain from 75 to 100 blooms.

"The violet is a new one in this market and is quickly bought up. The public seem to know a good thing when they see it, hence the high price. Mr. Stevenson says he will have plants ready in about two months from this date at 25 cents per plant and will be glad to supply any one desiring stock."

MILWAUKEE.Death of A. Middlemass.

Archibald Middlemass, the well known florist of this city and a veteran in the trade, died March 15 of pneumonia, aged 58 years. The fatal illness resulted from a cold contracted while at work around his greenhouses on Forest Home avenue.

Mr. Middlemass was 58 years of age and a native of Edinburgh, Scotland. He moved to Brooklyn, N. Y., with his family on the death of his father in 1851, and came to Milwaukee eight years later to take charge of the private greenhouses and gardens of David Ferguson. A few years later he went into partnership with John W. Dunlop as florist and nurseryman, and for five years they conducted the Rose Hill nursery at the junction of Forest Home and Muskego avenues. In 1870, they separated, and Mr. Middlemass began business alone on the property where he lived at the time of his death.

He was a lifelong member of St. Andrew's Society and of the Milwaukee Curling Club, and was always prominent at the social and literary gatherings of the former and the tournaments of the latter. He was director of the games at the annual Scotch picnics for a number of years. He was twice president of St. Andrew's Society.

Mr. Middlemass was twice married, and is survived by a widow, two daughters and two sons. Miss May Middlemass, one of the daughters, is a kindergarten director in the Eleventh district primary school.

GERMANTOWN, PA.—Several local florists were recently caught by the bogus check man. The usual procedure was to order a $7 design and tender a $15 check in payment. The checks proved worthless and the florists were out of pocket the $8 change as well as the cost and trouble of making the design, which was ordered sent to some spurious address.

JACKSONVILLE, ILL.—Jos. Heisl is about to build a new house and will use the Garland iron gutter.

MADISON, N. J.

The regular meeting of Morris County Gardeners' and Florists' Club was held in Masonic Hall on Wednesday last, President Duckham in the chair.

One new member was elected, and the secretary announced the receipt of a check for $15 from F. R. Pierson Co., Tarrytown, N. Y., for special prizes for chrysanthemum Col. Appleton, to be competed for at the show in November next.

Mr. A. Herrington gave a talk on carnations, more especially upon the great developments brought about in the flower in the past few years. Thanks to the kindness of Dailedouze Brothers and C. W. Ward, who kindly sent specimen blooms of No. 666, No. 3 and other novelties, and unnamed seedlings, as well as flowers of standard varieties new and old, some very interesting comparisons were possible, well showing the marked improvements in every particular. He considered that the American Carnation Society had given a great impetus to effort in this direction, for whereas but a few years back you could number the raisers of seedlings on the fingers, today almost everyone growing carnations did likewise.

H.

COLORADO SPRINGS, COLO.

Cards have been issued announcing the coming marriage of Miss Viola Mary Clark, daughter of William Clark, the florist, and Mr. Charles Dent Harner, which is to take place April 4th.

Miss Clark is well known to all in the trade who have visited Colorado Springs, she having been in full charge of her father's florist's business for some years, and she impressed all she came in contact with as being an exceedingly bright as well as attractive young woman.

The trade will lose one of its fairest ornaments and Mr. Wm. Clark will probably now be obliged to devote more attention to his greenhouses and less to mining.

FOSTORIA, O.—E. R. Sackett will build several new houses this spring. He has just returned from Chicago, where he investigated the Garland Iron gutter and afterward placed his order for enough of this gutter to fit his new houses.

LAFAYETTE, IND.—Mr. H. Roth has made plans for the erection of three more greenhouses and a handsome residence.

SAGINAW, MICH.

An object lesson in utilizing space is given by Chas. Frueh & Son, who turned out four successive crops in one year from one bench. They commenced with a crop of chrysanthemums, followed by poinsettias, then a crop of lettuce, and the space is now occupied by geraniums, of which more than ten thousand are ready for spring sales.

About 3,000 poinsettias are in the sand bed for next season. Old wood being used it is rather slow in callousing, but when it does break it makes a strong plant.

Carnations are fine, including Mary Wood, Bradt, Flora Hill and Daybreak. Glacier will be grown in place of old Lamborn, which has played out. A splendid pink seedling is the most profitable flower they have.

Roses are grown in solid beds with permanent tile drainage. Mr. Eel Worm has introduced himself, but is meeting with a chilly reception and will soon take his departure.

Some well built carnation houses open at the gutters are replacing the old time narrow and single houses. A large light house for smilax and asparagus was completed before cold weather set in. Young stock is in excellent condition.

Grohman Bros. have made a great change in their place by adding a store and office, which sets off the place to decided advantage. M.

LANSING, MICH.

J. A. Bissinger had to hustle to finish building before cold weather set in, but he did it and has a plant most convenient to handle and elegant in appearance. Situated on Capitol and another main avenue, the double fronted store is shown to great advantage and is kept well stocked from the greenhouses at the rear. A handsome dwelling was also finished at the same time. M.

ALBION, MICH.

The Misses Dysinger are much pleased with business, which is steadily increasing. They have decided to enlarge their plant and have secured for the purpose a location upon the best street in the town, where soon a model structure will be built. M.

GRAND RAPIDS, WIS.—Mr. L. H. Read has closed out his interests here and has removed to Fruitdale, Ala., where he will engage in bulb growing. The Riverdale Seed Farm is arranging for building anew this season after losing their warehouse and greenhouse by fire last January.

MR. J. AUSTIN SHAW has been appointed sole American agent for Edw. Van Coppenolle, of Ghent, Belgium, one of the oldest European houses, this year celebrating its "Golden Jubilee," having been established fifty years.

ELM CITY A Grand New White....

Carnation Seedling of Lizzie McGowan
and Mme. Diaz Albertini,
in its fifth year.

The flowers are large, finely shaped and of strong fragrance. Petals are heavy, of good substance and nicely fringed. Calyx is very strong, after the style of Mme. Albertini, and none bursting; the stem strong, holding the flower erect. The plant is a good grower and free bloomer, not subject to stem rot or any disease. Rooted Cuttings ready February 1st, $1.50 per doz., $10 per 100, or $70 per 1000. Cash with order. We shall prepay the express where money accompanies the order. Orders filled in rotation.

GENEVIEVE LORD. The Peer of Light Pinks.

(Stock for delivery prior to March 20, all sold.)

The people know a good thing when they see it. If you haven't seen it ask someone who has concerning its appearance. It has proven itself the most popular selling carnation we have ever grown, and as it combines quantity with quality it is no surprise to know it is the most profitable we have ever grown.

Some of its Features: The finest stem of any carnation. The color is just right, the ladies go wild over it. It is large, grades easily as a fancy. Odor is very sweet. Form beautiful, calyx perfect. It is a perfect non-bursting carnation. Every grower will appreciate this. If you don't grow Genevieve Lord next winter your list will not be complete. Remember, stock is all sold until March 20. PRICE: $2.00 per doz., $10.00 per 100, $75.00 per 1000.

Catalogue ready now containing full description of the above as well as the other big new ones and standard sorts. A postal card will bring it. Also complete list of new and standard Chrysanthemums.

Ethel Crocker. Absolutely the Best Pink Carnation ever offered the trade.

A fact fully borne out by its record, being equally good with Craig, Hill and myself (an assurance that it is not a success in one soil and a failure in another.) By its having been shown at the flower shows and clubs since early in September (an assurance that it is not a good late carnation but an all season variety.)

In color, size, fragrance and stem it is just what the "storemen" want. In habit, constitution and freedom of bloom it is just what the grower wants. It produces more flowers to the square foot than any other known variety, and is never out of crop from September to July.

With 18,000 stock plants to work from there is no danger of it being overpropagated, and all orders entrusted to me will be filled with cuttings selected from the plants and also in filling the order, by myself, thus doubly assuring good stock. Honest sample blooms furnished prepaid at $1.00 per dozen, amount deducted from all orders for 100 or over. Up to date every sample excepting one out of several hundred sent has brought an order.

Price per 100, $10.00; per 25, $2.50. Per 1000, $75.00; per 250, $18.75.

FLORISTS' REVIEW

CANANDAIGUA, N. Y.

A. C. Cappon, our leading florist, has done an extensive business in cut flowers this winter. He is a good grower and finds ready sales for his stuff.

J. Balson, who went into the florist's business on Mechanic street last summer, has erected several new greenhouses. He is doing a good business in cut flowers and lettuce. He has raised four full crops of lettuce from the same bench and from the same soil since Nov. 1st, 1899.

The firm of D. Rhine & Son, in the suburbs, have some of the finest roses and carnations and the finest bench of lettuce I ever saw. Most of their trade is wholesale. They have from nine to ten thousand hybrid roses ready for sale this spring.

J. Jones, private gardener at Brigham Hall institution, has a fine bench of carnations, the largest flowers I ever saw, Triumph, Duhme, America and other varieties.

Bobbie McKurr, gardener to Mrs. J. Mecknie, has an elegant bench of Bridesmaid roses, also fine carnations, Frances Joost, America and Mrs. Bratt.

Scotchman, gardener to F. A. Mecknie, "What is name or whaur is hame I dinna care to tell," anyway he has a fine bench of violets; they have been full of bud and blossoms since October last and not a spot of disease can be seen from one end of the bench to the other. He also has a fine bench of carnations, Scott, Albertini, Duhme, Crane, America, Mary Wood, Flora Hill, Painted Lady, etc. Also a nice strain of Chinese primroses in bloom.

CHESTNUT HILL, PHILA.

The regular monthly meeting of the Chestnut Hill Horticultural Society was held at Joslin Hall on the 13th, with double the attendance of our previous meeting. The exhibits far exceeded the expectation of the committee, and it was necessary to purchase additional vases at the last minute.

The schedule committee reported the schedule for the fall show and printed copies are ready for distribution. The premiums offered are as follows:

For chrysanthemum plants.....	$ 89.00
For chrysanthemum blooms.....	57.00
For rose blooms.....	17.00
For carnation blooms.....	18.00
For violet blooms.....	3.00
For miscellaneous plants and bloom.....	42.00
For amateur class.....	9.50
For vegetables, society's premiums ..	23.00
For vegetables, etc., seedsmen's premiums ..	128.00
Making the total, less duplicates,	$377.50.

An interesting paper on mushroom growing was presented by Mr. Paul Reinhardt, and will be discussed next meeting through the "Question Box." Seven names were proposed for membership and the following premiums awarded: Vase of roses, 6 American Beauty, to Charles F. Kreuger; 12, any variety, to Wm. G. Samtman, for vase of Bridesmaid; specimen 3 cinerarias, to John McGowan, gardener to Wm. Bayard; bunch 50 violets, to John McClearey, gardener to Wm. Weightman; plate 12 mushrooms, to Wm. Boyce, gardener to Randal Morgan; specimen flowering plant, to Geo. W. Brown, gardener to R. N. Carson, for Bougainvillea glabra Sanderiana; specimen squash, to Harry Harris, gardener to Mrs. Fell.

Highly commended.—Specimen orchid exhibited by John McClearey, and a collection of Antirrhinum and specimen Phalus grandiflorus exhibited by Frank Gould, Gardener to John T. Morris.

Special mention was made of the following: Vase American Beauty roses and plant of Cineraria Sutton's stellata, exhibited by John McClearey; cinerarias, exhibited by G. W. Brown; vase mixed roses, by Wm. Wilkie, gardener to R. S. Mason; Begonia Gloire de Lorraine, by H. Reuter, gardener to C. W. Henry; eupatorium, by F. Smith, gardener to Miss Nixon; violets, by Richard Moore, gardener to Jas. Cheston; a very fine Cypripedium Lawrenceanum, by M. Punch, gardener to R. LeBoutillier; mushrooms, by Paul Reinhardt, gardener to H. T. Mason; collections of roses, by Robt. C. Carey, gardener to E. T. Price; Brussels sprouts, by Frank Gould.

The most gratifying part of the exhibition was that almost every exhibitor showed in three or more classes. The schedule for the monthly exhibition will be announced at April meeting. ROBT. G. CAREY, Secretary.

SYRACUSE, N. Y.

IRON GUTTERS

Parties contemplating using Iron Gutters will do well to note the following extracts from Patent No. 616,781 issued to George M. Garland:

The object of the invention is to provide a valley-gutter for greenhouses which will be so constructed as to combine a stop for the glass and a drip-conductor.

Another object of the invention is to so construct the gutter that the devices for fastening the gutter to supports will be below the weather-face of the gutter, thus avoiding perforations of the weather-face and consequent liability to leakage.

The nails, screws, or other fastening devices are passed through the drop flanges and into the lower ends of the roof-beams, so that these fastening devices for connecting the valley-gutter to the roof structure are below the weather-faces of the valley-gutter, and consequently the weather-faces of the valley-gutter need not be perforated, insuring against leakage.

THE FLORISTS' MANUAL.

After reading Mr. Wm. Scott's Manual, we wish to say that we consider it without equal as a book of reference for busy florists.

GEO. M. KELLOGG.

Pleasant Hill, Mo.

Mr. Scott's superb work, "The Florists' Manual," was indeed worth waiting for. When compared with the amount of practical information it contains, the selling price, $5.00, seems a mere bagatelle.

Oakland, Md. H. WEBER & SONS.

It is the best book of the kind ever published. There is more in it than in any other book I have ever seen. I am delighted with it.

Chicago. JOHN THORPE.

The copy of the "Florists' Manual" was duly received. I am very well pleased with same. The more I read it the better satisfied I am with it, and there are one or two articles alone in it that are each worth all you ask for the book, for everything is made so plain and all details are right to the point. I trust you may have a good and ready sale for the same.

M. S. WORDEN.

North Adams, Mass.

The only fault to be found with it is when you get reading it the midnight oil is liable to run low and you have to go on to gas or reluctantly break off, either going to bed or first taking a look over the houses to see if the temperature tallies with the Manual.

GEO. S. OSBORN.

Hartford, Conn.

We are in receipt of "The Florists' Manual" by Mr. Scott and may say it is the right book for the florist, published at the right time. It is what we all need.

BOBBINK & ATKINS.

Rutherford, N. J.

Am much pleased with the Manual. It is just what I have been looking for. Something that we can understand, and enjoy reading.

M. NAUMAN.

Etna, Pa.

I am very much pleased with the Manual. It is just what we have needed for a long time.

N. ZWEIFEL.

Milwaukee, Wis.

It is certainly a neat and handsome book and does you credit.

BENJAMIN HAMMOND.

Fishkill-on-Hudson, N. Y.

It is a work of art and should be in the hands of all live florists. Its useful and instructive contents can not fail to be a benefit to all in the trade.

C. C. POLLWORTH Co.

Milwaukee, Wis.

The book is written for the working gardener, and Mr. Scott's reputation is so well secured that he will find among his gardening friends a host of genuine admirers. As a writer on practical gardening subjects, he is a recognized authority. * * * Mr. Scott has long been an employer and knows what information young gardeners, or those with little experience, need, and he has his whole subject so perfectly at command that he can give the most desirable and essential information in the clearest language and with satisfactory brevity. The book is a distinct and important gain to the practical garden literature of this country, and it should be in the hands of every gardener, and everyone else engaged or interested in ornamental horticulture. The price of the book is $5, which seems somewhat high, but for useful information it is worth every cent of it.—Vick's Magazine.

Am well pleased with the Manual. It is a practical, everyday helper, concise and to the point.

Philadelphia. JOS. KIFT & SON.

Detroit, Mich., January 6, 1900.—Mr. Wm. Scott, Buffalo, N. Y. Dear Sir: The Commissioners of Parks and Boulevards some time since directed that a library be started of such books as deal with subjects pertaining to park work, and to that end, an order has been given for a number of books, among which is your "The Florists' Manual."

After reading this book carefully, I am greatly pleased, and wish to congratulate you on the practical manner with which you have treated the subject.

This book is placed where it will be accessible to all of our greenhouse employees, where this board expects to reap a reward many times the cost of the book. Respectfully yours,

COMMISSIONERS OF PARKS AND BOULEVARDS,

R. J. CORYELL, Gen'l Sup't.

I am more than pleased with The Florists' Manual.

Enclosed find $5.00 in payment for the copy of the Florists' Manual. No progressive florist, old or young, can afford to be without the Florists' Manual. The old florist needs it, for reference, to aid a defective memory, and the young florist wants it as a guide in this progressive era of the florist's business.

THE FLORISTS' MANUAL... By WM. SCOTT

IS A BOOK of 224 large pages (same size as those of the Florists' Review) and contains about 200 articles on commercial plants and cultural operations, each giving "the meat" only, from the personal experience of a thoroughly practical man who is in daily touch with each department of the business and who has that rare quality of being able to tell others what they want to know. The articles are arranged alphabetically, like those in an encyclopædia, and in an instant one can turn to the subject upon which light is desired at the moment. The book is illustrated by over 200 fine half-tone engravings. It is and is a whole library on practical commercial floriculture in one volume. It is very handsomely and substantially bound in half leather, with specially designed title in gold.

MISCELLANEOUS SEASONABLE HINTS.

Cannas and Caladiums.

I recommended the starting of Cannas and Caladiums a few weeks ago and to save room they could be placed in flats and stood over the hot water pipes where the heat was not too violent. They start quickly and grow quickly there. So do not let them get long and spindling. Rather place them on a bench in the light in a house where it is not below 50 at night. They will not grow fast, and you don't want them to, but can keep them two or three weeks in the flats or till Easter has given you the bench room.

Poinsettias.

It is about time now to think of propagating the poinsettia. This flower was extremely popular last Christmas and I can see no reason why it should not increase in favor, as it is almost alone in its brilliant color, and it is most assuredly profitable and will be until they are much more grown. We notice in some horticultural notes that some growers are now putting in pieces of the stem for propagating. This hardwood method is one way, but we by no means approve of it. We used to do that till we found a better way. They root all right, but you don't get as much stock or as good plants as by propagating the green cuttings, and they are rooted so early that they require a large pot or become exhausted.

Take the old plants that have been resting under the bench and should have been perfectly dry for the past two months at least, shake off all the soil, and plants that were grown in a 6-inch will now go into a 4-inch. If there is an inch or so of the wood on the end of the stem that is yet quite green, cut it off. Pot in good soil firmly and place them on a light warm bench and keep syringed. You will soon have a number of breaks, and when they are three inches long cut them off close below a joint and they root easily and surely in the ordinary propagating bench. Leave one joint on the old stem when taking off the cutting, because from that eye you will get another and later cutting.

It is by no means the first or even second crop of cuttings that we find the only useful plants. We propagate from the first of May till the middle of August. Last year those struck in August we used in 10 and 12-inch pans and seven plants in a 12-inch pan, with heads six inches across and not over nine inches high, sold out quickly at a most profitable price.

Early in April is a good time to start your old plants growing. In the propagating bench there is nothing but plenty of water and don't let the sun shine on them. When first potted from the sand give them heat and shade. As should be known by everyone the poinsettia is tropical and should not be below 60 at any time.

Crimson Ramblers.

We adopted a method of growing Crimson Rambler roses for this Easter that was not imparted to us, but we are quite pleased with the results and are doing it again and it will be soon time to begin. I am aware that the majority of growers lift strong plants from the field in November and by great care in lifting, keeping them in a very cool and shady place and lots of syringing they manage to get them to take hold of the soil without shriveling and force them with success. The success will depend largely on how quickly they are transferred from the open ground to the pots and how little they suffer from dryness and wilting.

If you believe in this plan I would advise you to procure strong young plants and plant them out on your own soil. If cut back when planting they will make a strong growth this summer and when on your own place you can choose your own day for lifting and give them the treatment that insures success, which with plants dug from a nursery and lying around perhaps several days it is hard to do.

My plan that has proved a great success, scarcely one in a hundred coming blind, is to purchase strong plants from a nursery just as soon as they can dig. They will possibly have three or four strong shoots. Cut them back to within four or five inches of the stock, pot them in six, seven or eight-inch pots, according to strength of the plant. When we first potted them we put them under a cool bench till the eyes began to break. A cool house would have done but under the bench was cooler still. When the young growth was an inch or so long we selected half a dozen of the strongest and rubbed off the rest. As they formed roots they grew strongly and then we put them on a low bench in a light house and with plenty of syringing they made a strong growth. Each growth or cane was trained to a strong stake and by July was five or six feet high.

In August we put them out of doors to ripen, not giving any more water than just enough to keep them from shriveling, and so gradually ripened them off. In November and December they were in a cold pit on their sides. The principal thing to avoid in this method that we found was that after the canes were ripe in September, we had lots of rain, and, the weather being warm, these plump eyes that are to give you the fine spikes of flowers will be inclined to break and make a growth that will upset all your previous care. So look out for getting soaked in the warm fall months.

Now this method may be more expensive but you can rest assured you will have every plant full of flowers. A fair specimen of one of them examined today showed a plant with three canes tied around some stakes. The plant is about three feet high above the pot, two feet through, covered to the pot with leaves and bearing twenty-six trusses of flowers just showing color. The Yellow Rambler, treated the same way, turned out nearly three weeks earlier loaded with flowers but absolutely useless; you don't want one of it.

Geraniums.

The most formidable job we have facing us just now is getting the geraniums into their flowering or selling pot, with us a 4-inch. We usually try to put this off till after Easter, but this year it would be too late and room must be found to begin. We have the credit in Buffalo of having good geraniums and get a good price for them. Most anyone can grow a geranium, but there are a few rules to observe.

Don't use a light sandy soil with a lot of leaf mould or rotten manure; use a rather heavy loam, and a fifth or sixth of old hotbed manure is good enough. Firm, solid potting is of the greatest importance. Solid potting induces a firm growth and early and large flowers. I see every day around me the same old style of potting and it produces itching of the epidermis, but what can you do? I am not going to give you a dissertation on shifting, but do avoid that putting the plant in the bottom of the pot and then heaping up the soil to be followed by a lot of surface thumbing. The plant should be wedged down firmly with the new soil equally divided around all sides of it.

WM. SCOTT.

VERBENAS.

B. B. asks: "Is there a way to have success with verbenas without putting them in a hotbed?"

Yes, most decidedly there is, but the object and result of giving them a hotbed is that it gives you bench room from early in April till end of May, at a time when you need every inch of space. It also gives them a good free growth. The greatest danger, or rather drawback, is, if not watched they root into the plunging material and grow fast and strong with no inclination to flower, but this can be obviated by lifting up each plant, say every two weeks, which breaks off the roots and throws them into flower.

If you don't want to use the hotbeds, just keep the verbenas on a light bench. Give no shade, but plenty of water, and when setting the plants on the bench for their last move, if some easily handled material, such as refuse hops or sifted ashes, is scattered between the pots (but not beneath them), it will save much watering. A perfectly light house with plenty of ventilation is all that the verbenas need.

WM. SCOTT.

AMERICAN GROWN BULBS.

We present herewith an engraving from a photograph of a dozen blooming hyacinths from the lot of American grown bulbs sent for trial to Mr. C. J. Stromback, Lincoln park, Chicago, and which were exhibited at the last meeting of the Chicago Florists' Club as reported in our last issue.

These bulbs were grown by a Mr. Larrabee, Fairhaven, state of Wash-in so pronounced a manner its prejudice against true progress.

I will admit that I am by nature very sensitive, but it cuts me deeply when the above mentioned contemporary deliberately selects two of my best products, which, by the way, are the first chrysanthemums ever produced scientifically, as subjects for dispute. I certainly can see no excuse for doubting the statement of the gentleman from Little Rock, Ark. In truth, I am quite positive that he states the truth, as I have a sport from chrysanthemum Mrs. Edw. Salyer, which your readers must know is a twin sister of the variety W. H. Chadwick, having been produced from the same seed, which is identical with the Little Rock sport, a magnificent heavy bloom of a deep pink color, as clearly and positively reflexed as V. Morel, high, square shouldered, after the type of Mutual Friend, and that from a positively incurved variety.

It may not be generally known that the variety which was used as pollen parent in producing the seed from which W. H. Chadwick and Mrs. Edw. Salyer chrysanthemums resulted was that grand Jap. reflexed variety Niveus, which variety I have found to be more potent than any variety I have ever used. This variety was named Niveus, "us" signifying the these varieties a new field has been opened to those who are really progressive. While we do not question the statement of your contemporary—that the gentlemen to whom was submitted the question are chrysanthemum experts—yet we know of a gentleman living in the historic valley of the Susquehanna, who, claiming to be only a chrysanthemum enthusiast, is yet quite positive that the editor of your contemporary, nor yet any one of the chrysanthemum experts whom he has called to his aid in this matter, can not find a law either in the animal or vegetable kingdom which prohibits the offspring manifesting in mature life the tendencies and characteristics of the male parent, regardless of the race or type or class to which the female parent belongs.

In conclusion, will say there are many things in connection with this matter of chrysanthemum growing that even an editor does not know, and if your contemporary was really desirous of receiving and imparting information on this subject, it would not have been amiss for the editor to communicate with the originator and thus go to the root of the matter.

The undersigned can speak of these varieties as of his own children and would be pleased to answer any questions on the subject that you or your readers or your contemporary may wish to ask. EDWARD SALYER.

ington, and certainly speak well for the possibilities of hyacinth bulb culture in the Puget Sound country.

CHRYSANTHEMUM SPORTS.

Editor Florists' Review: You doubtless will readily understand that I am deeply interested in the discussion that your contemporary has raised anent Mr. Gallagher's sport from chrysanthemum Wm. H. Chadwick, and wish to say that I am very sorry that a paper which is so generally accepted by the trade as up to date has narrowed its field of usefulness by manifesting masculine, if my memory serves me aright; "um" the feminine in the Latin word. Ni-ve-us—snow white—in the masculine sense, because of its wonderful vigor and the magnificent finish the variety imparts to its blooms.

Now, the truth of the matter is just this: These two varieties, W. H. Chadwick and Mrs. Edw. Salyer, are unique products, and owing to the artificial conditions under which the seed was produced and the seedling plant developed, they possess as a constitutional characteristic a tendency to bud variation, and I am pleased to state that in the method of originating

LIME IN CARNATION SOIL.

Editor Florists' Review: Will you kindly ask some expert to give all information possible in regard to use of lime in carnation soil; how to tell when soil needs it, what amount to use on a given space. If a soil grows a great deal of common sorrel, does it not need lime?

Also the best treatment for soil in a solid bed that has had cow manure added each year for several years.

What would be the effect of bone meal mixed in the soil before housing pinks with cow manure (well rotted)? Also amount to use for a given space.

X. Y. Z.

Replying to X. Y. Z.'s letter of inquiry concerning the use of lime, etc., I would say that so far as known to the writer the action of lime upon carnations has received but slight attention. Some experiments were made at the Rhode Island Experiment Station (An. Rep. R. I. Agr. Exp. Station, pp. 215-216, 1897) upon carnations, in which quite a marked benefit was derived from the lime.

Usually soils that are acid are deficient in lime. An easy method of determining the acidity or alkalinity of a soil is to put a small quantity of it in a glass containing some distilled water, and after it has been allowed to dissolve for some time, test it by means of strips of litmus paper. If the solution is acid it will turn blue litmus paper red, and if alkaline, red litmus paper will be turned blue. Litmus paper and distilled water can be procured from your druggist.

From one to three tons of air-slaked lime per acre would probably be sufficient for a trial, at least. This amount would be approximately from 8 to 24 ounces per square yard. It is preferable to apply it in the fall.

Soil on which sorrel grows abundantly is probably acid, and is deficient in lime.

In the absence of more definite information concerning the condition of the soil in the "solid bed" mentioned, and whether any crop is being grown on it at the present time, it is impossible to suggest any treatment.

Beneficial results should attend the application of bonemeal to soil intended for carnations. It may be applied at the rate of 20 ounces per square yard.

WM. STUART.

STARTING A SMALL PLACE.

I was very much interested in the inquiry of C. H. on page 473 of the Review; also the answers, all of which I fully indorse; but would add one other absolutely necessary requirement to the successful establishment of a florist's business. The writer says: that the houses can be built running east and west, and that you have ample drainage for stoke holes."

"While starting in the country," etc., "good soil is of the greatest importance, more so than location, but you should look to two things, viz.,

Now, it seems to me that none of these are as important as that of an unfailing water supply. The best soil in the world would become worthless in the greenhouses without water. Good stock can be grown in houses running north and south, by the use of receiver and automatic pump boilers can be set on the surface, but without water even the sun's rays are a detriment rather than a blessing in the greenhouse.

There are in and near your city large establishments where the dearth of water has caused more profanity on the part of the growers than all other annoyances combined, and caused them to hope that the proprietors who so foolishly located where there was a possibility of a shortage of this necessary article might sizzle in purgatory without even a drop of Lake Michigan to cool their parched tongues. So I would say, look first and foremost to the supply of water, and all other things (sunshine excepted) can be carted to you.

A. O. T.

STANDING WREATH.

We present herewith an engraving from a photograph of a standing wreath recently arranged by Miss Annie Kreitling (with Walter Kreitling), Chicago.

As will be noted, mahonia leaves are very effectively used in the lower part of the arrangement, and the treatment of the base seems to us especially good. The flowers used can all be readily recognized in the picture.

THE BALTIMORE CLUB.

Editor Florists' Review: In your issue of March 8 your correspondent, "Rix," seems to have fallen into error as to the organization of the Gardeners' Club of Baltimore in attributing to Mr. W. B. Sands the honor of instigating the organization of that club.

Were the principal originator or instigator living, the writer would leave him to look after his own laurels, but having passed from this world to a better, I feel it but just to correct the false impression which I am sure "Rix" must have unintentionally given. The facts are that the late Robert J. Halliday was head and front of the organization of the club, which fact was recognized by the members in electing him its first president. A short time after the club was organized Mr. Halliday tendered the use of his store for a meeting place, free, and that body met there until increasing numbers compelled them to look for more commodious quarters.

In justice to the late Mr. Halliday, we hope you will give this space in your valuable paper, and oblige

Ruxton, Md. WM. FRASER.

There is no occasion at all for hysterics as to the reputation, record or "laurels" of Robert J. Halliday. They from early in April till end of May, at a time when you need every inch of space. It also gives them a good free growth. The greatest danger, or rather drawback, is, if not watched they root into the plunging material and grow fast and strong with no inclination to flower, but this can be obviated by lifting up each plant, say every two weeks, which breaks off the roots and throws them into flower.

If you don't want to use the hotbeds, just keep the verbenas on a light bench. Give no shade, but plenty of water, and when setting the plants on the bench for their last move, if some easily handled material, such as refuse hops or sifted ashes, is scattered between the pots (but not beneath them), it will save much watering. A perfectly light house with plenty of ventilation is all that the verbenas need.

AMERICAN GROWN BULBS.

We present herewith an engraving from a photograph of a dozen blooming hyacinths from the lot of American grown bulbs sent for trial to Mr. C. J. Stromback, Lincoln park, Chicago, and which were exhibited at the last meeting of the Chicago Florists' Club as reported in our last issue.

These bulbs were grown by a Mr. Larrabee, Fairhaven, state of Washington, and certainly speak well for the possibilities of hyacinth bulb culture in the Puget Sound country.

CHRYSANTHEMUM SPORTS.

Editor Florists' Review: You doubtless will readily understand that I am deeply interested in the discussion that your contemporary has raised anent Mr. Gallagher's sport from chrysanthemum Wm. H. Chadwick, and wish to say that I am very sorry that a paper which is so generally accepted by the trade as up to date has narrowed its field of usefulness by manifesting in so pronounced a manner its prejudice against true progress. I will admit that I am by nature very sensitive, but it cuts me deeply when the above mentioned contemporary deliberately selects two of my best products, which, by the way, are the first chrysanthemums ever produced scientifically, as subjects for dispute. I certainly can see no excuse for doubting the statement of the gentleman from Little Rock, Ark. In truth, I am quite positive that he states the truth, as I have a sport from chrysanthemum Mrs. Edw. Salyer, which your readers must know is a twin sister of the variety W. H. Chadwick, having been produced from the same seed, which is identical with the Little Rock sport, a magnificent heavy bloom of a deep pink color, as clearly and positively reflexed as V. Morel, high, square shouldered, after the type of Mutual Friend, and that from a positively incurved variety.

It may not be generally known that the variety which was used as pollen parent in producing the seed from which W. H. Chadwick and Mrs. Edw. Salyer chrysanthemums resulted was that grand Jap. reflexed variety Niveus, which variety I have found to be more potent than any variety I have ever used. This variety was named Niveus, "us" signifying the masculine, if my memory serves me aright; "um" the feminine in the Latin word. Ni-ve-us—snow white—in the masculine sense, because of its wonderful vigor and the magnificent finish the variety imparts to its blooms.

Now, the truth of the matter is just this: These two varieties, W. H. Chadwick and Mrs. Edw. Salyer, are unique products, and owing to the artificial conditions under which the seed was produced and the seedling plant developed, they possess as a constitutional characteristic a tendency to bud variation, and I am pleased to state that in the method of originating these varieties a new field has been opened to those who are really progressive. While we do not question the statement of your contemporary—that the gentlemen to whom was submitted the question are chrysanthemum experts—yet we know of a gentleman living in the historic valley of the Susquehanna, who, claiming to be only a chrysanthemum enthusiast, is yet quite positive that the editor of your contemporary, nor yet any one of the chrysanthemum experts whom he has called to his aid in this matter, can not find a law either in the animal or vegetable kingdom which prohibits the offspring manifesting in mature life the tendencies and characteristics of the male parent, regardless of the race or type or class to which the female parent belongs.

In conclusion, will say there are many things in connection with this matter of chrysanthemum growing that even an editor does not know, and if your contemporary was really desirous of receiving and imparting information on this subject, it would not have been amiss for the editor to communicate with the originator and thus go to the root of the matter.

The undersigned can speak of these varieties as of his own children and would be pleased to answer any questions on the subject that you or your readers or your contemporary may wish to ask. EDWARD SALYER.

LIME IN CARNATION SOIL.

Editor Florists' Review: Will you kindly ask some expert to give all information possible in regard to use of lime in carnation soil; how to tell when soil needs it, what amount to use on a given space. If a soil grows a great deal of common sorrel, does it not need lime?

Also the best treatment for soil in a solid bed that has had cow manure added each year for several years.

What would be the effect of bone-meal mixed in the soil before housing pinks with cow manure (well rotted)? Also amount to use for a given space.

X. Y. Z.

Replying to X. Y. Z.'s letter of inquiry concerning the use of lime, etc., I would say that so far as known to the writer the action of lime upon carnations has received but slight attention. Some experiments were made at the Rhode Island Experiment Station (An. Rep. R. I. Agr. Exp. Station, pp. 215-216, 1897) upon carnations, in which quite a marked benefit was derived from the lime.

Usually soils that are acid are deficient in lime. An easy method of determining the acidity or alkalinity of a soil is to put a small quantity of it in a glass containing some distilled water, and after it has been allowed to dissolve for some time, test it by means of strips of litmus paper. If the solution is acid it will turn blue litmus paper red, and if alkaline, red litmus paper will be turned blue. Litmus paper and distilled water can be procured from your druggist.

From one to three tons of air-slaked lime per acre would probably be sufficient for a trial, at least. This amount would be approximately from 8 to 24 ounces per square yard. It is preferable to apply it in the fall.

Soil on which sorrel grows abundantly is probably acid, and is deficient in lime.

In the absence of more definite information concerning the condition of the soil in the "solid bed" mentioned, and whether any crop is being grown on it at the present time, it is impossible to suggest any treatment.

Beneficial results should attend the application of bonemeal to soil intended for carnations. It may be applied at the rate of 20 ounces per square yard.

WM. STUART.

STARTING A SMALL PLACE.

I was very much interested in the inquiry of C. H. on page 473 of the Review; also the answers, all of which I fully indorse; but would add one other absolutely necessary requirement to the successful establishment of a florist's business. The writer says:

Now, it seems to me that none of these are as important as that of an unfailing water supply. The best soil in the world would become worthless in the greenhouses without water. Good stock can be grown in houses running north and south, by the use of receiver and automatic pump boilers can be set on the surface, but without water even the sun's rays are a detriment rather than a blessing in the greenhouse.

There are in and near your city large establishments where the dearth of water has caused more profanity on the part of the growers than all other annoyances combined, and caused them to hope that the proprietors who so foolishly located where there was a possibility of a shortage of this necessary article might sizzle in purgatory without even a drop of Lake Michigan to cool their parched tongues. So I would say, look first and foremost to the supply of water, and all other things (sunshine excepted) can be carted to you.

There is no occasion at all for hysterics as to the reputation, record or "laurels" of Robert J. Halliday. They live in the memory of his loving friends. They are safe in a community which gave him esteem and confidence because he had honesty, conscience, principle. He was the first president of the Gardeners' Club, as he deserved to be by his position in the trade and his enthusiasm for the organization, and it owed much to him, he having kept it up when others might have failed. ROSES

DISEASES OF THE ROSE.

BY PROF. BYRON D. HALSTED.

[Read before the American Rose Society at New York.]

The earliest trouble of the rose to engage my attention ten years ago, when I first went to the New Jersey Experiment Station, was that due to nematodes. In the report of that year it is recorded that "sickly stunted greenhouse roses have been sent to the station and the cause for the lack of vigor was not far to seek. The roots of the plants were badly knotted and the whole root system infested with gall-worms."

In the report for the next year (1891) the following is found recorded: "Complaints have come to the station from various quarters of a shortness in the hot-house rose crop, and a visit made to Madison and other rose-growing localities convinces me that the trouble is not due to any one enemy. The affected rose plants have a stunted, sickly appearance; they fail to send up strong shoots, and only develop short stems, bearing pale, sickly leaves. Such plants fail to produce good flowers and are comparatively worthless."

"The roots of such specimens may be swollen in places and the knots contain multitudes of nematode worms. It is of great importance to have the soil used for potting plants or the greenhouse bed free from worms, and of course only plants with roots free from knots and galls should be used. The greatest trouble with the rose plant soil is probably the manure that is used in great abundance by the growers. It is likely that this manure is infested with the worms. An experiment in raising roses in a soil where stable manure is replaced by a judicious mixture of commercial fertilizers, is well worth trying. It has been shown, for example, during the present season, that sweet potatoes can be grown to great profit without the city manure that has been the standard source of plant-food among truck farmers. Also it has been demonstrated that potatoes thus grown are less liable to attack of the various rots and decays. If the right mechanical consistency for the roses can be obtained in connection with the commercial fertilizers, it is quite evident that the soil would be under better control and less liable to various infections."

In 1892 six pages were given to nematodes, thus showing that the study of the subject had been continued. The last words by the speaker upon the subject are in an article written by request for the Florists' Exchange, and published in its issue for January 27th of the present year. From that article the closing paragraphs are quoted: "The point that most interests rose growers is how to get rid of the nematodes. In order to do this it will be of much assistance to know where the worms come from—how they propagate and get into the roots of infested plants. These eel worms are much more abundant than generally supposed, and it is only when they are numerous that their mischief becomes apparent. In looking up the subject of tomato blight in the south some years ago, it was observed that the tomato plants were, almost without exception, more or less affected with root galls, and the same is true of a large list of plants, both herbaceous and woody. The nematodes are, as a rule, much more abundant in warm climates than elsewhere, and the lack of these pests in northern gardens is likely due to the freezing of the soil."

"The greenhouse furnishes the proper condition for the propagation of the eel worms, and this naturally raises the question of how they first get into the bed. This may be in one or more of several ways. They may be already in the roots of plants, but in small numbers, when the plants are placed in the house. To guard against this, the roots should be examined as closely as possible for the galls, when the beds are set, and all galled rose plants excluded. The nematodes may come in with the earth. As before stated, the worms infest a large number of kinds of plants, and it is an easy matter for them to come with the soil. Soil that has not been used for growing plants in the garden is not necessarily free, but if taken from a pasture or meadow may contain many nematodes. Then again they may be taken into the house with the manure that is used.

"The determination of the best precaution remains for the practical rose grower. Cold in excess will probably destroy the worms, and likewise a high temperature is inimical to them. Both these conditions may be impracticable to apply to the soil, the one being impossible in some cases and the other too expensive.

"Recently Doctors Stone and Smith, of the Massachusetts Experiment Station, have made extensive tests with nematodes, and they conclude their report by stating that while many solutions are capable of killing the mature worms, the strength and amount necessary to add to the soil is great.

"The most effectual, complete and practical method at the present time of exterminating nematodes in greenhouses is by heating the soil by means of steam. This can be accomplished without much expense, providing proper attention is paid to the method of applying the steam.

"They find the minimum amount of heat necessary to kill the nematodes is 140 degrees F. Rose growers might make the experiment of heating the soil of a small portion of the bed before setting the plants, and satisfy themselves if such treatment will pay. If manure is the chief vehicle of the worms, it may be possible to grow roses without so much of this constituent of the rose soil. It may be that roses can be grown with a formed soil, to which all the necessary elements of plant food have been added as commercial fertilizers. Perhaps, however, the pampered rose will not perform its part unless fed in the ordinary way to which its ancestor has been accustomed.

"The fact is that the worms are doing much damage and when they are once in a plant there is no known way of driving them out. New conditions may induce the formation of new roots and a sickened plant may revive, but this is not to be expected under such circumstances.

"With roses the writer has not found the eel worms in other than the roots, and it is not thought that cuttings from galled plants will carry the trouble."

The Black Spot.

(Actinonema rosae Fr.)

The most widespread and conspicuous of the one hundred or more fungous diseases of the rose is the Black Spot, due to the Actinonema rosae Fr., and first described in 1826. It is seen that this is an old enemy and has long been known to the rose growers of Europe. The foliage, when attacked, soon develops the characteristic black spots, and the leaves become elsewhere pale and shortly fall to the ground. As a result, rose houses badly infested with the black spot show but few leaves and fewer blooms. The microscopic structure of this fungus has been fully considered, with plates, in the first annual report made by Prof. Scribner as Chief of the Section of Vegetable Pathology of the United States Department of Agriculture for the year 1887. It only needs to be said here that experiments with this fungus have been carried on sufficiently by the New Jersey Station to warrant the assumption that it can be controlled by the proper use of fungicides. This trouble may be held in check by the carbonate of copper compound (cupram), using five ounces of the carbonate of copper to three quarts of ammonia and sixty gallons of water. The spraying should be done once a week, using a hose with a nozzle that gives a fine spray. The point should be to wet every part of the plant, and yet not drench it. If many leaves have fallen from the plants they should be gathered up and burned.

Some varieties are more liable to the black spot than others. When possible—that is, when all other things remain the same—it is, of course, wise to grow those least susceptible to the disease. It may be said, in passing, that during the year 1892 the Black Spot was observed by the speaker upon a species of wild rose (Rosa humilis), where it was causing the leaves to become spotted and yellow. It is not surprising, for the wild plant was growing but a short distance from a neglected estate where garden roses were badly spotted.

The actinonema is a small genus and some of the species are parasites upon the basswood, beech, ash, viburnum. The one upon the rose is not found upon plants outside of the genus rosa, and there has its favorite species and varieties. This is shown in a remarkable manner with some of the cultivated sorts grown side by side in the same house. It is often very bad upon the "American Beauty."

The Rose Leaf Blight.

(Sphaerella rosigena Ell.)

A fungus that disfigures and injures the rose leaves almost as badly as the Black Spot is the Sphaerella rosigena Ell., and commonly called the Rose Leaf Blight. A thoroughly diseased leaflet has large irregular blotches of gray color surrounded by a margin of dark purple. The gray dead center of the spot bears a number of pimples or specks—more numerous and conspicuous near the center, and in these the spores are produced.

Under the microscope the fungus is very different from the Black Spot, and instead is closely related to the leaf blight of the strawberry, which is due to Sphaerella fragariae Tul. In other words, the two blights in question are as closely related as any two species of the genus rosa. It is important to know these relationships between the various plant diseases, for it is helpful in the struggle in overcoming them. The Leaf Blight of the strawberry is very much more common than that of the rose and any effective remedy found for the former may be of value in checking the ravages of the latter. Fruit growers have found this strawberry Leaf Blight a hard one to check, perhaps because of its many forms of spores and the low habit of the plant and the consequent difficulty of readily spraying the foliage upon the under side. This difficulty does not obtain with the rose, and it may be controlled more easily. There is no question but that the standard fungicides should be used when this fungus is at work.

The Black Rot of the grape, due to Laestadia Bidwellii (Ellis), is a first cousin to the rose disease in hand, and the fact is mentioned because the grape rot trouble is one of the most common and destructive of the whole list of fungous diseases. There is a stubbornness met with in attempts to control this decay that almost baffles wine growers, especially during moist months in the growing season.

The Rose Mildew.

(Sphaerotheca pannosa Wallr.)

The most familiar fungous enemy of the rose is the mildew (Sphaerotheca pannosa Wallr.). This disease has been known for a long time and is quickly recognized by the powdery coat it develops upon the affected parts. It is so rapid in its development that rose growers are sometimes inclined to assign the cause of the growth to that which is in reality only the condition or conditions favoring the appearance of the mildew. It comes from spores, which, falling upon the surface of the plant, will quickly germinate and produce a cobwebby coating to the foliage. This fungus is so different from the others that have been mentioned that a word is needed in way of explaining the habit of the parasite, as this lies at the foundation of the rational treatment of the pest. In the first place, the rose mildew is a surface feeder and only attaches itself to the epidermis of the host, through which, by means of small suckers, it derives its nourishment from the deeper seated substance. Being therefore entirely upon the surface, the fine threads of the fungus may grow rapidly and make a mildew patch in a very short time that is easily seen.

The exact conditions that favor this development of the spores are of course better known to the rose growers than to me. Some of them claim that they can develop the fungus at will by omitting some essential point in heating, warming, or ventilation, particularly the last. If a certain current of air is sure to produce the mildew, and of this I am not fully able to say, it follows that the spores of the mildew were widely scattered through the house and they started into vigorous growth at those places where the conditions were supplied for such activity.

The superficial nature of the mildew is of great importance when the matter of remedies is considered. It is a fungus that is in the air, as it may be termed, in contrast with most of the rose diseases that when active are deeply seated in the plant. The spores are produced as minute delicate cells upon upright filaments that arise from the web of horizontal vegetable hyphae. They are easily reached by fungicides and apparently destroyed without difficulty. Any of the ordinary sprays will answer for the mildew, but even these need not be resorted to, provided spraying is uncalled for by the presence of other rose fungi. In short, if the mildew is the only enemy at hand, it may be kept in check by the use of flowers of sulphur, either dusted upon the plants or even the pipes of the greenhouses, the point being to produce a gentle fumigation of the plants and the whole house with the fumes of the sulphur. Professor Maynard, of the Massachusetts Experiment Station, finds that a small kerosene stove is most convenient for this purpose, and the sulphur, by means of it, is boiled in a kettle for two or three hours twice a week, the house being closed during the operation. The only precaution is to use no more heat than is sufficient to boil the sulphur, for should it catch fire it might damage the plants.

Mr. John N. May writes that the best way to get rid of the mildew is to close the house about 8 o'clock in the morning, run the temperature up to 75, then, with a bellows, fill the house full of sulphur. Let the house remain closed till it reaches 85 or 90, and afterwards let the air in gradually. A constant circulation of air is likewise recommended for roses at all times. Potassium sulphide, one ounce to two gallons of water, sprayed upon the plants has proved an effective remedy. Massee states that "flowers of sulphur mixed with about one-third of its volume of slaked lime dusted on the foliage prevents the spread of the disease."

Gardeners, from long experience, have come to the belief that rose mildew is induced by a weak condition of the plant, resulting from partial starvation, irregular or excessive watering, and undue exposure to drafts of cold air. The best success in rose growing, as in all other things, attends those who give constant, intelligent care to the many details.

The rose mildew has its close of kin in the mildew of the chrysanthemum, the phlox, pea, gooseberry, grape, cherry, and apple, and many forest trees, as oaks and chestnuts. Some of them are very injurious, but all can doubtless be controlled by fungicides.

The Downy Mildew of the Rose.

(Peronospora sparsa Berk.)

A second form of mildew is sometimes troublesome to rose growers. This is a close relative of a similar one upon the greenhouse lettuce, and another is often destructive to spinach; while the third is the cause of a soft rot of potatoes. It produces downy or velvety patches upon the leaf, quite unlike the form above described, and the threads run through the substance of the leaf. In this case the fungus will have vegetated for a considerable time before it appears upon the surface, which is entirely for the purpose of producing its multitude of spores borne upon the tips of the many aerial branches.

It is evident that the sulphur fumes may cause the destruction of the spores, but may not reach the hyphae that are vegetating within the substance of the host. Such treatment, while tending to check the spread by means of the spores, will not be sufficient to arrest the growth of the fungus that is already in the tissue of the host.

There is also a second form of spore that is produced beneath the skin of the leaf and out of the reach of fungicides. As a precaution, it is therefore well to destroy any mildewed leaves, or else when they fall the spores may be set free. It may be said that the careful rose grower will gather up and destroy the dead foliage and reduce as far as possible thereby the chances of his plants becoming diseased from spores that are formed upon or within the old leaves.

The Rose Rust.

(Phragmidium subcorticum Schr.)

There is a genuine rust of the rose, similar to that of wheat, oats, and other grains, but it is a pleasure to note that it is not common upon indoor roses in this section of the country. It has been sent to me at various times as a troublesome pest upon roses grown for ornament in the flower garden and lawn. In "Plant Diseases by Massee," a new book just published in London, this rust is figured and described as follows: "A troublesome pest to cultivators of roses, attacking more especially hardy hybrid varieties. All three forms of the fungus are produced on the same host. The aecidia appear in late spring on the leaves and young shoots, forming powdery, orange patches, and often cause distortion of the shoots. About midsummer the patches become deeper in color, owing to the formation of uredospores. Finally the teliospores or resting spores are produced as minute black dots on the under surface of the leaves."

"The appearance of the disease in spring depends entirely on the presence of teliospores in the neighborhood; it is therefore necessary to collect and burn all fallen leaves in the autumn. Plants that have been attacked the previous season should be thoroughly drenched with a solution of sulphate of copper in water—2 ounces in 3 gallons—in early spring before the buds expand. The soil round the plants may also be sprayed with the same solution. Dilute Bordeaux mixture, or ammoniated carbonate of copper solution checks the aecidium and uredo stages."

"The fungus also grows on wild roses, and these may become a source of infection unless precautions are taken."

American rose growers are doubtless familiar with the orange colored powdery masses in early summer which accompany the malformations of stem and leaf, followed by the dark almost coal black patches later in the season. When a shrub is badly infested there is little better to do than cut the whole plant away close to the ground. This fungus is closely related to the one upon the blackberry and raspberry, causing the destructive rust of those plants. It has been shown that the fungous hyphae penetrate all parts of the blackberry plant, even the roots, and the rose grower may not find that severe pruning will rid the plant of the pest when it is thoroughly infested. Therefore, as with the raspberry rust, it may be necessary to root out and destroy the rose bush and start again with a healthy plant. This rose rust is a good illustration of the great depth to which a fungus will penetrate in the host and the difficulty of eradicating the same. It goes without saying that ordinary sprays will be of little curative effect upon a plant when the living vegetative threads of its fungus parasite penetrates to all parts.

In California the reader has seen the rust upon roses much worse than here—when every leaf upon some shrubs was badly affected. In such a warm climate, when the plants retain their foliage throughout the year, the dark winter spores, not being needed, are omitted, and the orange colored form of summer is perennial. There are many of the rusts in the warmer parts of the earth that grow continuously, while the same kinds of plants with us are exempt, presumably due to the uncongenial nature of our climate. In passing it may be said that the chrysanthemum rust produces only the summer form in the greenhouse, and the hardy out-of-door sorts seem to be exempt from the disease.

The Rose Anthracnose.

(Gloeosporium rosae Hals.)

The chief feature of this disease is the scarcity of leaves. Instead of a plant with foliage upon all the canes, there are but few leaves upon some stems, while others are entirely defoliated. The whole plant is infested with the fungus, and this parasite so saps the vitality and interferes with the processes of growth that the leaves, even if they were healthy in themselves, are unable to perform their work. The fact is that the leaves are infested with the anthracnose filaments, and soon after falling, if not before, they will show the spore formation of the anthracnose fungus, Gloeosporium rosae Hals. In general appearance and habits of growth this fungus is quite similar to the one causing the anthracnose of the raspberry, named Gloeosporium venetum; possibly it is identical and if so the presence of the one is a menace to the host of the other.

The rose plant is most likely attacked while young, or at least it is to be presumed that the young portions of a plant are most susceptible. The attack is from without, and the spores falling upon the surface of the young, tender canes, and leaves as well, there germinate and produce, in a short time, an affected spot. If this takes place in a cane, it is natural to suppose that the portion above the infested part will be girdled, in so far as the attack is great, and this will interfere with the direct support by the whole plant of the part beyond the diseased place. Besides this, the fungus spreads, and more rapidly, in the direction toward the tip of the cane. It is not unusual for a diseased plant to send up apparently healthy shoots from near the base of the stem, these in turn to become infested.

Roses that have a sickly color to the foliage, with the leaves falling prematurely, especially from the tips of the canes, may be suspected as victims of the anthracnose. A hand lens should be sufficient to assist in finding pinkish blotches upon the leaves, particularly those that lie upon the moist earth beneath the half-defoliated plant. Similar but better defined pimples usually occur upon some portion of the cane.

It will be gathered from these remarks that rose anthracnose is a specific disease, caused by a well defined fungus that grows rapidly from spores, penetrates the substance of stem and leaf, and finally causes defoliation and death of cane. The anthracnose, because of its multitude of spores produced in pimples on leaves, particularly fallen ones, and the canes, and the ease with which they are transported by water, also rapidity of germination, all combine to make this fungous enemy of the roses very contagious.

This class of fungi in which the Gloeosporium belongs is amenable to treatment by fungicides. A coating of the Bordeaux mixture or cupram upon the leaves and stems prevents in large degree the entrance of the germs. Therefore all rose-houses where there is any anthracnose should be sprayed with one of the above compounds. It goes without further saying that all plants that are nearly leafless from this cause should be either cut down to the soil or thrown bodily into the burn-heap.

The Rose Leaf Spot.

(Cercospora rosaeicola Pass.)

Somewhat similar to the leaf blight previously mentioned is the leaf spot due to the fungus Cercospora rosaeicola Pass. This produces spots that are of a gray color with a dark purple border and the spores are long and borne in little tufts upon the surface of the central portion of the dead areas. In microscopic structure the leaf spot and the leaf blight are very different, the former having the spores upon the tips of threads which previously have grown through the stomates. The leaf blight has the spores borne internally in small pits and are poured out in a viscid coil when the part is moistened.

These facts are given to show that while to the naked eye the differences between the two herein named fungi are not apparent, under the microscope they are widely unlike and the treatment that will work admirably for one may not answer for the other.

As yet this leaf spot is not common, but when found at all is often quite destructive. From the nature of the fungus it is inferred that it is to be easily controlled by fungicides. For example, its cousin, Cercospora beticola Sacc., is the common beet leaf spot with which there have been many experiments, and it is found very amenable to treatment with the Bordeaux mixture and other standard fungicides.

Black Speck of Roses.

(Pilobolus crystalinus Tode.)

Complaints have come to the writer from time to time with regard to a speck upon the rose plants. This trouble is due to the indirect, and not the intentional, action of a fungus, and in this respect is quite unusual and merits a word of consideration. The fungus that is the source of trouble is somewhat closely related to the coarse one that thrives upon bread, and is very damaging to sweet potatoes in the storage bin, causing the soft rot. In short, it is one of the molds and grows upon organic substances, and not, as before stated, upon the rose.

The fungus in question is Pilobolus crystalinus Tode, and forms in large numbers upon the manure used to cover the bed where roses are growing. As it matures, a dark oval ball or sac is produced, filled with spores of the pilobolus. This black sac is supported upon a swollen stalk rising from the surface of the manure, and when mature the enlarged portion, filled with liquid, suddenly forces off the spore sac and collapses, throwing the ball of spores into the air. These dark spore sacs are covered with moisture as they are discharged and will adhere to any object which they may strike in their flight.

The writer has examined houses where this fungus has developed extensively upon the manure and counted as many as a hundred specks to the square inch upon the white woodwork surrounding the bed. An examination of the perpendicular sash in dividing walls in greenhouses will show, from the numerous spore specks adhering, that the height to which the dark sacs are thrown is fully ten feet; but there is a rapid falling off in the number upon any given area when the height of two or three feet is reached.

These specks, of course, from what has been written, may be upon any plant that is within range, but they do no further harm than the disfigurement thereby produced. They are more often met with in rose houses, because there the manure is more frequently left upon the surface than with other kinds of plants.

If a remedy is sought it may be found in dispensing with the manure on the surface, stirring it at frequent intervals to prevent the fungi from having time to mature their dark shells containing the "shot" in the form of spores, so to speak, or by using some fungicide as a spray upon the manure that will kill the mold. However, as a rule the bombardment does not last long and no vigorous measures are generally called for in this case.

An illustrated article by the writer upon this subject appeared in the American Florist for April 30, 1898.

Bronzing of the Rose.

As a last trouble to be mentioned at this time, attention may be called to a peculiar discoloration of the leaves that has been termed "bronzing." The affected foliage takes on a brown hue and the leaflets may fall away. With some varieties, as La France, it is much more frequently met with than upon most other varieties. It is not demonstrated as being of fungous origin, and probably is due to a structural weakness permitting the skin to become scalded or at least injured by great exposure to the sun.

If this be the fact, the remedy seems to lie in a more complete shading of the plants. Of two varieties equal in all other points, the one that is most nearly free from the "bronzing" should be chosen.

Conclusion.

In conclusion it may be said that the purpose of this paper has been to point out some of the characteristics of the leading fungi injurious to the rose, with remarks upon the remedies for the same so far as they have been determined. As a rule these diseases thrive best under conditions of too great moisture, accompanied by ill ventilation and draughts of cold air. One cannot say that they are entirely creatures of neglect, but frequently they come in their greatest strength when culture has not been according to the sound principles of healthy vegetable growth.

Let it not be forgotten, however, that fungous diseases are contagious, and the virus for inoculation passes from plant to plant by the currents of air and may drip from leaf to leaf in the water that falls from the nozzle of the hose. Great care needs to be taken not to introduce an enemy with new stock, and the grower should be swift to discard or destroy that which is not healthy.

The true rose grower will make it his highest ambition to grow superior plants, for the profit, it may be, but first of all because his heart is in his work, and I do not know of anything one can be more proud of than of roses—the queen of all flowers, which, as loved pets, have willingly and generously responded to the highest and excellence in response to tender, sympathetic and loving care.

AMERICAN ROSE SOCIETY.

The Election.

At the annual election all the old officers were re-elected, and J. H. Taylor was made vice-president.

SAN FRANCISCO.

Various Items.

Business has been very slack this week with most of our stores, and such a state of trade during Lent is not unusual. We are now in the midst of a warm spell of weather that affects violets very much, making them very scarce, and poor as to quality. Lilac and gladiolus are now in the market, also a few varieties of Iris, narcissus poeticus and anemones. Carnations are coming in more plentiful and are improving as to quality each day. Many of our growers will try a sample of the new eastern carnations this year, so our carnation fanciers will have a chance to gaze upon a Lord, a Marquis, a Lawson and an Olympia. Roses are slightly better as to quality and are plentiful. A few nice plants of azaleas, in mixed colors, are in market this week, but go slowly. Harrisii will be plentiful for Easter sales and the quality seems to improve right along.

Prices: American Beauties, $1.50 to $3.50; Brides, Bridesmaids, 35 cents to $1; Meteors, 25 cents to $1; Testouts, Kaiserins, 50 cents; Gontiers, Siebrechts, 25 to 50 cents; Perles, 50 cents; Cecil Brunners, 12½ cents per dozen. Carnations, Hobarts $1, Crockers 75 cents, Flora Hill 50 to 75 cents. Bradts and Gold Nugget 35 to 50 cents, Scott 25 cents, Portias 10 to 20 cents per dozen. Harrisii, $3 to $3.50; gladiolus, 50 cents; freesias, 10 to 20 cents; valley, 35 cents; tulips, 25 cents per dozen; iris, $1.50 per 100; narcissus poeticus, $1 per 100; violets, Princess of Wales $1 to $1.50, Californias $1, doubles 75 cents per 100; azaleas, 7-inch pots, $60 per 100.

Mr. J. Gilmore has resigned his position with E. W. McLellan, Burlingame, and it is reported will start in business for himself at Elmhurst.

E. Gill, Washington street, Oakland, will move some time in April, but where the new store will be is as yet unknown.

H. B. MacGowan and John Jack are of the opinion that a Florists' and Gardeners' Club would be the proper thing for Oakland. Right they are, and I for one would be glad to see the above gentlemen succeed in their efforts to organize one. Many attempts have been made to form clubs in Oakland and San Francisco, but each time failure stared us in the face. Jealousy on the part of some of our would-be members seemed to be the cause of our failures. How nice it would be if our Oakland florists and gardeners would come forward and form a club, be like their eastern brethren and entertain themselves with card parties, flower shows, bowling contests (I don't mean the punch-bowl), etc. I cannot help but sigh every time I take up our trade papers and read of the gay times our eastern florists enjoy.

Mr. Alex. Mackenzie and the writer visited the greenhouses of A. Galloway, Fruitvale, on March 20th. His carnations are simply grand, with a perfect sea of buds. The Lawson, Marquis and Olympia will be tried this year by Mr. Galloway. Our next visit was to Mr. Peter Nicholson of San Lorenzo, where we found our worthy friend among his Maids, and they were very fine indeed, nicely colored and with perfect stem. After viewing his Brides, which were also finely grown, Peter invited us over to his cozy little dwelling and introduced us to his own dear bride, whom we found to be a very pleasant lady. Then we drank each other's health (we men only), quenching a Ladysmith thirst. On parting, Peter inquired if we intended making any more visits that day, and we replied: "Yes, to the man that has better roses than yours," but we have not found him yet.

One of our local florists met the writer on the street one day this week, and these were his words: "Mr. J. N., will you please let up joshing me in the Review?" How thin-skinned some people are. Take Mr. Wm. Phelan, for instance; I never let up on him, and I am sure I haven't hurt his "Phelans" yet.

The City Park.

Since the advent of spring the City Park has put on a more lively appearance. The walks and drives are thronged with visitors, the trees are beginning to bud and show life, and the lawn is turning green. At the conservatories there are from 10,000 to 20,000 each of santolinas, alternantheras, geraniums and hardy perennials in variety which are being grown to beautify the grounds this summer.

Among the more attractive show plants are A. Scherzerianum giganteum with its brilliant metallic luster and calla lily flower, Aloe socotrina, Gasteria ensifolia, the orange with its ripe fruit, Araucaria excelsa, Phoenix dactylifera in bud and agaves of large size.

A geranium named for the great admiral, Ito, is a dwarf among its cousins, but is fast becoming known as a rustler. Another geranium, a sport from Caillebotte, whose good qualities are being carefully studied, has been named for the Hon. Mr. Johnson, mayor of Denver.

A new shed has been added to the conservatory, which saves much annoyance and does away with all the chaos that heretofore existed. The old shed has been cleaned up, repainted, and fitted up for a parlor and reception hall. The walls and chimneys were repaired and painted; the plants have been nicely arranged to give them a presentable appearance; the grounds around have been cleaned up and the roads graveled just as predicted by the writer last fall. Space on the west side will be used for frames as the plants need more room.

The winter has been remarkably mild, a typical Colorado winter. Hardy roses have wintered well without cover; tea roses are green near the roots; trees have not suffered in the least and our hopes are that a late frost will not injure the fruit buds this year, which are well advanced.

Notes.

A visit to Mr. Walters' greenhouses, at Harmon, disclosed the fact that he is growing about 3,000 dozen of lettuce, which is in good shape except some Denver Market and Cincinnati, which appear to burn under glass when near maturity. Parsley is growing luxuriantly and this one crop alone pays for the help, as Mr. Walters quotes. Cauliflower has just been planted; radishes fit to pull; tomatoes in bloom and with half ripened fruit. Last fall Mr. Walters added a small pavilion-conservatory, where he keeps flowering plants for show. In all he operates about 25,000 feet of glass.

Daniels & Fisher expect to spend about $3,000 in rebuilding their houses at Mud Lake. Their Red Leaf conservatory (formerly Givins' place) is in fine shape. Al Seipp, who is attending to the latter place, reports Jubilee carnation as fine as he ever saw it and is in high glee over the other varieties of carnations as well as the palms, ferns, etc., all of which are in excellent condition.

Oliver Wheatly, of the Curtis Park Floral Co., reports a big order for funeral designs. Mr. Wheatly believes in expansion—he weighs about 225 pounds. F. A. HAENSELMAN.

SOCIETY OF AMERICAN FLORISTS.

Plant Registration.

C. H. Gerbig registers geranium A. N. Gerbig, single zonal. Flowers bright apricot salmon, shaded much deeper towards center, with distinct white eye; truss large; foliage deep green, with dark zone; growth strong and compact.

Lager & Hurrell register Cattleya Trianae, Nettie Martin. Flowers of medium size and well balanced; sepals and petals light lilac; lip very large and open, somewhat flattened; throat with a large blotch of straw buff color, encircled with a broad band of lilac.

Chatterton Warburton registers new carnation "Cressbrook," a seedling from Mrs. G. M. Bradt x William Scott. Color, bright pink; size of flower, three to three and one-half inches; stem strong and wiry; plant a strong grower, ready rooter, and having no surplus foliage.

WM. J. STEWART, Secretary.

CATALOGUES RECEIVED.

Samuel C. Moon, Morrisville, Pa., wholesale trade list; John H. Dunlop, Toronto, Ontario, catalogue of roses and carnations; Harkett's Floral Nursery, Dubuque, Iowa, plants, bulbs, seeds, etc.; Edward Gillett, Southwick, Mass., hardy ferns and flowers, shrubs, roses, etc.; J. M. Lamb, Fayetteville, N. C., trees, shrubs, roses, bulbs, etc.; John D. Imlay, Zanesville, Ohio, choice seeds and plants; Chas. Black, Hightstown, N. J., fruit trees and small fruits; The W. H. PRIZE CARNATIONS.

At the spring exhibition of the Massachusetts Horticultural Society, Boston, carnations from the Briarcliff Greenhouses, illustrated in our last issue, were entered in five classes, and won first premium in each. The varieties were Mrs. G. M. Bradt, G. H. Crane, White Cloud, Gold Nugget and Mrs. James Dean.

CHICAGO.The Market.

The supply of roses has considerably increased and only superior shipping stock will bring quotations, the remainder going to the fakir, and the weather has of late been rather unfavorable for the operations of the street men. However, there is a splendid shipping demand for the season. Prices range from $4 to $8.

Of white carnations there are not nearly enough to meet demands, and prices are very firm. Good grades of colored sorts are also moving well, but at figures a shade lower than the whites. Fancy, $3 to $4, with an occasional sale at $5. Good commons, $1.50 to $2.50. Poor grade colored go to the fakirs, but at very fair prices, considering quality.

Lilies are moving very freely, possibly partly due to the shortage of white carnations, and general bulb stuff is going better.

Violets are still in the dumps and most sales have to be forced. Formerly, when the thermometer was above 32 degrees violets could always be moved to advantage at this season. Nevertheless the violet grower has made a better average than ever during the season.

The dark sorts, such as Farquhar and Marie Louise, bring a third more in price than the lighter ones, such as Campbell, all through the season. Still some growers find Campbell the most profitable, for it begins blooming earlier in the fall and can be thrown out by Easter to make way for bedding stock.

The supply of everything is large for the season, but the unusually good demand takes care of most everything, and it would appear that the long promised prosperity has at last reached the florist.

As regards supply for Easter, Walter Heffron, manager for E. C. Ameling, thinks it will be about right, with probably less roses than at present and more carnations, as the weather we are now having is bringing out roses faster than the carnations.

Bassett & Washburn say their roses are just coming in crop again and they expect to have a good supply for Easter with rather a shortage of carnations. They fear also a shortage of lilies. Their trade during Lent has been much the best in their whole business experience.

Kennicott Bros. Co. look for a good supply in all lines and anticipate a record breaking trade. They also report the best business they ever knew during Lent and find their March business ahead of last year, even with Easter out and still to come. Fine pansies that went quickly last year move rather slowly this spring.

Peter Reinberg, Wietor Bros. and the other large growers have all largely increased their cut of roses.

Various Items.

Weiland & Risch have their wholesale store at 59 Wabash avenue fitted up and are about ready for business.

S. S. Skidelsky, Philadelphia, is in town.

Beginning next Monday the price of coal from the Illinois mines will be advanced 25 per cent.

Mr. and Mrs. O. P. Bassett left last Saturday for a ten days' sojourn at West Baden, Ind.

Mr. H. S. Harman, representing E. H. Hunt, started last Monday on a trip through western territory. This house reports business first class in every department.

Kennicott Bros. Co. are receiving out-door grown Trumpet Major narcissus from southern Illinois.

McKellar & Winterson are carrying a very complete line of ribbons and crepe paper for Easter demands and are doing a heavy business in each of their thousand and one departments.

Bowling.

In response to an invitation from President Hartshorne, of the Florists' Club, the bowlers took the 6:30 Rock Island train for Joliet last Saturday evening to try their skill with that of a team selected from among the attaches of the Chicago Carnation Company in a friendly bowling match. On the way down Captain E. F. Winterson purchased the dining car and presented it and its contents to his fellow pilgrims, and when Joliet was reached there was little left except a few hot boxes. The car was cut off the train there and they were still enjoying the remains when Mr. Hartshorne entered and said: "Come on, boys; everything in Joliet is yours. See my star! Everyone that comes here don't have that kind of a pass!"

After lining up and calling the roll the boys marched up the middle of the street, sidewalks being too small for the crowd, and found that Mr. Hartshorne had rented a fine set of alleys for the night. Here three hot games were played, the Chicago team winning out "by the skin of their feet," for the C. C. Co. had a strong team, one Savage member passing the 200 mark. Following are the scores:

After the games the Joliet boys took the visitors to a lodge room that had been prepared for the occasion with plenty to eat and drink, and here the time was pleasantly spent till train time, splendid entertainment being supplied by local musical talent.

"Jackson's Dope" will be long carried in the memory of the visitors, but in memory only. Mr. Hartshorne sang one of his fetching songs and Mr. Baker brought melody from the piano. "Walter Kreitling was in his prime and his stories were sublime." And Mr. Degnan's song, "General Jackson Had an Army," was done to a turn. Ed. Winterson did a double twist on the sidewalk and nearly broke a slab. In addition to those who bowled the party included L. H. Winterson and Mr. Scott.

At 5:30 a. m. the party took the train for Chicago, after having voted the Joliet boys a team of jolly good fellows, and at 7 a. m. were home. For what happened on the train ask Walter Kreitling.

BUFFALO.

Chilly, blustering weather continues throughout the month, but it is tapering off slowly, and if surely we will be satisfied. We will take anything we get now, but oh! pray let it be warm and balmy from the 10th to 16th of April!

Some sure signs of spring are noticeable. The first robin was heard by the writer on the 24th, but that's not infallible. Neither is the foreign and domestic drummer in considerable quantities, because both will survive a severe chill or frost. The street piano and hand organ is as sure a sign as any and as I listen to a rather superior article of the former grinding out the overture to the opera of "Martha," or "Mary Anne," from the seventh story of the Ellicott Square, with a bright, clear sky and a lovely view of a very miscellaneous wash from some poor tenements across the street, with the long Niagara street leading out beyond your vision and the help of steam heat in your office, you can really believe that spring is coming.

Judging from the way flowers are cleaned up at the wholesale mart of W. F. Kasting, business generally must be quite fair. Mr. K. receives daily great quantities of carnations from many surrounding points, but they are all cleaned up by night. Violets are sadly overdone. This enterprising young man has put in a bid for the shrubs, plants, bulbs, etc., wanted by the Pan-American Company for the embellishment of the grounds, and as his offerings represent the very best firms in the country, I hope he will be successful.

There is beginning to be a lively inquiry for Easter plants, for there is no reason to doubt but what plants will be the leading article at this great flower festival, as it has increasingly been for several years past. From present reports lilies will be decidedly scarce. The disease is to blame. There will be a great quantity of Rambler roses. The great majority of them are very poor in quality. We hear that with many the most of the azaleas are gone, so those that have a good supply of attractive plants are in shape to realize good prices.

Mr. Cowell paid us a visit on his return from the Everglades. With due precaution he escaped or overcame all snake bites, both of the Florida and Spanish reptiles. He procured what he went for, some fine specimens of the Palmetto and other palms, which will in course of time adorn the magnificent conservatories of South Park.

Mr. C. F. Christenson, who is just about to start on the erection of six new houses on upper Main street, one mile northeast of the city line, took a flying visit to New York, and, chaperoned by Charles Weathered, visited the leading places. If you have only the leisure to listen, he is able to describe the places of Mr. Ernst Asmus and Messrs. Dailledouze from the stoke holes to their ridge pieces, with all their contents. "My dear boy, I was there four hours, and three of us had twenty bottles of beer," and so this gurgling, bubbling discourse goes on. Memories that were impressed on the cranial nerves through that liquid medium are set free by the same agency, and in his description of "666" or Mrs. Bradt you almost get the flavor of hops.

Several gentlemen of note have passed through of late, chief among them being Mr. J. Austin Shaw, whom it is a great pleasure to see entirely recovered from his sad accident at Detroit; Mr. Killen, of New York; Mr. Van Waveren, representing Segers Bros., and several others. W. S.

ST. LOUIS.

Market Conditions.

There is little change in the cut flower market, except that the stock on hand is considerably larger than it has been for some time, and lots of it has accumulated in the commission houses. A few good shipping orders the latter part of the week made some room in the ice boxes of the wholesalers.

Roses are a glut just now and the quality is very good. Carnations are still short in supply and the demand for this flower seems greater than ever before. Bulb stock is also in good shape, but only fair in demand. Valley very fine. Kuehn made a shipment last week of 1,000 of the finest ever seen in this market. Violets have seen their best days. They are small, but plenty of them are coming in yet from both local and southern growers.

The weather continues warm and spring-like and the plant shipping trade has commenced to boom.

Easter stock seems in good shape all along the line and from appearances there will be plenty of it at all the growers'.

Extra fine Beauties bring $4 per dozen; others from $1 up to $3. They are not overplentiful, though more are coming in now than for some time. Other roses, such as Meteors, Brides and Maids, are very fine, and bring from $2 to $6. Meteors, especially, are very plentiful. Perles and Woottons sell at from $2 to $4, but are not so plentiful as the other varieties. Carnations are in good demand and all varieties bring from $1.50 to $2. Some fancy stock sold for $3 and $4. The market has not been overstocked with this flower since the first of the year. Bulb stuff is quite plentiful. Harrisii and callas sell from $10 to $12.50; tulips, $2 to $4; valley, $4 to $6; Romans and paper whites, from $2 to $3; Dutch hyacinths, $3 to $4; freesia, $2, and Daffs, $3 and $4. Violets are selling slowly, with plenty of them on hand. Californias sold as low as 25 cents per 100; small single and southern stock, any old price. Sweet peas are fine and not too many in yet; $2 and $3 is the price. Smilax is a little scarce this week; price from $10 to $12.50 per 100 strings.

Notes.

Visitors in town were Walter Mott, representing H. A. Dreer, Philadelphia. Walter always does a big business in this city, as he is very popular with the St. Louis trade. Henry Emundt and E. W. Guy, of Bellville, spent a day with us the past week. Mr. Emundt reports a nice lot of Harrisii for Easter, and Mr. Guy a fine lot of Astilbe japonica also for Easter trade.

The St. Louis public parks will be without the usual music this summer, as the appropriations are too small, and about the only one that will have music will be Tower Grove park, as under the terms of the will of the late Henry Shaw the city is required to expend $25,000 annually on this park. It has been the custom of the trustees to pay for music out of this fund, which can not be diverted, even for the sake of making political capital out of it.

Hudson & Co., our new wholesale firm, received some very fine carnations the past week, which sold on sight.

Kuehn and Berning both report a very good shipping trade, with plenty of stock of all kinds on hand for a heavy demand. Their stock is all of the very best quality.

C. C. Sanders reports that he is very busy now with tree planting, with plenty of orders to keep all hands busy for some time to come.

The regular meeting of the club will take place Thursday afternoon, April 12, at 3 o'clock. President Ammann would like to have all members present. Those who have not made returns for tickets for our late euchre can do so at this meeting, as the committee would like to make a final report.

"Easter Plants" will be the subject for discussion at this meeting, in which all local growers will take part.

Bowling.

The members of the bowling club rolled six games on Monday night. Five members were present and some fine rolling was done.

The busy season with the growers is now on and not until after the spring trade is over can we expect a full attendance. The scores made were as follow:

The Market.

Trade remains about the same, always a little something doing, and a rushing business is expected for Easter.

Prices: American Beauties, $1 to $6 per dozen; Brides, Maids, Kaiserins, Meteors and Golden Gate, $4 to $10; Liberty, $10 to $25; Morgans, $4 to $8; Perles, $3 to $6; Gontiers, $3 to $4. Carnations, ordinary $1.50, fancy $2 to $4; hyacinths, $2 to $4; valley, $3 to $4; cattleyas, $40 to $60; dendrobiums, $25 to $35; mignonette, $3; sweet peas, $1.50 to $2.50; tulips, $2 to $4; callas, $8 to $10.

Notes.

A number of the department stores are having their annual spring sales of plants, bulbs, etc., and are offering stock at ridiculously low prices.

Albert Woltemate is again in the market with some fine Phlox divaricata. There should be more of this plant grown, as it makes an excellent plant for Easter.

J. Kohler & Sons, Main and Bridge streets, Frankford, are sending in some very fine miniature hyacinths, in pots, which sell readily at $1, and tulips, in flats, which are disposed of at a good profit.

There is some fine North Carolina arbutus in the market.

Our visitors the past week were Geo. A. Smith, Baltimore; Benjamin Duffee, Washington; Mrs. Macklin, Harrisburg, Pa.; Mr. Smith, of Smith & Feters, Cleveland; W. A. Knott, Cape May, N. J.; Charles E. Sparks, Wilmington, Del.; George Cook, of Small & Sons, Washington.

The Spring Show.

The Pennsylvania Horticultural Society gave their annual spring show from March 20 to 23. While the entries were not so numerous, the quality made up for it. The bulbous plants were in fine shape and so nearly equal in quality that the judges found it rather difficult in making their decision. The following were the principal exhibitors in bulbous plants: Joseph Hosley, Joseph McGregor and John McCleary. The first and second prizes were evenly distributed.

The classes for cinerarias brought out twelve exhibits. George Graham, gardener to Charles Hartshorne, captured first prize; J. H. Jones, second. Both exhibits consisted of very fine plants.

George W. Brown took first prize for genistas; Joseph Hosley, second.

John Hobson took first on six plants of azaleas; John McCleary first for single specimen.

Wm. Robinson came off with first honors for callas.

Thomas Long, gardener to G. W. Childs Drexel, carried off the honors for specimen ferns. These were exceptionally fine.

Joseph McGregor's exhibit of geraniums was the feature of the show, carrying off first for six plants, first for specimen, and also first for six new varieties.

G. W. Brown exhibit a fine specimen plant of Bougainvillea glabra Sanderiana, for which he was awarded a certificate for culture.

Joseph Hosley staged a large group of flowering plants consisting of cinerarias, Marguerites, begonias and abutilons, and got a certificate for culture.

The competition in cut roses was very keen. The class for twenty-five long-stemmed Beauties brought out seven entries. Myers & Samtman, first; Joseph Heacock, second. The other competitors were John Burton, L. Pennock, Adolph Farenwalt and George Anderson. The contest was so close that it took some time for the judges to decide. Joseph Beavis was first on Bridesmaids and Brides; John Burton was first on Meteor; Joseph Heacock, second. Robert Scott & Son secured a silver medal for Liberty and the certificate of the society for their new rose Robert Scott, which is a hybrid tea.

The show was a little too early for Lilium Harrisii. There were only two exhibitors. Joseph McGregor was awarded first prize for the best specimen; Joseph Hosley first for best six.

BOSTON.

Market Conditions.

Trade in anything that could be utilized in funeral work has been remarkably brisk, caused by the ravages of the grip.

Carnations are scarce, prices readily advanced to 4 cents on good ordinary kinds. Prices on other lines were nominal; perhaps lower on strictly red goods. Small white flowers very scarce at times during the week. Violets even seemed to feel the spirit of the times and sold better by spells. The demand for larger grades of roses was limited the greater part of the time; for smaller grades the demand was never stronger for the same length of time.

Notes.

No special excitement can be chronicled outside a Jewish interpretation of Marquis of Queensbury rules, in the Park street market, which had to be referred to the judge for settlement.

Too recently for particulars comes news of the burning of Mr. Richwagen's greenhouses at Woburn. But as they were badly situated in respect to water to fight the flames, heavy damages are feared.

James Galvin is employed at J. W. Newman & Sons'.

The spring exhibition at Horticultural Hall was one of the most interesting ever given, but your correspondent's limited time, knowledge of the subject and proper vernacular for its expression prevents justice to it for your columns as far as commercial value of new specimens might go.

A number of well known commercial growers came in upon the premium list, those in mind just now being W. H. Elliott, W. S. Ewell, J. W. Howard, M. A. Patten, M. R. Cushing, E. N. Peirce & Sons, and I probably deserve forgiveness for forgetting one or two.

P. Welch and wife, Alex. and Robert Montgomery, E. M. Wood and daughter and F. R. Mathison and wife, are attending the flower show in New York.

BALTIMORE.

Personal and Trade Notes.

Mr. J. H. Brummel, near Catonsville, has been ill for ten days with erysipelas, but is out again and at work. We often hear of "the scholar in politics," and this gentleman's position is one analogous—he is the scholar in floriculture. Not only in the science of botany and in the art of horticulture, but as an all around man of learning he is distinguished in the trade as a walking encyclopedia. It is no disparagement, indeed, to his fellow craftsmen to assert that, since the death of the lamented Wm. D. Brackenridge, he is about the only one in the business here thoroughly informed in systemic and structural botany. For practical knowledge of the flora of this region his experience is singular, and the botany classes of the Johns Hopkins University and the Tramping Clubs of our city often avail of his services as a guide to the localities of the scarcer genera and varieties. He can locate with his finger on the map and lead to the spot where every rare plant has its habitat. No steamer of the regular lines, or tramp roamer of the seas from Europe or the antipodes, brings to our port in cargo or ballast a plant, useful or noxious, but he is quick to spot the stranger. Nor does he know plants only by appearance and name; of every one possessing economic or medicinal qualities, he is fully informed as to locality, uses and treatment. A year or two ago, when the American Pharmaceutical Association met in this city, he collected, arranged and labeled with great foresight, labor and care an exhibit which was almost complete, as it was certainly unique, of the plants of this section employed in medicine and the arts.

Mr. Brummel was long employed in the United States Department of Agriculture at Washington, and when President Grant sent the commission to examine and report upon the resources of San Domingo, he was appointed botanist on the staff and made a thorough exploration of that island.

But it must not be thought that it is only on horticultural and botanical subjects that he is posted, for he is well read in the whole range of science, possesses a fine library of reference, and keeps steadily up to the day in the great procession of discoveries in the sciences and inventions in the arts, but especially, as is natural, in those pertaining to his chosen pursuit of gardening.

Mr. Brummel has been engaged for many years in the florists' business, with a local market at his greenhouses on the Frederick road and a stand in one of our principal markets. At his place may always be found some curious and rare things not apt to be seen at other establishments where commercial aspects only are considered. In the market he is the universal arbiter as to what is good or poor, hardy or tender, and is appealed to to settle every question which comes up amongst the hundreds of frequenters of the flower stalls as to treatment of plants of every kind.

Physically he is a fine specimen of robust manhood, with an aptitude and capacity still for all-day walks, over hill and dale, and along the shores of river and bay. With unflagging enthusiasm, a well-spring of information that never goes dry, and an ever-present spice of humor and good stories which is unfailing, in any assemblage he is an agreeable and profitable companion.

Mr. James Pentland, the venerable senior of our florists' trade, has been lately seen in a new role; he has been for some two weeks posing for his bust before the pupils of the Rinehart School of Sculpture. He is a prominent member of the committee on schools of art and design of the Maryland Institute, which manages this school of sculpture, and was requested by the director to give the students an opportunity to model his life-size portrait in clay, his strong face and patriarchal appearance peculiarly fitting him for this. Mr. P. bears a remarkable resemblance to the portraits of General Andrew Jackson, and amongst his intimates is frequently saluted by that name. Some of the work of the sculptors is said to be exceedingly lifelike and artistic, and it will shortly be exhibited to the public. To the most meritorious work will be awarded a prize of $125 and to the second best $75.

We have a "little Scotland" localized on the Old York road, a thriving annex of the city, where several florists of the thrifty Scotch race are hewing their way to fame and fortune—especially fortune! William Christie is the wit of the trade. He is not continually getting off, nor trying to get off, smart sayings and funny stories, but once in a while one slips out, unexpected—like, which brings down the house with a roar. Back of his droll sayings he has shrewd, hard sense, which gives effect to his fun. He is a wholesaler and retailer; grows roses, callas, bedding plants, bulbous stuff, carnations and chrysanthemums; is always busy, always cheerful, makes the best of his opportunities and seems to be succeeding in his remodeled and improved place, as he deserves to do, by industry, Scotch grit and keeping at it.

For general capacity, sound judgment, candor of expression and honest repartee, none in the trade stands higher than Robert L. Graham. From modest beginnings he has forged along, building each year a new house or two, and almost swearing he will never build another, until he has now an establishment crowded with plants for cut flowers, Easter stuff and bedding out, which gives him all he wants to do on fast days and feast days, his store on Monument street, in the city, presided over by Mrs. Graham, a splendid example of the woman of business, taste and tact, making a good outlet for its products. In the Gardeners' Club there is no more forceful, logical speaker, and when he speaks he says something. He served as its president and is esteemed by the entire membership. If there is any one thing we have against him, it is his big red mustache, more suitable to a fierce operatic brigand than a peaceful, even-tempered blue Scotch Presbyterian like Brother Graham.

Thomas L. Patterson is another of the same settlement and the same blood. He comes of gardeners' stock, is acute, active and long-headed; produces good stuff and knows how to get rid of it. Just now his head is full of Easter anticipations, and he has the clock set just right to bring in the stuff at the moment when it will be best conditioned and most profitable, roses, hydrangeas, lilies, bulbs, all being in good shape. He has been making alterations on his place, and proposes further changes and improvements this season. He is not at all likely to fall behind the procession!

Another neighbor is Philip B. Welsh. We will not say he is a Scotchman—if he spelt it with an "a" we would assign him to another nationality! He is a hustler and is building up a fine business. Calling on Mr. Welsh a year or two ago, just before Easter, or some other occasion, when plants and flowers would be in demand, we found his greenhouses full, his stable and wagon shed full, and we are not sure that in the parlor of his dwelling the piano and center table were not loaded up with stock awaiting the day which, after patience and labor, expenditure of skill, intelligence and coal, was to convert them into cash. This determination to turn all things to account in his business points to this young man's success. At this time, notwithstanding his enforced absence from his work from illness, as heretofore noted, his azaleas, lilies, geraniums, hydrangeas and Dutch bulbs are giving promise of satisfactory Easter returns. Mr. Welsh, in conjunction with John J. Perry, has a store on a prominent corner of Gay street.

On the same road, near by, is the one woman florist, so far as your correspondent knows, in this vicinity—Mrs. Roche. This lady has a practical acquaintance with the business and has recently rebuilt and extended her premises.

It is reported that the contemplated building of several large greenhouses for producing cut flowers for commercial purposes by Mr. Harry A. Parr, a wealthy business man of this city, has been abandoned.

Charles M. Wagner has been given a place as plant grower in the conservatory at Druid Hill Park.

George C. Personette, of North Gay street, who has acquired the Stewart place on Sinclair's Lane, is completing an unfinished greenhouse thereon and will at once build another and plant in roses and other stock for use at his store.

Mr. Benjamin Durfee, of the American Rose Co., of Washington, D. C., was in town a few days ago and reported trade booming at the capital. He took home with him a handsome bunch of the Akehursts' splendid seedling carnation Elsie Akehurst, of a brilliant color between cardinal and bright maroon.

The market for the week up to time of writing (March 26) has slackened off. Roses have been fully up to demand and some days in surplus, with the natural result that prices have declined somewhat. There is no oversupply of carnations; at times good ones have been short. RIX.

NEW YORK.

The New York plant market opened on Saturday, March 24. Thirty-six growers engaged stands inside the old Clinton market and it is hoped that as many more will decide to do likewise early in the season. There's no use standing out in the rain and cold when it is cheaper and better to get inside.

The greatest enthusiasm is being shown anent convention matters. The sports got an extra spurt by the Lord & Burnham Company offering a $100 trophy to the most successful bowling club at the national tournament here next August. So get your clubs in condition. J. I. D.

GRAND RAPIDS, MICH.

There has been plenty of funeral work which has kept all kinds of salable stock from accumulating. The Shaw funeral was a record breaker for the quantity of flowers used. American Beauties were lavishly used, in addition to set pieces. Henry Smith and The Floral Co. had the large orders.

One of the most elaborate weddings of the season was that of the Amberg-May wedding on the 14th. There were 21,000 pink and white roses used, besides large quantities of asparagus, wild smilax, laurel, plants, etc. Crabb & Hunter had the order and were compelled to get most of the material from Chicago, flowers being so scarce in the home market.

The effect of Lent is not as yet noticeable as trade still continues good, in spite of the warm days which bring flowers out fast. What we will have for Easter is now troubling us. Carnations promise to be scarce, particularly white and red, and rose, too, will be in short supply.

To make up for this there will be plenty of bulb stock, azaleas, flowering shrubs, pot roses, even to a fine stock of Crimson Ramblers and while Harrisii are a failure there will be enough longifloriums to meet the demands of the Easter trade.

Recent visitors were A. L. Vaughan, Chicago; A. Boddington, New York, and G. Kroschell and Herman Vlasveld, of Holland.

A. W. Tweedle, Cadillac, Mich., who has been in town, reports an excellent trade and that he is going to move to new quarters this summer and build new houses. GEO. F. CRABB.

A HORTICULTURAL WIFE.

The following adv. appears in a recent issue of a western paper devoted to fruit growing:

HORTICULTURAL WIFE WANTED
—Want to sell half interest ($5,000) in one of the finest fruit houses in S. W. Missouri to some intelligent old maid or unincumbered widow of 40 or 50, then marry her. Am a lone widower of clean record and unquestionable habits. Want an all-around, practical, domestic woman of good health, kind heart, and free from drug habits.

The originality of the proposition is surely entitled to admiration, as well as the far-sightedness of the advertiser.

He proposes to sell the lady in the case a half interest and then marry her and the half interest. He evidently proposes to solve the old problem of how to eat your cake and still have it.

In exchange for the lady's cash and services he offers a "clean record," though he doesn't say how recently it has been laundered, and "unquestionable habits," but fails to say whether they are unquestionably good or unquestionably bad.

And he insists on a woman "free from drug habits." Can it be possible that ladies in his set have been addicted to Bordeaux mixture or kerosene emulsion?

MARIETTA, O.—Julius Lichel, employed by Anton Schoepen, the florist, committed suicide by hanging March 10. He was 38 years of age and had come from Germany seventeen months ago. He was unmarried.

BOONVILLE, MO.—Miss Jenera Yeager has purchased the greenhouse, on Main street from Chas. Koeppen, the Sedalia florist, for whom she has conducted the business for some time past.

SAGINAW, MICH.—The Grenell Seed Co. has let the contract for the erection of a three-story building, 55x85, on Niagara street, the cost to be $5,000.

LEBANON, IND.—W. A. Bilger has been confined to the house by illness for the last two months, but is now able to be about again.

WINDSOR, CONN.—Geo. W. Wrisley has purchased 1,000 feet of the Garland iron gutter to be used in the erection of a new range of glass.

HOLYOKE, MASS.—W. H. Griffith has sold out his florist's business to E. H. Howland, who will combine it with his own.

HOPKINSVILLE, KY.—Judge J. T. Savage's greenhouse was destroyed by fire February 17. Loss $1,500, with no insurance.

OGDENSBURG, N. Y.—The greenhouse owned by Miss Mary Bean has been sold to R. J. Barter.

GARLAND'S IRON GUTTER

note the following extracts

Iron Gutters will do well to from Patent No. 616,781
George M. Garland:

Another object of the invention is to so construct the gutter that the devices for fastening the gutter to supports will be below the weather-face of the gutter, thus avoiding perforations of the weather-face and consequent liability to leakage.

The nails, screws, or other fastening devices are passed through the drop flanges and into the lower ends of the roof-beams, so that these fastening devices for connecting the valley-gutter to the roof structure are below the weather-faces of the valley-gutter, and consequently the weather-faces of the valley-gutter need not be perforated, insuring against leakage.

The "NOVELTY" of NOVELTIES for 1900. NEW -- "MRS. KATE GRAY" -- CANNA

A MAGNIFICENT HYBRID RESULTING FROM A CROSS OF ITALIA X MME. CROZY.

The Color is a rich shade of orange scarlet overlaid with gold, a superb coloring which in open sunlight is simply dazzling. The Form is an ideal of the Crozy type of bloom, the petals being very broad and overlapping, measuring 2½ to 3 inches wide, while the individual flowers are from 6 to 7 inches across. The Texture of the flowers is all that could be desired; they partake of the nature of the pollen parent or Crozy race in this respect, and withstand our hottest summer suns without wilting. The Foliage is a bright glossy green, equal to a Musa in size and substance and forms a beautiful foil to the gigantic trusses of bloom. The Height of the plant is 6 to 7 feet, the growth is luxuriant to a degree, but very compact; the massive foliage, giant trusses, and enormous individual flower give the plant a noble tropical appearance. It is the only Canna of its kind in existence, and absolutely surpasses all others; its intrinsic value will make it a leading standard sort for years to come.

PRICES:—Strong roots, 35c each; $3.50 per dozen; $25.00 per hundred. Terms strictly cash with order, no exceptions. Stock limited; orders filled in strict rotation.

PREPARING FOR EASTER.

Ribbons, Bows and Baskets.

"There's nothing new under the sun," isn't always correct, but it very nearly happens to be so at present in regards to new effects in ribbons, bows or baskets. In these as in most other things people look for or insist on having something different each season and in consequence designers struggle hard to supply this demand; the result is that we see many curious things offered as "new," which we would not deign to notice at all only for the fact that they are labeled as "new." A ribbon may have an extra stripe, gloss a different web, or some other item in manufacture which technically constitutes its claim to novelty and which will suffice to appease the demand of the milliner, but it is the color of the material that appeals most to the florist.

In this regard we are always advancing. Colorists are accomplishing wonders in the way of producing correct floral colors, and where a few years ago it was utterly impossible to match many flowers with ribbon, 'tisn't so now if you care to take the trouble to find out where to purchase. Perhaps the glib-tongued salesman and the easily influenced florist are responsible for many of the funny things we see. Many a florist store today has its little ribbon case filled with impossible colors or grotesque designs, and we are sorry to have to say that anything "goes" with some, it doesn't matter so long as it's the "latest." Last year we had all kinds of print and figure effects, and some awful things were seen on baskets and plants; we may yet see some of these outrages committed but we are glad to state they will not be the popular fancy this year. Either pastel or solid colors will prevail. Some very beautiful soft tones are obtainable.

Pink, about the same shade as Mrs. Jas. Dean carnation, will be the most popular color this spring. Celestial blue will also be in demand. Ribbons to the florist are an expensive luxury. Only the few, comparatively speaking, can afford to carry an extensive stock, but all can and should be careful of the colors, which is of more importance than quality. Velvets are too expensive, satins are not correct, figured patterns are inappropriate. The best ribbons for the florist today are taffeta silks; that is, of course, for general use. For extra fine work, velvets, the new Pann, or corded, silks should be used. There are times when the common colors can be picked up cheaply at special sales, but a visit to the wholesale dealers or manufacturers once in a while will repay you.

To be up-to-date you must appear to have plenty of everything, but you need not use things foolishly. In the near future when we will have more perfection in flower and plant there will be less use for ribbons. In the past, as it is today, florists were and are compelled to use embellishments with some flowers in order to make them appear of more value. Beauty unadorned is always the most exquisite, and as the world advances this will be more generally recognized. The use of pot baskets, crepe papers and ribbons would be greatly lessened if we had better or cleaner plant pots, but inasmuch as retailers and growers will always haggle over prices this desirable end will ever appear in the distance.

We have always been opposed to the indiscriminate or over-lavish use of ribbons, and will venture to say that there will be many a plant sent out this Easter which would look better without the "dress" or "artistic bow" or "sash" you will insist on inflicting it with. It isn't always necessary to do the things we do sometimes, and extremes are seldom satisfactory. A good plant in a clean pot, or a pot basket, if you wish to enrich it, rarely needs any further fixings.

You can have no excuse for any messalliance in colors; if you cannot exactly match the flower, be careful that you use one that will not destroy harmony. A good contrast is the next best thing to exact reproduction, but it is dangerous to do this with flowers; there are occasions when dominant colors, such as white or lavenders, are somewhat sombre and appear all the better for a touch of other colors; for instance, blue with the former and yellow with the latter. Red and greens, light and dark ambers, light amber and heliotrope, light amber and light coral, light amber and apple green, dark amber and violet, dark amber and moss green, apple green and moss green, apple green and light coral, apple green and apricot, light terra cotta and dark terra cotta, light and dark blush pink, light and dark coral, light coral and light blue, moss green and gold, cream and gold, pink and green, and so on.

The combinations in colors are largely a matter of individual taste. You will not have need for the exercise of much mixtures unless it be with the trimming of bulb stock, and after all you will not find any more pleasing than decided tones which either match foliage or flower.

As regards bows, there's nothing specially new; the rosette and single loop styles will be most popular; small sprigs of flowers are used among the loops of the former and the latter is mostly to appear as a "tie bow." Very broad ribbons will be fashionable because they look richer and give a more prosperous effect. You know even the poorest try to hide poverty, and it's better, anyhow, to have your presents look as rich as possible. When you cut ribbons, don't take a triangular bite out of the ends; that's bad taste; just cut the ends slant both the same way.

Some will have ribbons with "Easter Greetings" on the ends, and there will be short bows of gauze or taffeta ribbons tied across fancy or special boxes of cut flowers; it is often foolish, but some women, and men, too, imagine it is a little chic or extra finish, and appreciate it.

Silk tasseled cords will also be used instead of common twine, and remember where such things are adopted they are merely tied with a bow across the box. It is a very common thing to see rose stems sticking out of the ends of boxes; they are delivered so even from the best houses; the ends of valuable boxes are cut to accommodate stems which could be kept inside the box if they were reversed. It is not the proper way to deliver flowers. Try to have your boxes long enough; they need scarcely ever be longer than 36 or 40 inches; roses longer than that are more often a nuisance than a necessity, especially in a house.

Now, in regard to crepe paper, please

Then again, this over-dressing is the cause of many a plant's untimely death; many people are afraid to water the plant for fear of destroying the papers and ribbons, and the consequence is that a day or so in a hot room settles the poor plant. This gives but little pleasure or satisfaction and, if anything, injures the plant trade.

There are some who don't care—their vision is limited to the present; their ambition is to make all they can out of everything. Considerable of this is justified as the world of today goes, but it is necessary that some, and we fear as far as the florists' trade is concerned they will have to be the majority, who will have to be careful and have their best eye on what will most advance business.

An immense quantity of baskets will be used this Easter. Very high-handled ones seem to lead, and though tins are a protection against damage by water to carpets and furniture, yet they will not be bothered with this year as formerly. This time it is get the thing up as cheaply as you can, and if you been cut in the garden and brought in to the house in the gardener's old basket, you are more apt to please than if it is too apparent that you have labored to destroy the natural aspect.

The world of art and refinement dearly loves antiquity, because much of it is far more beautiful than the moderns. To be sure, there always was and will be those who love the gaudy; let them have it by all means; it would be bad to limit either color or taste, but don't try to give the dose to refinement, for it will injure somewhere.

Natural birch bark baskets are very pretty; so are the birch and green luffa; white willow, and green rush baskets are coming into favor again; the trouble with some stock is that it is too finely finished, a more rustic or home-made appearance would suit best. A common bushel basket of roses or mixed flowers may look far better than your fancy celluloid affair.

Small plants, such as primroses, pansies, forgetmenots, etc., will look best in low, oval or round baskets. A bit of ribbon on the side handle will make it look a little festive. Small and delicate vases or knick-knacks are more a nuisance than anything else when you're busy, so avoid them. A good tall vase or two may come in handy for a bunch of long stem roses; it's a part of the business we should not neglect. No matter if you have a cheap class of trade, try to have something extra large in the way of flowering plants; you'll probably sell it, or it will pay you in many ways you may not see all at once.

Send out a neat invitation to all the prominent people in your district to come and see your Easter display; don't begrudge a few dollars in this way, and if you have a booklet on the care of plants, or merely a leaflet instructing customers on the watering of plants, it will be appreciated.

Easter Plants.

The nearer we get to Easter, of course, the better we can see what condition stock will be in, though in a country so extensive and varied in climate as ours it is difficult to generalize. It is queer that though Easter is unusually late this year, there are thousands of lilies which will not be opened enough to sell, and a great many more which for various reasons will not be fit to offer. Many small growers have been almost ruined by the failure of their lilies, and don't be surprised if a share of the poor quality which abounds is seen among your stock. Most of the lilies will be very stunted, and though there are lots of them, we think there will be a greater run on other varieties of plants. Dutch hyacinths, and for that matter all manner of bulbous stock, seem to be far below the average quality. This promises much harm to the bulb trade for next season; a poor florist cannot afford to work for nothing and lose all these times.

have a little regard for the feelings of your customers, if you have none for the plants themselves. We all agree that there is a want for a cheap and pretty pot cover; baskets, of course, are the best, but they cost high, especially to small florists. Crepe paper is the only thing we have to fall back on, and it is very effective when used only as a pot cover. General View of the Exhibition of the American Rose Society, New York.

Well, dear reader, the quality of flowering plants offered this year is very good and the prices are reasonable. The prospects are very bright, and it merely depends on yourself and the weather as to the size of your sales. The trouble with our trade is that we cannot control the elements; if Friday and Saturday are wet days it means ruin to many, but inasmuch as we cannot help such things but must endure what comes, it is not wise to fret over it. Make sure that you are going to have as good an assortment and as fine a display as your brother down the street. You will do better if you save on frills. A plant delivered in good condition is a far better advertisement for you than a silly contrivance in paper.

A most important question with every florist now is how to make sufficient room to display his goods; the best you can do is to clear everything not required out of the store, and, if necessary, make step-benches by the use of a few boards and supports which can be got at any lumber yard for a trifle; a dollar or two spent in this way will save you much. The trouble is with many florists they are cent wise and dollar foolish, and instead of spending a few cents preparing for a creditable exhibition, they will put themselves to lots of inconvenience, tilt their plants up on empty flower pots and boxes, and show their lack of taste and foresight in numerous other ways.

In most cases it is necessary to arrange Easter stock very close together, but you will find that the plant you elevate or single out in a way to show all its beauty will generally be the first sold, because the customer can see it to best advantage; thus it is good to fix a few fine specimens so. Don't have your plants too formally arranged. We prefer not to have the plants marked with prices written on wooden labels and stuck in the pot, for the reason that these labels are usually left by mistake in the pot and delivered so. Just imagine some friend sending you a present and the first thing you see is the price tag; even if you know to a cent what the thing is worth you don't want it shown; there's a certain amount of humiliation about this that florists should be careful to avoid; the fact of our being busy doesn't justify mistakes, which can be avoided by our not preparing to make them. Where there is intelligent help in the store there is no cause to bother pricing your plants; the good people prefer to have a man wait on them who can tell them at a glance what a plant is worth. The man who has to fumble for a price tag is but a novice and banishes confidence; the people like to deal with a man who knows his business—you do too.

There are numerous little things you can prepare now. Wire a lot of tags and have some with a pad in your pocket, ready to mark a plant as you sell it, putting "Saturday" or "Sunday" on the back of the tag, according to when the plant is ordered delivered. There is usually considerable trouble over cards. Have some rubber bands, wrap them in the original order sheet and put them all in a box so that you can prepare them later. It is the proper thing to attach your cards and tags to the plants with a piece of narrow ribbon. Wire looks bad, but then it's better to be correct in address and the cards than to be fancy in finish. If you hire any extra help of the kind that knows nothing about plants or flowers have them where they will not come in contact with and drive away your customers.

The matter of delivery of plants is a vexing one, and the value of a cool-headed, quick shipping clerk cannot be overestimated. If you must have messengers or express men, insist on having clean and neatly dressed ones. Although it is most desirable to have plants delivered on Sunday morning, it is often impossible to do so; induce your customers to have them sent on Saturday afternoon and evening, this will give you more chance to attend to cut flower sales on Sunday.

Although it is good to make a special window display this week, care should be used not to put your best plants where people cannot get near them. If a plant impedes a person's way they will notice it more than if it were some distance away; by this we don't mean to have you entirely block the path, just spread the plants, and above all give them lots of water.

ROSES

AMERICAN ROSE SOCIETY.

The First Exhibition.

"You may break, you may shatter the vase if you will,
But the scent of the roses will hang 'round it still."

So will it be of this great rose show. Critics may have seen it and found fault with one item or another, there is always a plentiful crop of those whose special, nay, only duty on earth seems to be to criticise, but the fact will remain that for quality it was the greatest show ever held, not merely in this country but anywhere in the world! This is an indisputable fact, and when its importance is fully recognized the achievement of the American Rose Society will be more appreciated. It was a first attempt and ended a glorious triumph. The rose is still "Queen of Flowers" and queen of hearts, too, and the future of the society and its shows is bright and rosy.

A grave mistake was made in holding the exhibition in such a place as the Eden Musee, but it is not likely to occur again. The men who would not hesitate to speculate thousands of dollars on some business venture should not be afraid to hold the national rose show in the finest place obtainable. That the exhibition of 1901 will also be held in New York City is a matter for congratulation, because the wealthy people of the metropolis are anxious to assist in making the event memorable.

If you were an observant visitor or attendant at this past show, you could have noticed many beauties of human nature as well as beauties of flowers. Old and young, too, persistently inquired for Bon Silene, Marechal Niel, Lamarque, or La France, or some other favorite of bygone days; there were very few or none at all of these roses at the show. It would be well for some one to grow a few for the next event; the people may admire the great gaudy beauties of today, but their hearts are moved at the sight of the little gems we seldom, if ever, see nowadays.

Many remarkable things occurred at this exhibition. It was most forcibly demonstrated that finer roses were being grown in other states than this. Philadelphia, Utica and Toronto did nobly, and Messrs. Dunlop, Myers & Samtman, Heacock, Dorrance and others from a distance deserve special credit for their grand displays. Nor must we ignore the claims of those nearer home. Ernst G. Asmus did more than any other man to make the show a success. He staged no less than 29 varieties for the Hill vase. Among these were many old favorites and new seedlings and sports. His exhibit for the Thorley cup was a marvel of splendor, and his magnificent new rose Liberty won every heart. We, ourselves, had instructions from this gentleman to spare no expense in making the show a success. A Liberty cap was made containing 550 short stemmed Liberty roses, a Liberty tree 12 feet in height and containing 200 long stemmed Liberty roses, and as for the mirror and mantel decorations we leave that for another time; suffice it to say that Mr. Asmus exhibited no less than five thousand roses at this show.

Mr. H. A. Siebrecht showed some fine work; his miniature rose garden was a gem and should have been specially awarded. Paul M. Pierson, Frank McMahon, in fact all those who exhibited, deserve their full quota of praise.

This much is assured that despite the sneers of the man with the prod behind him, this society will be a success for there is a unity of all elements here. The private gardener, the commercial grower, the wealthy people and the general public determined to see that it is a success, and when you consider the quality of the men who are guiding the ship what matters it if catfish fill the seas.

The Annual Meeting.

This meeting was held at the Fifth Avenue hotel, New York, on March 28th. President Benjamin Dorrance presided. Among those present were Secretaries L. Barron and A. Herrington, Treasurer J. N. May, Robert Craig, H. A. Siebrecht, N. Butterbach, A. Wallace, J. W. Withers, W. P. Craig, Robt. J. Halliday, L. M. Noe, E. G. Asmus, E. Lonsdale, S. J. Reuter, P. M. Pierson, H. Hentz, Jr.; I. L. Powell, A. T. De La Mare, P. Welch, F. Mathison, Peter Crowe, G. Fancourt, Jos. Heacock, J. H. Taylor, H. Dale, S. J. Betts, J. H. Dunlop, Prof. Halsted, S. C. Nash and others.

The secretary's and treasurer's reports showed the society to be in a flourishing condition and much enthusiasm was displayed. The executive committee were instructed to select delegates to discuss subjects pertaining to the rose at the S. A. F. convention. Mr. S. T. Betts, president of the Central New York Horticultural Society, presented invitations from that body and the mayor and Chamber of Commerce of Syracuse, for the society to hold its next annual meeting and show in Syracuse. Mr. Betts made an eloquent plea for that city, and was much disappointed when the members from Philadelphia and Boston spoke and voted in favor of giving New York city another chance.

The next annual spring show will most likely be held at the Waldorf-Astoria. In the opinions of a few it was desirable that some wealthy and prominent society man be elected as president, but common sense prevailed and a worker was kept at the wheel. The old officers were re-elected, Mr. J. H. Taylor being chosen as vice-president. J. I. D.

PIECE-ROOT GRAFTING.

The notes on grafting on pieces of roots by Mr. Kellogg in the issues of the Review for March 1 and 15 were no doubt very interesting to many rose growers. He did not, however, give his modus operandi and this might be useful to florists that have not had experience in grafting roses in this way and are unable to secure an expert.

A few years ago when the grafting of roses was written up in the trade journals I tried a few dozen. Every one rooted. I then grafted enough to fill a house 110 feet long. This produced a heavy growth of wood and flowered early and abundantly.

Any one can graft in this way and I will try to explain my method as clearly as possible. I use Manetti stocks; those that have been planted two or three years are best. When digging the plants be careful to get all the long and strong roots. Cut them into pieces and store in a cool cellar till wanted. One bush will make quite a number of pieces for grafting. The plant may be replanted and in two years may be lifted again and root pruned as before.

In preparing grafting wax take equal parts of resin, beeswax and tallow and melt together in a double boiler (I use a glue pot). Cut cotton twine into pieces 4 or 5 inches long and dip each end about half an inch into the melted wax, afterward pressing the ends with a wooden paddle that they may not retain too much wax.

Select the same kind of wood that you would for cuttings. Lay your cuttings on the edge of your grafting table and with a sharp, thin bladed knife cut from you, turn the cuttings, laying the smooth cut flat on the table, make a second cut from you and you will have a wedge-shaped cutting, smooth and true. Wash your roots but do not get them mixed up and take the wrong end. It is better to cut off one piece at a time, each about two inches long. Make an incision in the end of the root about the same length as the wedge shaped cutting, insert the cutting into the root and roll your piece of waxed twine. The waxed ends will hold it quite firmly.

Insert the grafts in the sand bed as you would cuttings, being careful to have the union covered by the sand, and when new roots have started pot off in the usual way. Roses grafted in this way ought to be produced at an advance of $1\frac{1}{2}$ to 2 cents over own rooted ones.

The question will naturally arise, are they as good as whole roots? All life is but a continuation of cell growth. If you start with only a few cells it will, of course, take longer to produce a large plant than by starting with a one year root, but the result will ultimately be the same. No doubt the ease and rapidity with which grafting can be done in this way puts into the hands of every rose grower an opportunity to use grafted stock. Nearly every graft takes. Even wood that can not be used for making cuttings can be utilized and will make quite good plants, but this is not to be recommended.

I hope I have succeeded in making the operation quite plain. I have tried many other ways of grafting but this I find (after a little practice) is the quickest and best.

FILLING AND EMPTYING BENCHES.

S. S. P. asks the following: "What is the most economical method for filling and emptying benches in a long rose house, say 200 feet?"

This question has been discussed both on the platform and through the journals, with the result that every man will follow the plan that suits him best. We will suppose that in all modern houses you see none of the old bushel basket in front of a perspiring man or the cruel hand barrow, which is about as laborious. How these men who have built or are building 600 and 700 foot houses intend to fill their benches, I don't know, but it is one of the serious questions about such houses. Most assuredly there must be access at both ends for carting in the soil and it is a serious job even then.

The large Canadian growers (I noticed the method at Mr. Dunlop's) have a movable tramway with a truck holding almost a yard of soil. The bottom of the truck is formed like an inverted letter V, with the sides hinged at top and fastened by some simple arrangement at bottom. When loosened the sides fly open and out falls all the soil. The portable tracks are easily laid or moved. The trucks run out at the end of the house and are loaded from a wagon. When the house has only two 6-foot benches this plan answers well, but where there are four benches, each perhaps 3 or 4 foot, as in the old-fashioned long-span-to-the south houses, I don't see how it can answer so well. The soil can be brought in alright but a great deal of handling is needed after it is dumped on the bench.

I have conversed with several large rose and carnation growers who have houses 300 feet long and all of them said that they could get along first rate with the wheelbarrow and I am of that opinion myself. Although having no houses over 175 feet long I do not want anything more handy than the wheelbarrow, for it puts the soil just where you want it. In building these things should be considered. Houses may all radiate from a shed or central house and you may never need or use a door at the farther end, but when it comes to filling your benches the shed or center house is the most unhandy place for handling soil, so a commodious door should always be in the gable end, if it is only used one week in the year. It can be locked or screwed up the rest of the time.

In such a plain job as filling a bench with soil there is some system needed. To set one man to fill his barrow and then wheel it two hundred feet and return again to his pile all alone is a poor way to do it and likely to produce the dumps or a kink in flowers or novelties in making up, but it's mostly a futile chase. Be content with having good, well grown stock, 'tis nearly always better than "new things." What is sentiment? Ah, 'tis the uncontrollable spirit of nature, and her magic wand is the beautiful flower.

Very much depends on your own judgment; all the writings and advice that could be put before you amount to little if your ideas be narrow and your greed dominant. IVERA.

The secretary's and treasurer's reports showed the society to be in a flourishing condition and much enthusiasm was displayed. The executive committee were instructed to select delegates to discuss subjects pertaining to the rose at the S. A. F. convention. Mr. S. T. Betts, president of the Central New York Horticultural Society, presented invitations from that body and the mayor and Chamber of Commerce of Syracuse, for the society to hold its next annual meeting and show in Syracuse. Mr. Betts made an eloquent plea for that city, and was much disappointed when the members from Philadelphia and Boston spoke and voted in favor of giving New York city another chance.

The next annual spring show will most likely be held at the Waldorf-Astoria. In the opinions of a few it was desirous that some wealthy and prominent society man be elected as president, but common sense prevailed and a worker was kept at the wheel. The old officers were re-elected, Mr. J. H. Taylor being chosen as vice-president. J. I. D.

PIECE-ROOT GRAFTING.

The notes on grafting on pieces of roots by Mr. Kellogg in the issues of the Review for March 1 and 15 were no doubt very interesting to many rose growers. He did not, however, give his modus operandi and this might be useful to florists that have not had experience in grafting roses in this way and are unable to secure an expert.

A few years ago when the grafting of roses was written up in the trade journals I tried a few dozen. Every one rooted. I then grafted enough to fill a house 110 feet long. This produced a heavy growth of wood and flowered early and abundantly.

Any one can graft in this way and I will try to explain my method as clearly as possible. I use Manetti stocks; those that have been planted two or three years are best. When digging the plants be careful to get all the long and strong roots. Cut them into pieces and store in a cool cellar till wanted. One bush will make quite a number of pieces for grafting. The plant may be replanted and in two years may be lifted again and root pruned as before.

In preparing grafting wax take equal parts of resin, beeswax and tallow and melt together in a double boiler (I use a glue pot). Cut cotton twine into pieces 4 or 5 inches long and dip each

ROSES

AMERICAN ROSE SOCIETY.

The First Exhibition.

"You may break, you may shatter the vase if you will,
But the scent of the roses will hang 'round it still."

So will it be of this great rose show. Critics may have seen it and found fault with one item or another, there is always a plentiful crop of those whose special, nay, only duty on earth seems to be to criticise, but the fact will remain that for quality it was the greatest show ever held, not merely in this country but anywhere in the world! This is an indisputable fact, and when its importance is fully recognized the achievement of the American Rose Society will be more appreciated. It was a first attempt and ended a glorious triumph. The rose is still "Queen of Flowers" and queen of hearts, too, and the future of the society and its shows is bright and rosy.

A grave mistake was made in holding the exhibition in such a place as the Eden Musee, but it is not likely to occur again. The men who would not hesitate to speculate thousands of dollars on some business venture should not be afraid to hold the national rose show in the finest place obtainable. That the exhibition of 1901 will also be held in New York City is a matter for congratulation, because the wealthy people of the metropolis are anxious to assist in making the event memorable.

If you were an observant visitor or attendant at this past show, you could have noticed many beauties of human nature as well as beauties of flowers. Old and young, too, persistently inquired for Bon Silene, Marechal Niel, Lamarque, or La France, or some other favorite of bygone days; there were very few or none at all of these roses at the show. It would be well for some one to grow a few for the next event; the people may admire the great gaudy beauties of today, but their hearts are moved at the sight of the little gems we seldom, if ever, see nowadays.

Many remarkable things occurred at this exhibition. It was most forcibly demonstrated that finer roses were being grown in other states than this. Philadelphia, Utica and Toronto did nobly, and Messrs. Dunlop, Myers & Samtman, Heacock, Dorrance and others from a distance deserve special credit for their grand displays. Nor must we ignore the claims of those nearer home. Ernst G. Asmus did more than any other man to make the show a success. He staged no less than 29 varieties for the Hill vase. Among these were many old favorites and new seedlings and sports. His exhibit for the Thorley cup was a marvel of splendor, and his magnificent new rose Liberty won every heart. We, ourselves, had instructions from this gentleman to spare no expense in making the show a success. A Liberty cap was made containing 550 short stemmed Liberty roses, a Liberty tree 12 feet in height and containing 200 long-stemmed Liberty roses, and as for the mirror and mantel decorations we leave that for another time; suffice it to say that Mr. Asmus exhibited no less than five thousand roses at this show.

Mr. H. A. Siebrecht showed some fine work; his miniature rose garden was a gem and should have been specially awarded. Paul M. Pierson, Frank McMahon, in fact all those who exhibited, deserve their full quota of praise.

This much is assured that despite the sneers of the man with the prod behind him, this society will be a success for there is a unity of all elements here. The private gardener, the commercial grower, the wealthy people and the general public determined to see that it is a success, and when you consider the quality of the men who are guiding the ship what matters it if catfish fill the seas.

The Annual Meeting.

This meeting was held at the Fifth Avenue hotel, New York, on March 28th. President Benjamin Dorrance presided. Among those present were end about half an inch into the melted wax, afterward pressing the ends with a wooden paddle that they may not retain too much wax.

Select the same kind of wood that you would for cuttings. Lay your cuttings on the edge of your grafting table and with a sharp, thin bladed knife cut from you, turn the cuttings, laying the smooth cut flat on the table, make a second cut from you and you will have a wedge-shaped cutting, smooth and true. Wash your roots but do not get them mixed up and take the wrong end. It is better to cut off one piece at a time, each about two inches long. Make an incision in the end of the root about the same length as the wedge shaped cutting, insert the cutting into the root and roll your piece of waxed twine. The waxed ends will hold it quite firmly.

Insert the grafts in the sand bed as you would cuttings, being careful to have the union covered by the sand, and when new roots have started pot off in the usual way. Roses grafted in this way ought to be produced at an advance of $1\frac{1}{2}$ to 2 cents over own rooted ones.

The question will naturally arise, are they as good as whole roots? All life is but a continuation of cell growth. If you start with only a few cells it will, of course, take longer to produce a large plant than by starting with a one year root, but the result will ultimately be the same. No doubt the ease and rapidity with which grafting can be done in this way puts into the hands of every rose grower an opportunity to use grafted stock. Nearly every graft takes. Even wood that can not be used for making cuttings can be utilized and will make quite good plants, but this is not to be recommended.

I hope I have succeeded in making the operation quite plain. I have tried many other ways of grafting but this I find (after a little practice) is the quickest and best.

FILLING AND EMPTYING BENCHES.

S. S. P. asks the following: "What is the most economical method for filling and emptying benches in a long rose house, say 200 feet?"

This question has been discussed both on the platform and through the journals, with the result that every man will follow the plan that suits him best. We will suppose that in all modern houses you see none of the old bushel basket in front of a perspiring man or the cruel hand barrow, which is about as laborious. How these men who have built or are building 600 and 700 foot houses intend to fill their benches, I don't know, but it is one of the serious questions about such houses. Most assuredly there must be access at both ends for carting in the soil and it is a serious job even then.

The large Canadian growers (I noticed the method at Mr. Dunlop's) have a movable tramway with a truck holding almost a yard of soil. The bottom of the truck is formed like an inverted letter V, with the sides hinged at top and fastened by some simple arrangement at bottom. When loosened the sides fly open and out falls all the soil. The portable tracks are easily laid or moved. The trucks run out at the end of the house and are loaded from a wagon. When the house has only two 6-foot benches this plan answers well, but where there are four benches, each perhaps 3 or 4 foot, as in the old-fashioned long-span-to-the-south houses, I don't see how it can answer so well. The soil can be brought in allright but a great deal of handling is needed after it is dumped on the bench.

I have conversed with several large rose and carnation growers who have houses 300 feet long and all of them said that they could get along first rate with the wheelbarrow and I am of that opinion myself. Although having no houses over 175 feet long I do not want anything more handy than the wheelbarrow, for it puts the soil just where you want it. In building these things should be considered. Houses may all radiate from a shed or central house and you may never need or use a door at the farther end, but when it comes to filling your benches the shed or center house is the most unhandy place for handling soil, so a commodious door should always be in the gable end, if it is only used one week in the year. It can be locked or screwed up the rest of the time.

In such a plain job as filling a bench with soil there is some system needed. To set one man to fill his barrow and then wheel it two hundred feet and return again to his pile all alone is a poor way to do it and likely to produce the dumps or a kink in the back of any man. A gang of three or four should always be at it and it goes with a snap and a vim and a cheerfulness that lightens the drudgery. I have keenly enjoyed myself in days past running along a bench with a barrow full of soil, but like the bowling game I am better now at telling where they ought to be hit.

THE QUEEN OF EDGELY.

This is the name of the new rose that originated four years ago as a sport of the American Beauty at the nurseries of The Floral Exchange, Edgely, Pa., and which has been under careful observation ever since.

It is identical with American Beauty except in color, which approaches that of Mme. Testout. The flowers are from five to seven inches across when expanded and the stems run up to eight feet in length. The rose will be distributed in March, 1901.

At the exhibition of the American Rose Society in New York last week it was given a certificate of merit as it was a newcomer and had no competitor and could not enter the prize lists.

MISCELLANEOUS SEASONABLE HINTS.

Easter Crops.

In many establishments little else will be thought of now but the Easter crops. And little can be said that can help you very much. The weather with us continues dull, but I never saw weather to suit everybody, and while you may pray for sun to bring out your lilies you may still welcome dull weather, for it will save your azaleas.

Remember one important fact: do not put plants suddenly into a cold house from a strong heat unless they are fully in bloom. Nearly all plants will keep many days in a cool, shady house. And in the case of lilies they are all the better for your customers when they have been hardened off, and so are most things, notably Crimson Ramblers, which hang in perfection a long time after being fully out.

What I am going to say seems unnecessary, but yet you see places where the stock is scattered all over the place. Some few customers like to wander through a dozen houses and profess to be so fond of flowers, or perhaps it is "posies," but they are not your buying customers; they are only the visitors; your good patrons like to see your display as quickly as possible, make their selection and be off. The old lady who tells you that her Leopard plant is better than any of yours, or that she has a beefsteak geranium that was sent from Washington, is more welcome about the Fourth of July.

So make one of your houses a show house where there is a group of everything that you have to offer, and nothing on that bench but what is slick and gorgeous. Don't try to make your benches a medley of everything, however artistic it may be. That style is all right in a private place or botanic gardens, but quite out of order in a commercial place. Have blocks of stuff so that you can quickly say, "Any of these are one dollar, that lot is two dollars," and so on. A greenhouse can be as gay as a florist's shop window and far more of it and the most of the visitors will think your whole place is as full of bloom as the hundred foot house they see.

I must again impress on you how much it will facilitate business to have a bench in another house where all orders or plants selected can, whenever possible, be looked out and labeled. Thursday's delivery should be looked out on Wednesday, and Friday's on Thursday, and kept entirely distinct, and so on. If you have any executive ability about you Easter is the time when its exercise will help you out. Nothing should be left undone that must eventually be done. Pots should be washed and instead of setting them back on sand or ashes they can be set on coarse paper. If you should wash a few pots that don't sell it will not be a great loss.

The freak or fad of crepe paper is now in such general use that it is no good kicking, and it is so much in use that the man or firm who does not use it will not be in favor. Properly used it most assuredly greatly adds to the attractiveness of the plants and we don't wait now to be asked to put it on, but every plant gets this cheap decoration. Don't let every man with dirty hands be bothering with the crepe, but let some one of nimble fingers and a little taste be allotted that job. When once practiced at it, it will go as quickly as a bank teller handles the long green.

I don't care what time of year it is or how warm, a plant should never go out without some wrapping paper round the pot, and a little way up the plant. The absence of it looks crude and reminds one too much of a seven-year-old Philipino. Once more be prepared for a rush, for you will have it, and with the greatest of care and system there is confusion enough.

As a grower and retailer both I have to remember with much sorrow the folly of keeping a lot of flowers till the last moment. Four years ago this Easter I had ten thousand carnations arrive at my store at 7 p. m. on the Saturday after most of the business was over and they could all have been sold for $5 or $6 per hundred wholesale a few days before. With all our years of experience and this theme being ventilated again and again, as growers we are inclined to hoard up till the last moment. Easter prices prevail from at least the Wednesday previous, so if you can sell, what object is there in keeping everything for the last moment? The commission man wants his flowers on the Thursday and Friday, and if received before that the commission man and retailer have just as much facility for "salting" them as the grower. There is too much good stuff grown now for old inferior flowers to have a show and the man who gets in in good time stands the best prospect of getting the best price. It is not at all unusual to see better prices at the commission house on the Thursday than on Saturday.

With a late Easter as this year we will hope and trust that delivery will be easy; precaution against cold will not be necessary, perhaps. But a low temperature, say 40 degrees, with a cutting wind, is disastrous to flowers coming out of a warm house, and unless it is warm and still a covered wagon must be used. There is only one plant at Easter that is really hard to deliver and that is the worst of all, viz., the favorite Easter lily. Some retailers believe that a good way is to have plenty of errand boys and dispatch a boy with a lily. In a wagon they shake against each other and broken petals is the result. A dozen broken lilies for which you have to refund or replace will pay the wages of more than a dozen boys for a day. They are the only flowering plant that bothers us, and as we have to deliver three or four dozen to one church we find that the best plan is to tie the heads of about eight or nine together in one bunch. Then they can swing as much as you like and no harm will come because they all go together. But look out for a neighboring bunch or the side of the wagon.

LIME IN CARNATION SOIL.

I have just read the question put by X. Y. Z. on "Lime in Carnation Soil," and Wm. Stuart's reply. Being very much interested in the subject and having experimented some along that line, I thought the result of my experiments might be of some benefit to X. Y. Z., and perhaps to others.

Having been troubled with stem-rot, especially on Flora Hill, I concluded that as we had been very careful with the cuttings there must be something in the soil to produce it, and decided that it was lime I wanted to destroy this fungus. Accordingly I sowed lime on the soil before planting, with the result that I had absolutely no stem-rot in the field and no bacteria in the house after planting in bench.

That was in 1898. In 1899 I changed my location for planting and did not sow lime, thinking I would not need it. During the growing season I lost a large per cent of my plants with stem-rot, and even after they went into the bench the disease continued and the plants became badly affected with bacteria. I resorted to lime about November 1 and in less than ten days I could see its beneficial effects. The stem-rot ceased and the bacteria soon began to decrease.

On February 1, 1900, I gave the benches another lime dressing and today I wouldn't want better or more healthy plants. For some time I have been cutting three-inch Flora Hills, on two-foot stems, and three-inch Triumphs on thirty-inch stems.

I believe, after testing it, that the worst case of rust can be speedily cured with lime, as well as a bad case of bacteria. Mr. Herr, in his notes in "The Florist," has frequently recommended lime, and it was his suggestion that prompted me. I would like to hear what some of the large growers have to say on the subject. S. M. H.

"DICK" WITTERSTAETTER AND HIS SEEDLINGS.

There are but few in the trade whose success at crossing the carnation can be compared with that of the Cincinnati wizard. To speak or to think of seedlings one necessarily takes flight upon the wings of imagination to Sedamsville, the picturesque suburb of Cincinnati, where the Enquirer, the Elinora, the Estelle, the Adonis and a host of other most worthy aspirants for future recognition and honors, can be seen in all their splendor and glory. Then there is the genial Witterstaetter himself, the host of hosts, whose wine is as exhilarating as his hospitality is unbounded, or vice versa. But to return to his seedlings.

It was not upon the wings of imagination, but on an Elberon avenue car that your correspondent "took flight" to Sedamsville. It was worth my while and it proved a revelation as well. There was the Enquirer, stately, erect, grand, a veritable giant of its kind. No wonder, I thought to myself, that the Chicago judges declared it "perfect," and gave it an even 100 points accordingly. And the Elinora, a fit and worthy companion of the Enquirer, of the purest white, perfect in form, with a stem and calyx that are truly ideal.

Nor can I pass the Adonis without being "smitten" by its charms. If ever there was an ideal scarlet carnation the Adonis is the one. To see it growing is a treat that no grower visiting Cincinnati can afford to miss. That it has already made its mark we all know, that it will be received with open arms when it makes its final debut is a foregone conclusion with the writer.

Nor must I overlook the Estelle, a magnificent scarlet, small as compared with the others, but sturdy and vigorous withal. The limited quantity of this seedling which Mr. Witterstaetter has put on the market, has been all or nearly exhausted.

To speak of the other seedlings as yet unnamed would require more space than I could reasonably expect from the Florists' Review. Suffice it to say that there are several surprises in store for the carnation growers and that the coming exhibit at Baltimore will in all likelihood surpass that held recently at Buffalo. S.

BLUE FLOWERS FOR JUNE.

A reader asks: "What can you advise us to grow for blue flowers for design work for middle of June?"

If this question had been asked a month ago it would have been easier to answer, and there would have been more time to prepare. First, there is the blue ageratum, which if the shade of color answers would give you all the flowers you want. The Browallia elata and its improved forms is a much better blue. You could sow them out of doors, but I would rather sow under glass and transplant. They should be in good flower by middle of June.

Best of all is the blue pansy, fine for design work. Lord Beaconsfield variety will give you the finest purples and blues. Sow at once in flats and transplant to very rich soil. To produce the finest results you should have the bed where you can water freely and shade during the hot hours, as the middle of June is getting warm for pansies, but these plants will produce better flowers than those wintered over.

The Delphinium formosum and its magnificent varieties would not be in flower in time. WM. SCOTT.

CYPERUS PAPYRUS.

Though supposed to be an aquatic this reed, the papyrus of the Egyptians, grows to a great size in a bed or border, if an abundance of water is given. Last summer, two beds at Lincoln Park, Chicago, attracted much attention, and were a very attractive feature of the bedding.

And in this connection would say that the plants had a good joke on Head-Gardener Stromback. Not anticipating such a rampant growth he planted some beds of aloccasias with the cyperus in between, thinking the latter would grow only sufficiently to shade the back of any man. A gang of three or four should always be at it and it goes with a snap and a vim and a cheerfulness that lightens the drudgery. I have keenly enjoyed myself in days past running along a bench with a barrow full of soil, but like the bowling game I am better now at telling where they ought to be hit.

BLUE FLOWERS FOR JUNE.

A reader asks: "What can you advise us to grow for blue flowers for design work for middle of June?"

If this question had been asked a month ago it would have been easier to answer, and there would have been more time to prepare. First, there is the blue ageratum, which if the shade of color answers would give you all the flowers you want. The Browallia elata and its improved forms is a much better blue. You could sow them out of doors, but I would rather sow under glass and transplant. They should be in good flower by middle of June.

Best of all is the blue pansy, fine for design work. Lord Beaconsfield variety will give you the finest purples and blues. Sow at once in flats and transplant to very rich soil. To produce the finest results you should have the bed where you can water freely and shade during the hot hours, as the middle of June is getting warm for pansies, but these plants will produce better flowers than those wintered over.

The Delphinium formosum and its magnificent varieties would not be in flower in time. WM. SCOTT.

CYPERUS PAPYRUS.

Though supposed to be an aquatic this reed, the papyrus of the Egyptians, grows to a great size in a bed or border, if an abundance of water is given. Last summer, two beds at Lincoln Park, Chicago, attracted much attention, and were a very attractive feature of the bedding.

And in this connection would say that the plants had a good joke on Head-Gardener Stromback. Not anticipating such a rampant growth he planted some beds of aloccasias with the cyperus in between, thinking the latter would grow only sufficiently to shade the alocasias. The result was that the cyperus overgrew and nearly smothered the alocasias, and he had two magnificent beds of cyperus though rather rough on the alocasias. He will have beds of the cyperus again this year but they will be planted by themselves and strong plants will be placed about three feet apart in the bed.

His new stock is from seed sown last December and the little plants are now in 2½-inch pots, about ready to shift into 3½ or 4 inch from which they will be planted out early in June. It is an easy plant to handle and when bedded out makes a big show at small expense.

Florists wishing to offer something new in foliage effects to their customers would find this a very satisfactory plant for the purpose. It is often listed as Papyrus antiquorum.

THE CHRYSANTHEMUM.

[Paper read before the Tarrytown Horticultural Society, March 29, 1900, by Jas. T. Scott, House of Refuge, Randall's Island, N. Y.]

In considering the chrysanthemum it would be well for us to carry our fancies back to the autumn, to the time of their perfection. This is the particular season that the chrysanthemum student balances his notes, compares theories with results or vice versa, stores up for himself new ideas, rearranges his next year's lists and culls out the weaklings. The survival of the fittest is inevitable. There is no use growing a host of synonyms. Better grow say two or three dozen of one or two varieties than have fifty to one hundred varieties with the half of them poor.

The autumn is a good time for the beginner to arm himself with a note book, if he be alert he will find enough at one or two chrysanthemum exhibitions to supply the necessary information regarding varieties. The old hand ought to know the capacity of his place, know at this time the number of plants he will grow again, and while the actual demonstration is before his eyes he ought to make a memorandum of the number of each variety that he intends to grow next year.

I once heard a gardener say "That the man who introduced the chrysanthemum ought to be stoned," for, he said, "They are a whole year's trouble." We do not all think with that poor mortal, yet his remark suggests a truth, i. e., that we must give to them a whole year's care. Do not get disgusted when you have cut your flowers, think of the old stools and your next year's stock. Keep your old plants in a cool place and give them plenty of light; by a cool place I do not mean to put them in cold storage, or a place that is continually below the freezing point, although five or six degrees of frost occasionally will do them no harm. A dormant grapery, a peach house, or violet house, any place where the temperature averages from forty to thirty-two degrees. Give them an occasional hosing over head, and do not let them suffer for want of water.

For cuttings use medium wood. Very thick pithy wood is not always satisfactory, and by no means use weak, spindly material. Chrysanthemums root readily in the ordinary propagating bed, or in small pots. Propagation may commence in January and continue on till May, according to the system of culture to be practiced. January, and even earlier, is a good time to propagate for bush plants, but for bench culture May is time enough. There are many opinions as to the best time to propagate the general collection. I have tried (and have seen tried) several dates, but all through would recommend the latter part of March or the beginning of April.

When well rooted the young plants may be potted in 2½-inch pots, in a moderately heavy soil, not too rich, and placed on the side benches of a violet or carnation house, or any place in fact where they are near the glass, get plenty of air, and are kept at a moderate temperature.

I have found it a good plan about the month of April, after the first and second potting, to put the young plants in a cold frame (being always careful to exclude frost, but give abundance of air all day and when the nights grow warmer at night also). I have also found it good to have about two inches of fresh horse manure put in the bottom of the frames, and about two inches of coal ashes on the top of it. This insures good drainage, and the little ammonia arising from the manure gives the leaves a healthy green color. The main point at this time, however, is not to rush growth, either by feeding or high temperature. Keep your plants stubby and short.

About the middle or first week of May we always make a point of cutting back the general collection. In cutting back never make a rule of cutting so many inches from the pot. It is never advisable to cut back to hard wood, if this be done the plants usually break weak. The points you cut off if put in the sand bed make excellent material for benches.

After cutting back, the plant will not require so much water for a few days, so be sure and pay particular attention to this. If the plants are syringed overhead in the afternoon, and the frame kept somewhat closer, the breaking away will be considerably helped.

Each plant will break away, making perhaps four to six shoots, and now is the time to determine how many flowers are to be grown upon each plant. I leave the commercial man to answer this for himself, he knows the quality that suits his trade best, and the price he is likely to receive, but for private gardeners where competition or a home display is aimed, I should advise only two shoots to a 7 or 8 inch pot, and one for a 6-inch pot.

Now as to the final potting; I believe that more depends upon the physical nature of the soil than upon anything else. Many believe in adding so many bones, so much fish manure or guano, and so on. This is all rubbish—see to your soil's friability, or tenacity first, then look after the chemical constituents; chrysanthemums require a moderately heavy soil, and great judgment must be exercised.

In preparing a compost get at it early. The fall of the year is the ideal time, but if not done get at it right away. It is perhaps superfluous to say get your turf from as old a pasture as you have at hand. If your turf be of a heavy clay nature do as follows: lay down one layer of turf, grassy side under, spread on that a small quantity of horse manure, some bone meal and a few handfuls of air slacked lime. If your turf be of a gritty or sandy nature use cow's manure, say one part manure to five or six of turf, add some bone meal and a very little lime. Conjure up in your mind's eye an ideal soil, i. e., physically, and if you cannot get it ready made endeavor by every means to make it.

After such a compost has lain for two or three months it ought to be ready for use. Commence at one end and cut down the pile with a sharp spade, but by no means make it too fine. The idea of sifting soil for potting purposes is too old fashioned to need condemnation, but let me emphasize the fact that roots need air, or in other words oxygen, in large quantities. When a soil is too fine it is impossible for such to permeate freely. The old fashioned idea of adding leaf mould to all composts so far contracted this evil but leaf mould is unnecessary provided your compost be rightly constituted.

The plants ought to be ready for their final shift about the end of May or beginning of June. Drain your pots well, and ram the soil firm; it is important that chrysanthemums be firmly potted, otherwise the growth will be soft and pithy. Large pots are an encumbrance and unnecessary, 8-inch pots are big enough for exhibition blooms done as I have stated and 6-inch pots grown to single stem and bloom usually give excellent results.

Another important matter. Are your plants to be grown indoors all summer or outside? There are many who lack facilities for indoor culture. Many can spare a grapery in the fall to flower the plants in, yet can't afford house room during the summer months. Before the dreaded disease, commonly known as "Rust" made its appearance, outside culture during the summer months was possible; it is almost useless trying the outdoor system now. Indoors your plants are more under your control, the atmosphere can be kept dry or moist at will and this is the most important factor in battling with the disease. If the plants be watered during the morning or forenoon, and the house dry by night, there will be little need to resort to Bordeaux mixture or any other fungicide. Apart from the question of disease, however, indoor culture is preferable as giving the best result all through, the foliage is always superior, and I believe on the whole they are less trouble. Any house that has been used for bedding plants, or winter vegetables, and which will not be needed before the flowering season is over makes a good place.

Different pests may prove troublesome during the summer months, but a few tobacco stems thrown around every now and then will keep them in check.

Attention will have to be given very frequently during the summer months to tying and disbudding; neglect in this respect is the cause of many failures.

The taking of the bud is perhaps the most momentous question of all, and so long as new varieties are being introduced, it will remain an unsolved one. I don't think any hard and fast rule can be laid down regarding bud taking, speaking generally, however, I should say, that all varieties inclined to be thin should be taken on the crown bud and varieties that are more compact should be taken on the terminal bud. There are types that do well on either bud, and it is a matter of taste which you desire to select. The crown bud invariably gives larger blooms but not always so good a form. Most of the Chinese varieties are best on the terminals, the flowers being more globular, and incurving. In fact, many make a point of taking all incurved varieties on the terminal bud.

Concerning color, most of the white and yellow varieties are very little influenced by either bud in this respect, but all pink varieties (Mrs E. G. Hill perhaps excepted) give better color on the late bud. In fact Vivand-Morel and several others come almost white if taken on the early bud, although the color is usually best on the terminal bud. Again flowers taken on the crown bud are invariably bare of foliage at the neck, but the stem in most cases is stronger. Crown buds require a higher temperature than terminals and a much longer time to develop. Flowers taken on the crown bud show a larger percentage of rough blooms.

The taking of crown buds may commence about August 25th and for terminals about the second week of September. It is a great mistake to commence the taking of buds too early, rough blooms are invariably the result. Many think that by taking the buds early they will have early flowers, this also is a delusion. I have taken buds as early as August 20th and buds taken September 15th were in flower before them.

Feeding: This is looked upon by many, in fact by nearly all, as the one great necessity in procuring exhibition bloom. "What do you feed with?" is the all-absorbing question. It is important, of course it is, but it is usually overdone. Too rich a compost to begin with and early feeding are the cause of more sickly looking plants than poverty. If your soil contained the usual amount of constituents, the plants ought to get along without any other assistance until the middle or end of July. Be sure your pots are full of roots first, before you stagnate the soil with chemicals. Be on your guard, however, do not have the plants showing visible signs of weakness before you stimulate them. Plants can stand more feeding after the buds are taken, especially after terminals are taken. Apply any of the ordinary liquid manures such as chicken or sheep manure that has been steeped in a tank or barrel or the washings from the cow or horse stable; dilute freely and graduate the dose, do not stick to one form all the time, alternate every week.

After the buds are taken use some nitrate of soda, about a 3-inch pot full to 50 gallons of water; give this about once a week. Just before the flowers show color use liquid sulphate of ammonia, about the same quantity as advised for nitrate of soda.

When the flowers begin to show color, feeding should be stopped, especially on all dark varieties and Mrs. H. Weeks; some are benefited by small applications of sulphate of ammonia until they are nearly fully out.

COST OF HEATING.

A subscriber asks: "How much coal would it take to heat a greenhouse to a night temperature of 50 degrees, size of house 60 ft. long, 20 ft. wide, 16 at ridge, 5 ft. sides (3 ft. wood and 2 ft. glass)? Boiler Hitchings, No. 16, which is situated 36 ft. away from nearest part of greenhouse in a warm cellar. Location, Western New York."

There are several things to consider before you could answer this offhand and be at all certain that you had given the right quantity. The house is quite lofty for its width, which means large glass exposure. Exposure or aspect has something to do with it, and more than all the method or plan of heating.

If the boiler is well down and there is a good drop for the return at boiler the circulation will be quick and less coal will be consumed. If the boiler was close to the house and as is usual with Hitchings the back of the boiler projecting into the greenhouse it would be much more economical than being 36 ft. away, for in that distance there would be considerable cooling on both the flow and return.

If the pipes are all bunched together under the benches you do not get the same amount of radiation as if they the alocasias. The result was that the cyperus overgrew and nearly smothered the alocasias, and he had two magnificent beds of cyperus though rather rough on the alocasias. He will have beds of the cyperus again this year but they will be planted by themselves and strong plants will be placed about three feet apart in the bed.

THE BALTIMORE GARDENERS' CLUB.

To the Editor of the Florists' Review:—Few outside of its own membership are interested in the origin of our Baltimore Club; but, as a participant, I put the facts on record. They are identically as narrated by your regular correspondent, Rix. I was a member of the Maryland Horticultural Society's Executive Committee, which, on his solicitation, empowered Mr. Wm. B. Sands to call and arrange for the meeting of practical gardeners from which sprang the club. I approved of, was present at, and took part in, that meeting. I was chairman of the committee which drafted the constitution of the club, and by that document (as may be seen in it) provision was made to keep Mr. Sands (who was then an editor and not a gardener) in the club on account of the services he had rendered—services which (it is needless to say to those who know him) were continued for years on its behalf in many directions until, from considerations of self-respect, he lately resigned (as I did myself) from its membership. The challenge of known facts in your issue of March 29th was gratuitous and sprang from motives well understood here.

Everyone knows of the late Robert J. Halliday's position here. I knew him from early boyhood. He was big hearted and liberal minded, with the good will of the entire trade, and he worked earnestly for the success of the club. Certainly of all men Mr. Sands is not the one to profit by deduction from his friend's deservings. Of course, there was no shadow of a dream of such a thing! On the contrary, a few years ago, Mr. Sands presented to the club, at the request of its donors, a portrait of Mr. Halliday, and no more eloquent and touching tribute of sincere appreciation and friendly regard could have been framed than his address portraying in feeling terms the efforts for and devotion to the club of its lamented first president, a man whose character and qualities we all esteemed and honored.

Baltimore, April 2, 1900.

Editor Florists' Review:—"Rix," in your last issue, sticks to it that his statement regarding the origin of the Gardeners' Club of Baltimore was literally as stated in the Review, and adds, "It is a matter always known and of record." If so, will "Rix" oblige by producing the record?

Does "Rix" mean to imply that the Gardeners' Club was a child or offshoot of the Maryland Horticultural Society? If so, the writer, who was a member of that society from the time of its resurrection until its demise, must have a faulty memory.

Hysteria is one of the human ailments with which the writer is unfamiliar, and he has yet to learn that love of truth and of justice are symptoms of that disease.

CARNATION SHOW.

The New York Gardeners' Society held their quarterly meeting, also an exhibition of new carnations, at the New York Press Club on March 27th. The show was a great success; most of the new carnations offered this spring were there in fine shape, and were very much admired by the crowds of visitors. Almost all the gardeners and florists who attended the rose show were present at this, and the general public were invited free.

Wm. Duckham, gardener to Mr. D. Willis James, Madison, N. J., won the C. W. Ward silver cup with 12 varieties of superbly grown carnations. Wm. Russell, gardener to Mr. Deltrich, Millbrook, N. Y., won the Pierson prize for best display. George M. Hay, gardener to Mr. John T. Williams, Stamford, Conn., added to his library by winning the Review prize, "Scott's Manual," for best 50 blooms, and the A. T. De La Mare Printing & Publishing Co. prize for best vase of carnations. Joseph Dexter, gardener to Hon. Whitelaw Reid, White Plains, showed a vase of very handsome blooms. The flowers shown by private gardeners were all remarkably fine and were a credit to that branch of the craft.

Commercial growers sent very fine exhibits. The Ethel Crockers sent by Robert Craig & Son, Philadelphia, were grand and were awarded a certificate of merit, as was also the new variety, Gov. Roosevelt, shown by C. W. Ward, Queens, L. I. The gardeners present were very much pleased with this flower, and it is destined to become very popular. H. Weber & Sons, Oakland, Md., staged a great showing of beautiful new varieties; they received certificates of merit for No. 11, pink; No. 40, pink; Genevieve Lord; No. 10A, large white, and No. 126, a fine dark red. Honorable mention was given No. 30. Genevieve Lord was in fine form and greatly admired. The flowers were well grown, having very long stems and great lasting quality.

Lehnig & Winnefield's new white seedling won a certificate of merit, and honorable mention was given to Mrs. Bertram Lippincott, sent by H. Michell, Philadelphia; the latter variety was not in its best form and the crowd would like to see it again. H. A. Molatsch exhibited his new scarlet, Mrs. Bird. S. Coler, for which he received honorable mention. Michigan, from Mrs. McIntyre, Flint, Mich., came in poor condition. Dailedouze Bros. showed some extraordinary blooms of

No. 666, which was awarded a certificate of merit. These were the largest flowers at the show and won much praise. Honorable mention was given a vase of well grown Wm. Scott, exhibited by John H. Taylor. The flowers of Pink Perfection petunia sent by E. Banyard & Son, Clementon, N. J., created a sensation; they were an immense size and a fine shade of pink; they were awarded the society's certificate of merit.

E. Dailedouze, Wm. Anderson and A. Grierson acted as judges. A vote of thanks was given to those who offered prizes and to the florists who so kindly contributed blooms to the show.

The New York Gardeners' Society may not be rich in funds, but it has a record for good work done that no other society in the country can compare with. It is not composed of wealthy men, and yet the day of the rose show it was the only society in New York that tendered the visitors a reception. The best at the Press Club cafe was placed at everyone's wish. The society will do its best to make the June rose show a success, and they will probably exhibit strawberries at their next meeting, which will be held that month.

NEW YORK.

Great are the preparations which are being made for Easter and everyone seems pleased with the prospects. Plant growers have sold out all the best stock; unprecedented sales are reported. The cut flower trade will largely depend on the quality sent in, but all seems bright in this line, too. Every branch of trade reports evidences of much prosperity. Most of the wholesalers and retailers have rented extra stores for plant displays. Some half ashamed and undercurrent comments are being made about wholesalers selling plants, which is all pure humbug. A man is justified in making money in any honest way, and he's but a fool who can and won't do it. Those who grumble most are they who succeed least.

Theo. Lang has opened a branch store and greenhouse at Ninety-third street and boulevard. This place was occupied for many years by E. J. Smyth.

Moore, Hentz & Nash will have a crop of specially fine Maids and Brides in for Easter.

A. D. Rose has been kept in close quarters by a carbuncle on the back of the head, but he's all right now and ready for his usual Easter rush.

Wm. Prosser, who is a prince of good fellows and made Vaughan's store whatever success it is here, has branched out for himself and has opened an office at 57 Maiden Lane. We wish him the best of luck.

Robert Kift was with us during rose show week. He made a very fine exhibit of his patent vase and holders at the rose show. They deserve to be in every florist's store; it's a good thing.

Horticultural builders report a rush of orders which in itself is the best evidence of prosperity all around.

Thos. Young, Jr., will have a splendid lot of hybrid perpetual roses, gardenias and select stock for Easter. We recommend this house to out of town buyers.

Bowling last night was sufficient to jar one.

fine warm weather continues. The cut flower supply will no doubt be as large as usual for the Easter trade, with prices just a little higher than at the present time.

The regular quotations on first class stock are about the same as last week. Beauties have weakened somewhat, the extra select bringing $4 per dozen and some very good stock is offered at $2 and $3. Brides and Maids from $2 to $6 per 100 for first class stock; Meteors are very plentiful at $2 and $5; Woottons and Perles from $2 to $4. Perles have been a little scarce the past week.

The supply of carnations has been good. Fancy stock brings from $2.50 to $3, and common varieties from $1.50

Ostertag Bros. furnished the flowers and designs for the opening of the new millinery house of Strauss & Stummer. One of the features being a large floral ball, 25 feet in circumference, filled with live doves and flowers. Each dove had tied around its neck a card bearing the name of some article in the store. At noon, Monday, the ball opened and the roses and doves were released to the waiting crowd below, and the one catching the bird received the prize written on the card. The other designs were neatly gotten up and admired by all. The decorations were a great credit to the boys.

Riessen Floral Co. made the beautiful decorations and floral designs at the spring opening of Werner Bros.

ST. LOUIS.

Market Conditions.

The past week stock was decidedly more plenty, but no actual glut as yet, although the supply in some lines was more than could be disposed of, especially violets and bulbous stuff. Under such conditions there was more or less cutting of prices. The latter part of the week the supply shortened up somewhat; the prices stiffened and the wholesalers have some room in their large ice boxes.

There is a good deal of speculation as to Easter supply and Harrisii is of course one of the main features. After canvassing this vicinity we can report that the output will be much smaller than last year and that the supply will be very small for Easter week in both cut flowers and plants. Of other Easter plants the supply will be about the same as usual, and perhaps larger. From what we can see much of the stock intended for Easter week will come in much too early, that is, if the to $2. The demand is quite steady and although the cut at present is large there is no great accumulation of surplus stock.

Bulbous stock was quite plentiful the past week at prices quoted in the last issue. The present week will no doubt find the stock a little scarce, as the growers will hold it back as much as possible for Easter.

Violets have been a great glut the past week. On every corner the fakir had plenty of them for sale. Californias sold as low as 20 cents per 100, and less in 1,000 lots; southernns as well as local sold about the same. Smilax is better at the same price.

Notes.

Tom Peterson, formerly with Young and also a member of our bowling club, is now foreman for C. C. Sanders, on Delmar avenue.

Alex Siegel has moved his floral store to the corner of Sixth street and Washington avenue. A much better stand, so Alex says.

Mrs. Buechel reports that they have been very busy with all kinds of work during the month of March.

John W. Kunz has been very busy the past week with funeral work. On Tuesday John worked up the biggest order he ever had.

The Shaw Banquet.

The Shaw banquet on Saturday night last was attended by distinguished educators. Men of science and letters, who have won a place for themselves in the fields of discovery and invention, and whose knowledge has made them benefactors of mankind, honored the memory of Henry Shaw at the annual banquet of the board of trustees of the Missouri Botanical Garden. The banquet was given in compliance with a provision of one clause of Mr. Shaw's will, which set aside $1,000 annually for the purpose. The banquet was served at the Southern hotel. Twenty-five of the guests sat at the speakers' table. Plants and cut flowers in great profusion decorated the room. Behind the toastmaster, Henry Hitchcock, hung a large portrait of Henry Shaw, decorated with smilax.

Leland O. Howard, secretary of the American Association for the Advancement of Science, responded to the first toast, "To the Memory of Henry Shaw." Professor L. H. Bailey, who occupies the chair of horticulture in Cornell University, responded to the toast, "The Science and the Practice." Professor A. F. Nightingale, superintendent of the Chicago public schools, made an address on "The Present Outlook for Biological Science in the Schools."

A great many guests from out of town occupied the other tables around the room. It was by far the best and largest banquet given by the trustees of the Missouri Botanical Garden.

The Florists' Club meeting has been postponed from April 12 to April 19 because the 12th falls on Easter week and all hands will be too busy to attend. It was so decided by the president and members of the club. The meeting on the 19th should be a large one as the week after Easter is usually a quiet one. "Easter Trade" will be the subject for discussion. All retailers as well as growers will take part in it. Anyone wishing to go to Chicago with the members of the bowling club can make it known at this meeting.

Bowling.

The bowling club rolled its usual games Monday night. The attendance was slim and only a few good scores were made and are not so good as we would like to see them. The boys must have had their minds on Easter trade and this might have had something to do with the following scores:

	1	2	3	4	5	6	tot.	av.
C. A. Kuehn....	151	142	162	176	139	179	949	158

Sunday, April 22, is the date set to play the Chicago boys, and about ten have made up their minds to go, with others yet to hear from, and the chances are that about fifteen will be in the party. J. J. B.

BOSTON.

Market Conditions.

Almost a phenomenal amount of funeral work and a very fair run of other floral traffic marks the week just closed in the famed old puritanical city. The steady increase in plant trade, plainly to be seen for two or three years past, is also noticeable this spring. Good judges of the situation predict even a heavier proportional delivery of plants for Easter this year and darkly hint at an imaginary glut in cut blossoms of some kinds unless salesmen keep the cut well disposed of during the next two weeks.

Carnations have just begun to get a little more social, but it certainly looks as if the "modest and retiring" violet would live up to its adjectives upon the 15th inst. Growers are now reporting a falling off in cut and express wonder at what the cause may be. The condition of things in the near future of course depends much upon the behavior of the weather and of the prevailing epidemic.

Lilies are now selling well at $2 and being promised in large lots later at $1.50. E. N. Peirce & Sons claim to hold the majority of the supply and are prepared to handle 10,000 per day when the time arrives. And even at nearly that rate about half a week's time must be consumed in moving their crop. The advance in price of bulbs, and the less number of blooms per stalk is to be largely offset by a little sharper count of green buds.

Red roses have been here in overwhelming numbers for the past week and are expected to be very familiar till after Easter at least. Best Beauties "executed a retrograde movement" back to $5 per doz.; the worst dozen snuggles cozily into a fifty-cent piece, and they will accommodate you anywhere between those figures. Brunners in astonishing quantities invite generosity at from $1 to $4 per dozen; Jacks are not quite so ambitious, about $2 being their higher limit, and the staunch but fragrantless Meteor softly sings on a scale running from half a dollar to a whole one and a half. Holders of best pink and white ones dislike to refuse $2, and almost anything off a rose bush will bring 50 cents.

Large boxes of mignonette have been standing around sulkily refusing to move at the small price offered. Some was sold as low as 15 cents per doz. Forty cents buys best double violets; single ones, singularly bringing 75 cents if good enough. Short smilax touches $2; very fine reaches up to $3. Pinks have been very proud at from $2 to $5. But "pride goeth before a fall," and I predict a fall in their case immediately.

Notes.

Lester Mann has been very sick with pneumonia, but is rallying.

Galvin never allows his business to get into type, but it leaks out that he has just "done" an immense golden wedding in Fitchburg. A whole carload of material went from here and everything available in that city was also used. Two thousand of John Fee's matchless daffodils helped to bring out the proper color, and all other bulb men furnished a quota.

John Chapman has prevailed upon his broken ankle to bring him into the city a few times, but has to favor it too much to attempt any work yet.

Worst fears were realized concerning the fire at Mr. Richwagen's houses at Woburn. It is a hard blow to the worthy old gentleman, alone in the business since the removal of his son to Needham, and the profession generally are expressing sympathy not only by word but by action, as proven on subscription paper at the Park street market desk. All feeling practically sympathetic are requested to bring or send name and a figure to put after it. You will note it is a hard time of year for greenhouses and contents to go up in smoke. B. T.

CHICAGO.

The Market.

There is a fair supply of everything in the market, the only noticeable shortage being in white carnations. The quality of all stock averages good and the demand is excellent, the only things that are inclined to drag a little being poor grade roses and violets. Odds and ends are being cleaned up well for the season. Bulbous stock is moving satisfactorily, there no doubt being some extra demand due to the shortage in white carnations.

It is thought that bulbous flowers will go better than usual at Easter for the same reason, for all agree that there will not be nearly enough carnations to meet the demand for this holiday. It is generally predicted that early orders will be the only ones to get carnations to any extent.

As to general supply of stock for Easter we are inclined to think there will be a generous amount of stock of most all kinds aside from carnations, and probably enough to nearly meet all demands at the quotations. There will surely be no surplus in any line, unless a goodly number of growers should make the mistake of holding back stock until too late for the shipping orders, in which case there might be at the last moment more than the city trade will take.

As to quotations the price lists of several dealers and growers appear in our advertising columns.

Taken all in all the outlook for a splendid Easter trade is excellent. The whole season has been a most satisfactory one, there having been no real general gluts at any time.

Various Items.

C. J. Reardon, for the past year in charge of the greenhouses of S. W. Allerton at Lake Geneva, Wis., has resigned his position and is again in Chicago.

Weiland & Risch opened their wholesale store at 59 Wabash avenue last Monday and are now doing business at this location. They have a very neat and conveniently arranged place.

Kennicott Bros. Co. have put in an unusually heavy stock of hardy ferns, mahonia leaves and other greens for the Easter trade. The firm announces that hereafter they will pay all their shippers each Monday and will carry no monthly accounts with any of their growers.

Bassett & Washburn's roses will be in full crop for Easter, but their carnation cut will be light in comparison.

The Silver-Sweet Vine (Actinidia polygama—true.)

The bowling club held a meeting last Friday evening, at which the resignation of Secretary Henderson was accepted and Geo. Asmus elected to fill the vacancy. The other officers are as before. The accumulated dues of members were "wiped off the slate" and a fresh start will be taken. Starting with this week a series of eight games will be played, and those making the highest averages in the series will compose the team to play in the match with the St. Louis boys.

SILVER-SWEET VINE.

(Actinidia polygama—True.)

Our illustration is from a photograph of one of the plants brought from Japan by Prof. Wm. P. Brooks, of Amherst, Mass., taken when it had been growing at Amherst four or five years. The two plants, which are now about ten years old, cover the entire sides and overhead of the veranda, which is 20x10 feet.

It has proved perfectly hardy at Amherst and though a rapid grower is less rampant and more manageable than Actinidia arguta, which has been sent out by American nurserymen as A. polygama.

The foliage on the ends of the flowering shoots is silvery white, making the vine exceedingly ornamental, and it promises to be an important addition to our list of rapid growing ornamental hardy vines for covering verandas, arbors and buildings.

BUFFALO.

As Easter approaches the weather warms. This Monday is the first day in a long time that snow would melt in the shade. Inquiry for plants is now the live topic. All are preparing to make a big lead on plants. Kasting has rented a large store near his own and intends to handle a great lot of plants and expects a large consignment. This is a good idea and a good place to make exchanges.

W. J. Palmer & Son are great on hybrid and Rambler roses, lilies and azaleas.

Rebstock has a great quantity of azaleas, hybrids, Ramblers and lilies, but grumbles some at his Ramblers not being as well budded as he would wish.

W. Belsey has a nice collection for Easter, well balanced for his trade as usual.

Mrs. Newlands has fine lilies and very fine roses.

Wm. Milley has an extra good lot of lilies, but slightly on the late side.

C. D. Zimmerman makes a most attractive show at his store and conservatory on West Chippewa street, and a visit to his houses on Ashland finds them cram full of good Easter stock.

Neubeck & Myers make a good show with lilies, Deutzias, Ramblers, cinerarias, cythus and other stuff, but "Lome" says their trade will compel them to buy heavily.

I had no chance to visit others, except the establishment at Cold Springs, where I find always a large assortment of nearly everything. Out of the common run are some fine American Beauty roses in 6-inch pots, with eight to ten blooms and buds, some very fine mignonette in 5 and 6-inch pots, and a number of strawberries in 5-inch pots with a dozen berries beginning to color. This latter is a departure. They may take and they may not. It will also be necessary to have a very conscientious young man to water, as a ripe strawberry in April is tempting, and even the delivery is risky, for the errand boy and the maid, young or old, who takes them in at the door all like strawberries.

We were rejoiced to see that Peter Crowe of Utica did so well at New York: "1st for best display of roses." If he can't bowl he can grow roses, and now the expense of several new and larger hats is in order. What a magnificent show it must have been! And now the rose society is launched on a prosperous sea it will sail along as triumphantly as the carnation society.

Not many visitors this week, but we did see Mr. Fotheringham, of Tarrytown, and Mr. Van Zanten of the kingdom of Holland.

I do wish often that I could have a little sport to give you as do other cities. Our young sports are scattered, but we have entered for the New York tournament and there is lots of material good enough to beat Philadelphia. There is W. J. Palmer, Sr.; J. F. Cowell, C. Keitch, Henry Wise, Theodore Frank and T. Mansfield, and a dozen like them who won't lose their nerves and strength at the boisterous "roo-fing" of J. Westcott et al. W. S.

Marvellous Enterprise in Advertising.

A florist on Main street rented his store to a hatter on the 20th of last month, and from courtesy let the hatter in on the 15th so that he could make repairs, etc., but the florist paid the rent to the 20th. On the 16th a near-by florist put a large sign in the window with a hand pointing up the street to his store, as much as to say, "S. is gone, but I am here." This is a little sharp on the man who has willingly left the whole neighborhood to his friend R.

The sign was removed by the florist whose store it was till the 20th, but it was replaced, removed again and again in the window; finally it stopped out. Such cuteness and sharpness as this deserve to amass an easy fortune. The writer wishes he had a little more of this gall himself, and used it frequently, but tempered with discretion and fairness to his competitors.

"SLOW POKE."

AMERICAN GROWN BULBS.

Under date of March 24, Mr. George Gibbs, Orcas, San Juan Co., Washington, who is the pioneer in growing

Dutch bulbs in that section, writes:

"I now have 250,000 bulbs in the ground. My hyacinths are now blooming. Crocuses (25,000) were in bloom the past three weeks. We have had the mildest winter in ten years, only two mornings with the temperature at 13 and 16 degrees, the remainder of the time ranging between 28 and 48 degrees. Narcissus came in bloom three weeks ago. English filberts were in bloom Jan. 15 and are now well set.

"Our island being surrounded by water that is never below 43 degrees in winter and never above 55 degrees in summer, with heavy dews all the season, the conditions are peculiarly favorable to the growth of the bulbs. By planting hyacinths late, say in November, they always come through safely and grow to perfection. I am now in my ninth year here."

SAN FRANCISCO.

The Market.

Trade this week has been fair; a few of our florists had decorations that kept them busy. Easter plants and cut flowers of all kinds will be plentiful, the warm spring weather bringing all kinds of seasonable flowers in with a rush.

Sweet peas made their appearance for the first time this week. Violets, California and Princess of Wales are almost gone, the Giant and Duchess of Marlborough taking their place. Harrisii will be equal to the expected Easter demand. Prices: American Beauties, $1.50 to $3.50; Brides and Bridesmaids, 35 to 75 cents; Meteors, 25 cents to $1; Papa Gontiers, 25 to 50 cents; Perles, 50 cents; Cecil Brunners, 12 1-2 cents per dozen; carnations, Hobarts, $1; Crokers, 75 cents; Hills, 35 to 50 cents; Triumph, 35 to 40 cents; Bradts, 35 cents; Gold Nugget, 35 cents; Scotts, 25 cents; Portia, 10 to 20 cents; Harrisii, $2.50 to $3; violets, the Giants, $1.50 per doz.; sweet peas, $2 per doz.

Various Notes.

Mr. Chas. Hasselbacher is cutting the best Kaisers coming into market.

Mr. Peter Wadlinger has a very fine seedling carnation with a grand stem, color dark shade of pink.

Mr. J. Gilmore will erect 100,000 feet of glass on his new place at Elmhurst. Work on the plant was commenced this week, and when completed will be one of the largest places on the coast.

Mr. H. M. Morse has just received a copy of the Florists' Manual, by Wm. Scott, and regrets he did not have it a year ago when he first started in business. Mr. Morse thinks it a great book.

Mr. John Jack has a fine show of pansies at the race track. Mr. Jack has the carnation fever and if he does them as well as he does the pansies many fine vases must be expected.

On the 13th of March Joseph Murphy, an expressman, drove up in front of the florist store of F. C. Jaeger, 236 Sutter street, and left his horse fastened there. In the absence of Murphy, who had gone to a neighboring store, his horse started in to chew up a few palms that were standing on the sidewalk. Mr. Deban, who has been employed by F. C. Jaeger, moved the plants out of danger, and also removed part of the harness from the horse to secure his employer for damage done. When Murphy returned, so Deban and Jaeger claim, the clerk notified him of the wrecked plants and said the missing portion of the harness would be returned on payment of 25 cents, which represented the foliage consumed by the horse. The amount was refused, hot words followed, and Murphy threw a heavy flower pot at Deban. The latter avoided the missile and Murphy picked up another pot to take a second shot. Fearing he would be worsted Deban caught up a heavy pair of shears and threw them at Murphy, striking him on the forehead. Jaeger assisted and Murphy was thrown from the store and the bit of leather to which he laid claim followed him. Murphy was taken to the hospital, where it was found his skull was fractured, and lingered on to the 25th of March, when he died. Deban is an Egyptian and will be held for murder. He is held in high esteem by his employer who, with another clerk, will testify in his behalf.

Mr. James Kidd, late of the Sunset Seed & Plant Co., has returned to his old stamping ground with Wm. Elliott & Sons, Dey street, New York. Mr. Kidd says he is glad to be among the snow once more. That's all right; just wait till the thermometer gets down 30 below zero. His thoughts will turn to the Golden state.

Mr. Robert Armstrong, at Fernwood, has come to the conclusion that it is not best to live alone. On the 24th of April he will be married to Miss Jennie Curtis, Oakland, Cal., a very pleasing young lady with many accomplishments. Congratulations are now in order.

TARRYTOWN, N. Y.

The Tarrytown Horticultural Society held its monthly meeting March 29. There were twenty-eight members present. Wallace Odell and John Walquist were elected to membership.

A very interesting paper on the cultivation of the chrysanthemum by James T. Scott, gardener at the House of Refuge, New York City, was read. It was well received and a lively discussion followed.

Wm. Scott exhibited Spiraea grandiflora in splendid form. Imantophyllum Clivia miniatum, also a seedling from same variety, a shade lighter in color, both well grown, were exhibited by Louis A. Martin.

GRAND RAPIDS, MICH.Easter Outlook.

The weather has been bright and warm, very favorable for bringing out the flowers, but nevertheless we are experiencing a carnation famine.

Hardly a shipping order the past week that has been filled as ordered. When all efforts to get flowers wholesale failed, buying a few dozen here and there at retail, in order to make out, was resorted to, but not even a dozen could be procured, and yet, they say this is Lent! As far as business is concerned, it might better be dubbed holiday time. Roses are in good supply, quality fine, price $1.50 per doz. Violets are blooming themselves to death. Longiflorum lilies are coming in fine shape, but much of the bulb stock is turning out remarkably poor, not of near so good quality as last year.

Leaving out carnations, the outlook for the supply for Easter is good; and we believe we shall see all records broken by the amount of business done. Another bulb agent, Hubert Elffers, is around town, trying to round up any bulb order that might have been missed. G. F. CRABB.

MR. F. S. PEER, Mt. Morris, N. Y., sends us the catalogues of the two foreign houses for which he is sole American agent. That of De Graaff Bros., Ltd., Leiden, Holland, is devoted to a full line of Dutch bulbs and plants and contains some very handsome half-tone engravings of daffodils. That of K. Wezelenburg & Son, Hazerwoude, near Leiden, Holland, is devoted to azaleas, rhododendrons, roses, clematis, forcing plants, evergreens and other choice trees and shrubs.

DES MOINES, IA.—The fire that destroyed the down-town store and conservatory of I. W. Lozier, as reported in last issue, was caused by defective electric light wires. The loss on stock was $2,000, with insurance of $500, and on the building $700, covered by insurance.

PITTSBURG.

Cut flower trade has been better this Lent than in former years. Carnations have been very scarce for a month or more, but roses are more plentiful since the days have lengthened.

Some very nice valley and longiflorum lilies are sent in by Fred Burki. Harrisii is rather poor and is of slow sale. A great many more tulips could have been used the past month.

The Ludwigs, at Allegheny Market, make a very nice display each day. They do a large business at less expense than the store men.

A. W. Smith gave up his stand in the market last summer and now devotes all his time and energy to his large store on Sixth avenue, Pittsburg, and his greenhouses at Mt. Washington. He will be ready for Easter with a large lot of bulbous stock.

A. M. & J. B. Murdock have dissolved partnership. Mr. A. M. Murdock will continue, as usual, the business at the old stand. He has been the active partner in the business anyway lately.

The outlook for Easter is higher prices for carnations, roses and lilies, with other stock about the same prices as last year. Lilies are not so plentiful as they were last year.

John Murchie, of Sharon Hill, has among a lot of good carnations a white seedling, in bloom, that seems to be better than any other white now on the market. He is taking especial care of it and as he is a very successful grower of carnations he will handle it all right.

His neighbor, McConnell, also a carnation grower, has been in the city on his way east to look up the new carnations and see them growing at their respective homes. He reports an off crop for Easter. BAER.

LOUISVILLE, KY.

Louise Haupt, wife of Mr. Fred Haupt, the florist, has purchased an interest in a very desirable piece of property on Fourth avenue, between Walnut and Chestnut streets, upon which will be erected a handsome four-story brick store building, the ground floor to be divided into two stores, one of which will be occupied by Mr. Haupt. The price paid for the property was $38,000.

HUDSON, WIS.—One of B. L. Grant's vegetable houses was burned March 21 and 1,000 bushels of onion sets were destroyed. Loss covered by insurance.

.....WHO IS THE..... QUEEN OF EDGELY?

It is the famous NEW ROSE--the long-looked for → Pink American Beauty ← which has been so favorably received at the exhibition of the AMERICAN ROSE SOCIETY, Eden Musee, New York, March 27, 28, 29, 1900, having won the only distinction to which, as a new comer, it was eligible, viz.:

A CERTIFICATE OF MERIT.....

THIS IS WHAT THE NEW YORK PRESS HAS TO SAY ABOUT IT:

N. Y. HERALD.

There was the new American Beauty, a rose as large and as well formed as its darker sister, and of a delicate pink color. Many of the patronesses stopped before the great clusters of this new flower and expressed the greatest admiration for its beauty and its gracefulness. There are many who regard it as more beautiful than the well known rose from which it has developed.

N. Y. TIMES.

The novelty of the exhibition was the long-looked-for pink American Beauty, of which so much has been said and which has never been shown before. Its History is an interesting one, and shows how fortunes come accidentally to the rose grower as they do to some other toilers. Four years ago, in a house devoted to the propagation of American Beauties, at Edgely, Penn., by the Floral Exchange Company, of Philadelphia, a freak made its appearance. To rose growers it was called a "sport," and its growth was carefully watched.

Soon a small pink bud made its appearance, the only blonde in that household of lovely brunettes. Modestly it unfolded, and then its growth for four years under special conditions was as carefully looked after as the most delicate child. It grew and thrived, and last night the queenly blonde received homage from her courtiers. The American Rose Society awarded it a certificate, which means that she is lovely as well as a debutante. She will not stoop to trade until next spring, when in the busy marts she will vie for favor with her brunette sister. All this is the result of an accident that even the growers do not attempt to explain. It was their luck, they say, that is all.

N. Y. WORLD.

The Queen of Edgely, a cousin to the American Beauty, has created a furor. Mrs.

Morris K. Jesup, Mrs. John Trevor, Mrs. A. A. Joline have all sworn allegiance to the reigning sovereign, which bids fair to hold unquestioned sway. The rose is of a pale pink hue, infinitely soft in effect in decorations. It is a baby queen, a novelty, without a rival, and therefore not eligible for a prize.

N. Y. SUN.

A vase of huge pink Queen of Edgely roses, the biggest rose shown, and a variety of the American Beauty.

NEW YORKER HEROLD (GERMAN.)

The highest triumph of the exhibition was the new pink American Beauty, "Queen of Edgely," from the nurseries of the Floral Exchange, Philadelphia and Edgely, Pa. This rose, when fully expanded, measures 6 to 7 inches, and is queen of queens among roses.

This Rose originated at the nurseries of THE FLORAL EXCHANGE, EDGELY, PA., four years ago, and has been under careful and continuous observation since that time. This Rose we can strongly recommend, and we will be ready to distribute it in the Spring of 1901. Address all communications to the office of

THE FLORAL EXCHANGE, Inc., 335 N. 6th St., Philadelphia, Pa.

Genevieve Lord

The Peer of All Light Pink Carnations.

Speaking from a dollar and cent standpoint the above is literally true. There may be some larger, but when put to the test of an exacting commercial fire, none will stand the test and bring in the returns like Genevieve Lord. Its color is the kind that sells at sight. Stem the best of any carnation. A perfect, non-bursting calyx. Beautiful distinct form. In fact it has nearly everything that is wanted in a pink carnation. Customers recognize it at a glance, describing it as "that beautiful pink on the long stem."

Prompt delivery after April 10th. Stock all sold prior to that date.

What Growers Think of the Cuttings.

Genevieve Lord cuttings arrived in good order.—H. Dale, Brampton, Ont.

Your Genevieve Lord cuttings are the finest I have ever received of a new variety. If all others were as good I would have no kick coming.—Geo. R. Geiger, Nazareth, Pa.

The best carnation cuttings (Genevieve Lord) I ever received.—A. Herrington, Madison, N. J.

Genevieve Lord cuttings arrived safely, none the worse for their long journey.—J. Gam-mage & Sons, London, Ont.

Carnation cuttings received. They are extra fine, especially the Genevieve Lord. If I can only grow them as well as they look, I will be satisfied. Next time I want good stock I will know where to send.—W. H. Vance, Wilmington, Del.

Justice as well as gratitude demands my informing you that the carnation cuttings arrived the 16th inst., proving most satisfactory in every respect. I have yet to see as fine, healthy a lot of plants anywhere as these, and you have insured my future orders, so long as you continue to send out this high grade of plants. These cuttings are so far superior to those received from other growers that comparison can hardly be made; they are in a different class altogether.—James L. Lomerson, Phillipsburg, N. J.

What Experts Think of the Blooms.

Washington, D. C., January 12, 1900.
Messrs. H. Weber & Sons, Oakland, Md.

Dear Sirs: We have handled your new carnation, Genevieve Lord, for the past year, and beg to state that it is one of the finest carnations we have ever handled. It has become very popular here in Washington, its beautiful color making it a ready seller. Together with color, its most distinct points are its extra long stems and perfect, erect habit. It has a marked individuality, enabling customers to recognize it at a glance. It is one of the few new carnations that have so many good points, and we feel satisfied that it has a great future before it. It is some little trouble to educate people up to paying $3 and $4 per dozen for carnations, but if any carnation will bring the price, it is Genevieve Lord. Yours very truly,
(Signed) J. H. SMALL & SONS.

Cincinnati, Ohio, January 16, 1900.
Messrs. H. Weber & Sons, Oakland, Md.
Gentlemen: I want to congratulate you on being the introducers of Genevieve Lord, your new pink carnation. Although I have not seen it growing, I have seen it exhibited at nearly all seasons of the year, and, taking all its good qualities into consideration, I believe it to be the best pink of its class in the market to-day. It is strictly a commercial flower, and will produce the dollars and cents. I predict for you a phenomenal sale of this carnation. Yours very truly,
(Signed) E. G. GILLET.

St. Louis, Mo., January 24, 1900.
Messrs. H. Weber & Sons, Oakland, Md.
Dear Sirs: In regard to what I think of Genevieve Lord, and what I heard spoken about it at the meeting is this: Color just right and what is wanted, and will sell. Shape and size as good, if not better, than any carnation ever sent out. Very sweet. Stems the best ever seen on any carnation ever sent out. In keeping and shipping qualities it beats any carnation that I have ever seen. I mentioned last time in my letter to you that they looked as fresh as if they had just been cut. Yours very truly,
(Signed) E. SCHRAY,

GLASS BOWLS.

In making up small table centerpieces, Mr. P. J. Hauswirth, the Chicago florist, uses low glass bowls instead of flat baskets. They are even cheaper than the baskets, and after being filled with moss the moss can be thoroughly soaked without any danger of wetting the table linen, with the result that the flowers last much longer in them and give better satisfaction.

THE FLORISTS' MANUAL.

The Florists' Manual, by William Scott. Florists' Publishing Co., Chicago. A reference book for commercial florists.

The author's first aim in preparing this work was to fill a long felt want among florists—a book describing the best plants commercially, with cultural advice founded on experience. Viewed in this light, it is a valuable and instructive work, very complete in its details. But it need not be confined to circulation among florists and others commercially connected, although gardeners and amateurs need not expect in it a work exactly fitting their requirements. Rather judge it through the author's own words, i. e.: "If those who favor us with a perusal of its pages glean only one hint which may help them * * * they will have received value for their money." A work resulting from Mr. Scott's long and varied experience, "from selling a bunch of violets over the counter to planting a tree or seeding a lawn or building a greenhouse," cannot but throw out many hints of value to any one interested in any line of horticulture or flower gardening. The comparatively small index confronting the reviewer at first is far from encouraging, but as the purpose of the author is more clearly brought to light, it is better appreciated. It shows the intention to treat of the most desirable and profitable things to handle—a condensation which many will enjoy. Many interesting subjects are brought to headings, such as "Easter Plants," "Watering," "Decorations," "Potting," "Bedding Plants," etc. Not the least of value to the possessor of this book are the beautiful half-tone illustrations, numbering more than 100, and thoroughly illustrating the subjects treated. Critical persons may object to the interspersing of advertisements with the reading matter, though it is not made very obtrusive; yet it must be remembered that the work is designed for commercial purposes, and not strictly as a library book.—Meehan's Monthly.

We have gotten much valuable instruction from the Florists' Manual and prize it highly.

Franklin, Tenn. TRUETT BROS.

The Florists' Manual is a gem. No florist can afford to be without it.
Madison, N. J. A. J. BAUR.

If every one has enjoyed your book as I have it's a successful publication. It is different from our usual horticultural works, being plain and concise—just what one wants.

A FLORAL PICK.

Dennis Houlihan, a public contractor and ex-alderman, died. He had come over from Ireland when a boy, and from the bottom rung of the ladder had climbed through a series of failures and successes until at last he was awarded with riches in reasonable amount and political preference beyond the dreams of his ancestors. The funeral was made notable by the many beautiful floral offerings sent by the business and political friends of the deceased.

When the widow came in for a farewell look at her honest spouse she had enough of feminine curiosity left to glance up, between the spasms of her lamentations, at the flower designs that surrounded the bier.

"Arrah, Dinny, dear, ef yez cud on'y see th' purties thot they hev brung yez!" she moaned. "Oh me! Oh my! Here be a pillow o' daisies, Dinny boy, fer yez t' shlope on in paradise. An' here be th' gates ajar that'll let yez in ter glory. (Sniffle, sniffle, sniffle.) An', Oh me! Oh my! Here be th' golden harrup made o' posies, Dinny dear, but they didn't know as yez wuz th' musician on th' accordion, at all, at all. (More sniffle.) Yez 'ill hev t' learn th' harrup, Dinny boy."

The widow's curious eyes continued to take in the adornments of the mourning room with a tearful appreciation of the honors done her "Dinny" in the hour of death. Suddenly she espied near the foot of the casket a large anchor of lilies. Not having nautical knowledge enough to understand the poetic significance of the emblem, and being particularly sensitive as to the subject of her husband's humble origin, she lost her temper and forgot her grief in this impassioned inquiry: "Who th' divil sint thot pick?"—Detroit Free Press.

AN ANNIVERSARY TRIBUTE.

An anniversary floral tribute presented to a Washington official consisted of a huge bouquet of roses rising from a base of suitable greens, there being a rose for each year of his life, and pendant from the roses were red, white and blue ribbons on which were lettered in gold the leading events in his career.

THE 1900 catalogue of Messrs. Ellwanger & Barry, Rochester, N. Y., is certainly a beauty. Half-tone engravings from photographs are used throughout as illustrations and looking them over one is more than ever inclined to the belief that to "paint the lily" is ridiculous. For what wood cut or exaggerated drawing was ever half so beautiful as these truthful pictures of trees, shrubs, roses, fruits, etc., as nature made them!

IF YOU HAVE any surplus stock to sell offer it in our classified advs. The cost is slight and your offer will come under the eyes of all possible buyers.

SOW NOW seeds of Victorias, Nelumbiums and Nymphaeas. Intending planters will gain a long start and early blooms by procuring dormant tubers of the tender Nymphaeas now, and starting same indoors, thus securing strong plants for planting at proper season, and also save the expense of heavy express charges. We shall be pleased to furnish estimates, and our specialist, Mr. Wm. Tricker, will be glad to offer practical suggestions to those intending planting either large or small ponds.

CLEVELAND.

The stores are looking very attractive just now with their azaleas, hyacinths, tulips, etc., in pans and flats. Gasser is showing a window with a foundation of wood moss, with orange trees in fruit, also pineapples in various stages of development. A beautiful wreath of pansies shaded from light blue to black and down through all the shades of brown to yellow and back to the blue, was a recent bit of good work seen in their window. Another wreath of Adiantum gracillimum with a cluster spray of Cattleya Mossiae was also noted. Another taking arrangement was Kift's vases done in pansies. The flowers being fine, it was most attractive.

Mr. Smith, of Smith & Feters, is doing the east and expects to return with Easter novelties galore. E. J. Paddock reports much trouble with lilies this year. Says it doesn't pay to grow Harrisii any more. Guy Bates, of Bates Bros., says he hasn't seen a first-class Harrisii lily this year. This firm is handling some good roses this year.

The market florists report pretty good business. Funeral work has been very brisk and has used up much that otherwise would have been a surplus.

One of our large dry goods and clothing stores had an opening this week, at which "spring flowers" played quite a prominent part, ten to twelve hyacinths in a pan, tulips ditto and staked with concealed wires, all pots and pans covered with fluffy masses of crepe tissue and ribbons, in the right shades and blendings, as well as azaleas, and also some well done Azalea Mollis, which was "stunning" for this use. Plenty of cinerarias are in flower and of a good strain. All the florists seem to have grown a batch, with the result that the market is a little overdone.

Mrs. Schneider has removed her stand in The Arcade to one of the stores nearer Euclid avenue, where she has more room.

Miss Rock, a niece of Mrs. J. M. Gasser and sister of Will Rock, of Kansas City, died of typhoid fever lately, and her mother is now very ill with the same disease.

The Holland men have been with us lately and the wholesalers complain that they can't collect anything. The Hollanders cleared up everything.

Mrs. Ella G. Wilson recently addressed Sorosis, the largest woman's club in the city, on "Plants in our Homes," illustrating her talk with plants from the greenhouse, showing how root development affected growth, how overwatering and drought affected them, and much other useful knowledge of this kind. This is the missionary work that is needed and the ladies requested Mrs. Wilson to give another talk on the same subject, she having already given two. This is a new subject for woman's clubs, and the questions asked the speaker showed that great interest was taken in it.

Sweet Pea "Earliest of All"

Notwithstanding their dwarf habit and neat, slender foliage, the plants are of vigorous growth and come into bloom always ten days to two weeks in advance of the Extra Early Blanche Ferry, which has been heretofore a week ahead of all other varieties. Growing only two feet in height, the plants do not require the support of brush or trellis. As an illustration of its extremely early-flowering habit, we would state that now (Oct. 15th) we have plants in fine bloom from seed gathered from our spring planting and sown during the latter part of August. A constant succession of bloom may be had from June until November by making sowings about one month apart. Its extremely early flowering habit makes it most satisfactory for the Southern States, as it may be easily had in full bloom before the hot summer weather. The flowers are as large as those of the regular strains of Blanche Ferry, and have long, stout stems, making them entirely satisfactory for cutting; they are borne in close clusters of three, all facing one way. The standards are a bright, rich pink, while the wings are nearly pure white.

Burpee's "Earliest of All" is not only the earliest to bloom in open ground, but is also the most desirable for forcing under glass for winter cut flowers. The dwarf habit of this variety renders it much more easily grown on the benches, admits of closer planting, and from seed sown during the latter part of August blooms may be cut during the holidays, while with taller varieties no blooms could be had before February or March. Per oz., 10c; ¼ lb., 30c; per lb., $1.00.

BURPEE'S "BLUE LIST." Our Wholesale Price List of Seeds in larger quantities is mailed free on application to Gardeners and Florists.

If You Plant for Profit You should write at once for this Wholesale List. BUT we cannot send it to private planters, even if requested to do so. The prices quoted in the FARM ANNUAL are as low as we can afford on retail orders. Market Gardeners, Canning Establishments and Florists requiring large quantities of seeds are entitled to lower prices wherever possible.

A New Feature in Burpee's "BLUE LIST" that will be of special interest to growers who Plant for Profit, is the "plain talks" we give, at the head of every department, as to just the best varieties for different purposes.

SPIRAEA GLADSTONE.

At Lincoln Park, Chicago, Head-Gardener Stromback has a dozen or more plants of this new spiraea on trial and it has shown itself to be considerably better in many ways than the old japonica. The heads of bloom are not only larger and more showy but they are more freely produced and seem to come earlier. He is very favorably impressed with it.

shallow water chambers, the flames and radiant heat from the fire so envelop the water chambers that all the heat is taken up by the water and instant, rapid and continuous circulation is secured. Compactness, combined with great efficiency and reasonable cost, is secured in these boilers.

POWER, ECONOMY and DURABILITY are all here evident to even an inexperienced judge.

P. B. MAGRANE, Florist, Lynn, Mass., says:

Your Standard Hot Water Boiler No. 32 is all that you recommend it to be. It does the work for me nicely that other boilers have failed to do. It heats a greenhouse 8x18 and also a large two-story barn and makes them quite comfortable in the coldest weather. I highly recommend it to any one as a first-class heater both from point of efficiency and economy.

KEAP STREET GREENHOUSES,

BROOKLYN, NEW YORK, March 23, 1900.

MESSRS. THOS. W. WEATHERED'S SONS,
Nos. 46 and 48 Marion Street, New York City.

GENTLEMEN:—I purchased from you last September one of your Sectional Hot Water Boilers for my Greenhouse at Flatbush, and was so well pleased with the results that I bought another one for my Keap Street Greenhouses, taking out another make.

Anything I might say would not be too high praise for your boilers. It works perfectly, and I am pleased to say that so far I have saved in coal one-half the cost of the boiler. They will therefore pay for themselves in another year, a result which I consider remarkable. I will be pleased to reply to anyone desiring the actual proof of above.

Yours very truly,

Signed, JOHN SCOTT.

P. S. — Kindly book my order for another boiler. I will let you know later when to deliver it.

Iron Gutters will do well to
from Patent No. 616,781
George M. Garland:

Another object of the invention is to so construct the gutter that the devices for fastening the gutter to supports will be below the weather-face of the gutter, thus avoiding perforations of the weather-face and consequent liability to leakage.

The nails, screws, or other fastening devices are passed through the drop flanges and into the lower ends of the roof-beams, so that these fastening devices for connecting the valley-gutter to the roof structure are below the weather-faces of the valley-gutter, and consequently the weather-faces of the valley-gutter need not be perforated, insuring against leakage.

EASTER AND AFTER.

Don't fret if you have a few plants left over at Easter. Some things you can cut and introduce into boxes of cut flowers, and others will come in handy for decorations. It will do you no good, however, to have small remnants or half-faded looking stock hanging around your store. Don't throw it away; send it to some charitable institution. Many sensitive and conceited florists when they have lots of stock left on an occasion like this hide it and pretend they have sold out; it's foolish to do so, for many a good sale can be made after the rush is over.

Monday morning early the window should be washed and store cleaned thoroughly, all the unsalable plants put where they will not be seen in the back of the store, and whatever good stock you have left should be semi-carelessly arranged in the window or about the store; no need for fancy displays, but there is for cleanliness and the general appearance of having everything neat and fresh. The best of your customers are apt to visit you Easter Monday to arrange for some decoration, and nothing will please them better than fresh flowers and a clean store.

We forgot, in last week's notes, to say a word for your help. See to it that they get something to eat; if you cannot afford to let them go out for meals have it brought to them; don't be inhuman and forget reason in your mad chase after profits. Good, intelligent help is getting scarce in the flower business; if you have any respect it.

There will be a plentiful crop of weddings and other festivities from now on, and it behooves you to do your best on every occasion be it great or small. You needn't be "up-to-date"; you can be far ahead of it by leaving trashy subterfuges alone, and giving the people good and natural looking decorations. We happen not to be of that species which can tell you how, but not be able to do it ourselves. At the recent exhibition of the American Rose Society at New York we arranged the mantel and the mirror decorations, winning first prizes for both. We are sorry it was impossible to give you illustrations of either; our designs were simple, but you are sure to win anywhere with them if they are done properly.

Get a good, long climbing rose, with plenty of foliage, have a stout wire branched tree made (just a simple long steel wire any length desired, with a few irregular steel wires soldered on to it), put the end in the pot, fasten the top to the mirror or mantel and then tie the rose branches to the wires and make it appear as if growing there. Don't have it formal, make a branch hang outwards, another across the mirror, one long, and a little from the bottom, and so on. The idea is not to have a curtain or frame or anything that appears the work of a mechanic; you must copy nature and make this look like a naturally growing climbing rose. Get some of the green glasses, such as Reed & Keller or Kift offers for sale (those detached and with holes to be hung by are the only ones suitable for this work), fill them with water and tie them at irregular intervals on the tree; into these put your roses in a manner suitable to the occasion; wire a few blooms and attach them to the end of the branches, and here and there between the glasses. Only one colored rose can be used; nothing must be seen but flower and foliage.

A good vase of roses can be put at one side of the mantel shelf, some of the blooms falling over, but a spray of growing foliage should also be across the shelf. Crepe papers, ribbons or any tom-foolery must not be put near this work. Wash the pot clean, and even if you cannot cover it with small rose plants, it will not detract from your work. It isn't necessary for you to cover up every piece of woodwork on the frame; pay attention to your own design, use no other kind of green.

You must create the effect of a beautiful climbing rose in full bloom. If you have no Ramblers you can manufacture one out of small plants, or even cut foliage, which must be well watered before using. This method of decorating is suitable for all occasions and is adaptable to all forms and places—arches, wedding arbors, frieze work, etc., etc. It is the style of the future, it encourages a greater use of plants and flowers, less artificial humbug. You might think you can improve on what you see in nature sometimes, but you only mistake. There is more beauty in her extreme simplicity than in your far-fetched and nondescript works; recognize this and succeed.

There is a woeful lack of the right foliage in basket and in general work where roses predominate. If you have hybrid roses in pots soak them well and stick a few extra roses in them. A design like this in a jardiniere or pot basket can be made prettier than a basket of cut roses. There are many times when it pays to cut pot grown plants for use as foliage in vases of roses. More pot grown roses should be used in baskets and in general design work instead of smilax, asparagus, or foreign greens.

There will be a vast amount of flowering plants used in decorations this spring, because there will be quite a few, particularly lilies, left over from Easter. When you go to decorate a room be careful of the general effect, don't kill the beauty of some gem of a picture, vase or tapestry by placing near it loud crepe papers, ribbons or jarring colors in flowers, even. Just show that a florist can be an artist, and in the respecting and appreciating of other arts, make your own more beautiful by proper application. A spray of roses might be permissible over one corner or at the bottom of some fine picture or statue, a bunch or garland cleanliness lend charms to man and his works. They are badly needed.

There will be an immense quantity of pansies planted out this spring. The window-box, vase and outdoor ornamentations are becoming immeasurably popular in New York. A great many are being put out already and you can do a great deal to encourage this line of work. Get them out as soon as you can, people like to have them in for Easter. Mix the colors yellow chenille. Purple should never be used. The design shown was yellow chenille twisted around the wires and the inner frame was of yellow roses (Perle des Jardins). The outer part was of Bride roses and a few gardenias. A small silk Irish flag with a cluster of forget-me-nots was attached to the center of the strings.

The design was made by request of the Irish Society of New York to be sent to a prominent member's funeral. For Irish societies or patriotic individuals it is a most appropriate design, but be careful to get it correct. There are several varieties of harps, but only one suitable in this case. Made up in strong colors, it is also appropriate for festive occasions. People are particular about their national emblems, and it's easy to be right. IVERA.

EEL-WORMS IN ROSES.

I mail you a diseased rose plant under separate cover. I have lost one bench from this cause. The roses seemed to be in a healthy condition, but inside of one week they would shed their foliage; this would start in the middle of the bench and continue the entire length of the bench, while some few plants on the outer edges of the bench escaped.

The soil at the time was on the dry side. I know I have some spider, but don't think that it is the cause. Can you tell me the trouble and the cause of it? L. C.

The rose plant has been examined and the roots are found to be galled, and nematodes in all stages of development are in abundance. This is cause enough for the sickness of the whole plant. The premature falling of the leaves is due in part to the insects that are sapping their vitality. Such plants are beyond cure and should be burned root and branch.

BYRON D. HALSTED.

CYCAS REVOLUTA.

A subscriber asks for some points on starting these important plants. The dormant stems when first received are destitute of roots. They should be put into pots very little larger than the diameter of the stem. Drain the pots, using a turfy loam, with a fifth or so of well rotted manure. Pot firmly and plunge the pots in some material where the temperature is 75 to 80 degrees. The temperature of the house should not be below 65 degrees at any time, but it is the bottom heat, to produce root action, that is the essential part of the operation.

When they have made a growth of leaves and you are sure that they have made roots, the bottom heat can be dispensed with, but for the first year they should have a warm, shaded bench. When first potted they want a good watering, but till growth starts and they make roots they will not of common greens never—that would be desecration, an evidence of ignorance, and it is the knowledge of what is proper that will always keep successful decorators in the minority.

People may buy their flowers and plants from fakirs or "cheap Johns," but when they want particular work done they generally go to the florist with a reputation. It is not wise to be cheap if they come to you; the quality of your work makes them pay for it, for cheapness is not always appreciated.

There is one important thing to remember. When you send men to decorate a house don't let them go and take possession of the place, and act as if they owned it. A florist should never assume the demeanor of a "tough." Politeness, carefulness and well or group them. Ivy properly planted in boxes or vases now will serve for summer filling, also.

IVERA.

AN IRISH HARP.

The harp design shown was made by the writer recently in a great hurry. The frame was as near as we could get to the facsimile of an ancient Irish harp, but it is faulty; the top beam is a little too short and the frontal bar does not curve enough, yet it is better than any we have seen illustrated. Floral harps as a rule are too much like a triangle; there is no shape to them.

The real Irish harp is a very beautiful design when properly made. The strings should be of gold and silver twisted tinsel braid; if not, then of want any more watering than just to keep them moderately moist.

In the case of established plants that have lost all their leaves by some abuse it is best to shake them out of the tubs they are in and after trimming off all the dead roots start them going in a smaller pot or tub and treat them as you do the dormant stems. When healthy and furnished with plenty of leaves the cypripedium wants plenty of water, so it should have drainage, a rich, coarse soil, and, if confined to a small tub, liquid manure will much help them. A cypripedium will stand a good deal of abuse when well established, but should never be sold to a customer until thoroughly well furnished with roots. W. S.

FOUR GEMS OF ORCHIDS.

A great deal is being written nowadays about new roses, carnations and other flowers, and 'twould seem that all the floricultural energy was being devoted to the production of gigantic specimens of those flowers. The quiet, delicate flowers we know as orchids depend for popularity on intelligence and refinement and it is a pleasure to see that this class of flowers are yearly becoming more appreciated. The demand for choice flowers is not a mere season fancy. Orchids are wanted all the year round and the quantity used in New York alone is something enormous. Specialists have adopted new methods of cultivation and finer blooms were never seen than those supplied to the American market.

A visit to the extensive collection of Messrs. Lager & Hurrell, at Summit, N. J., is always of the greatest interest to lovers of orchids. There is always something new or rare to be seen there. This firm has produced many grand cattleya hybrids. The illustration shown is of a group of new ones growing in their cattleya houses in the early part of March. No. 1 is Cattleya Trianae Summitensis, a charming variety originated by Arthur Herrington, Madison, N. J. No. 2, Cattleya Trianae var., a splendid variety, sepals, petals and lip white, lightly suffused with the most delicate shade of lilac. No. 3, Cattleya Trianae var., sepals and petals of a beautiful light lilac, color of lip rosy lilac, large and open, a very fine and desirable variety. No. 4, also Cattleya Trianae var., sepals and petals dark lilac, the latter with a large longitudinal blotch of purple extending from the tips half way down toward the base, lip intense purple. This is a gem among splashed varieties. The plant in the center, not numbered, is a seedling cattleya coming into flower for the first time. These grand flowers, in addition to many more, past and to come, have originated and are growing at Lager & Hurrell's establishment at Summit, N. J.

J. I. DONLAN.

PLANT RUSTS.

BY PROF. BYRON D. HALSTED.

[Read before the Massachusetts Horticultural Society.]

There are at least three rusts that have made themselves prominent among ornamental plants during the past few years. A leading rust in the flower garden is that of the hollyhock (Puccinia malvacearum Mont.), which came into this country in 1890, and spread with remarkable rapidity and fatality. It develops upon all parts of the hollyhock as the leaves, stem and floral parts, causing them all to sicken and die. This rust is a good illustration of those that have only the teleuto form of the spore and the sporidia that grow directly from it. In other words, the cluster cup and uredo stages are omitted, and the first stage becomes the last, so far as spore development upon the host is concerned. The great rate at which the fungus spreads is to be accounted for largely because it hibernates as the living mycelium in the hollyhock, the young leaves of which exist as a rosette through the winter. As the warm, moist weather comes the orange patches upon the foliage enlarge and quickly develop spores that almost at once form the sporidia which rapidly spread the rust to other parts of the hollyhock. Another observation that may be made in connection with the hollyhock rust is its scarcity at certain times. For example, in 1898 there was an abundance of hollyhock rust, while a year later there was almost none upon plants badly rusted the year before. It may be said in explanation that the conditions were unfavorable for the disease, and the health of the plants was restored. Good growing weather with no excess of moisture is the best ally of the victim, and if it comes in time, many kinds of plants will recover from an attack that might be otherwise disastrous.

Another new rust is that of the carnation (Uromyces Caryophyllinus Schr.), which reached us, probably from Europe in imported stock, in 1891, and is still in evidence in nearly all parts of the country. The conditions here are quite different from the open garden; for heat and moisture and a more or less confined air in the greenhouse supply the surroundings favorable for the growth and spread of the rust. The spray from the hose in watering, for example, is one of the best means of carrying the spores from a diseased to a healthy plant. The experiments that have been made with this disease are somewhat limited, but they go to show that preventive measures are better than attempted cures. From the fact that the carnation is largely an indoor plant and propagated by cuttings, it goes without saying that the stock should be healthy from which cuttings are taken, and no rusted plants should be introduced into a house previously free from rust. One rusted plant under the circumstances of greenhouse growth may be ample to inoculate a whole bed, and this accounts for the sudden outbreak of the rust in houses hundreds or thousands of miles apart. Carnation growers are gradually acquiring a knowledge of the susceptibility of varieties and are finding some sorts in this respect much more valuable than others.

The latest claimant for our attention among the greenhouse rusts is that of the chrysanthemum. As yet the advent of this importation from Europe has not been traced back of 1896, when it was found by Mr. Hastings of Fitchburg, Mass., and reported by Dr. Stone in the ninth annual report of your experiment station. From foreign correspondence it is gathered that it was rampant in France and then spread throughout England, where it was very destructive, particularly in 1898. With us it has increased quite rapidly during the past three years, and during the last one it has become decidedly troublesome. Up to the present time only the uredo the carnation. The two rusts are, however, very distinct, belonging to different genera of fungi, and not transmissible from one host plant to the other.

In the treatment of our subject we have made a few selections of typical rust plants from widely separated host plants, and have endeavored to bring before the hearer some of the more important points connected with one of the leading groups of destructive fungi. We have seen that rusts infest herbs, shrubs and trees. The forests are not exempt from them, and even the giant pines are destroyed by them. The blackberry and raspberry rust is one of the most serious pests within the tissues of root and stem it is out of reach of spraying compounds. It goes without any argument that all such rusted plants need to be dug up and destroyed root and branch, and the earlier this is done the less likelihood there will be of the infection spreading by means of the spores. The burn heap is one of the best adjuncts of a well equipped horticultural establishment. It excels greatly the rubbish pile. Ashes may be blown about by the winds, and no serious inoculations follow from them.

The "seed treatment," so called, for the prevention of diseases in grain fields, while of great value with the smuts, is not effective with the rusts. The oat or wheat smut spores are produced in the grain itself and healthy grains become smeared and dusted with the spores. The last resort in all cases when rust is suspected is to furnish the best possible conditions for the growth of the crop, bearing in mind that vigilance is especially demanded when the foe is at hand. Any neglect, as lack of light, air, food, or water, or a surplus of the same, may engender a weakness that will cause the plants to fall a victim at the first opportunity.

CARNATION GOV. ROOSEVELT.

The dark crimson carnation raised by Mr. C. W. Ward and given the popular name of Governor Roosevelt, as exhibited at Buffalo received the full number of points for form and in the opinion of the judges it was perfect in that respect, or at least the most perfect of any carnation up to date. Opinions may differ as to form, but in this case there was but one opinion with three men.

Roosevelt is a perfectly round flower but not so finely defined as to tire. Its edge is nicely broken up with fimbriated petals. It is high and full but not crowded. Each succeeding whorl of petals is slightly shorter than the under one and the edges of the petals being cut or lacinated the flower has a full rich appearance without the crowding of the petals of some varieties or the stiffness of others. It had in the judges' estimation the right number of petals to make a full pleasing flower, a form that when looked at for a few moments became still more pleasing to the eye.

Two of the very finest carnations yet sent out are so perfect in outline that you wish they were not so regular, and when well grown their regularity gives you the feeling of coldness, grand flowers as they are. I allude to White Cloud and Olympia. Other fine varieties are marred by an overcrowding of petals which detracts from their grace and the feeling they produce I would pronounce "uncomfortableness."

Governor Roosevelt is not the only carnation of fine form by any means, but the qualities I have mentioned make it in my opinion the nearest to perfection we have yet reached. It has a splendid broad calyx, which allows form has been met with upon American plants and therefore it is impossible to be sure of the species. While this is interesting from the standpoint of the botanist it may be of no great economic importance. However, if the other forms are associated with the dandelion or similar related common wild species the bearing of this knowledge upon the checking of the rust is at once apparent. This disease is so recent with us that there is very little in the line of remedies that has been determined experimentally. It being a greenhouse plant propagated by cuttings, the precautionary measures are practically the same as with to growers of bush fruits. It shows itself in early spring, dwarfing the cane and ruining the foliage. When such an infected plant is cut to the ground the new shoots springing from the stock will also become rusted like the first growth of the year. Actual microscopic examination of the tissue of the root demonstrates the presence of the perennial mycelium. With these facts before us it is not strange that the multitudes of experiments made to eradicate the disease by spraying the plants result in failure. The Bordeaux or other mixture when upon healthy plants may help to prevent the spread of the disease; but when once its petals to fully expand without bursting. Of its habit of growth or productiveness I know scarcely anything, but as I understand it will not be sent out till 1902 there will be ample opportunity to learn of those great essentials.

FROM OUR ENGLISH EXCHANGES.

Gardeners' Magazine.

SWEET PEAS.—Substantial progress is being made towards celebrating the introduction of the sweet pea into Great Britain 200 years ago. This celebration is to be held on July 20 and 21, at the Crystal Palace, Sydenham, and will take the form of a grand exhibition of sweet peas shown in bunches, in vases, in pots, in pans, in baskets, in bouquets, in wreaths, in table decorations, and in other ways that may suggest themselves to the gardener and florist; at the same time a conference will be held, at which papers will be read and discussed.

POT ROSES.—Constant turning around, and slightly moving the surface soil does the plants far more good than many would deem possible. This frequent handling of the plants also enables us to note where one is over dry or too wet as compared with the remainder; a rather important point where so many plants are grown. Nothing enables one to so quickly determine the tone condition of a plant as handling it.

ABUTILONS FOR BEDDING.—During recent years fine foliaged plants have been used extensively in summer bedding arrangement, and those abutilons having variegated leafage have had a fair share of attention at the hands of the gardener, and been placed in the front rank of this group.

PENZANCE BRIERS.—The Penzance sweet-briers require hardly any pruning, as they would be entirely out of character if cut hard back. Thin out the growths somewhat, removing the weakest first. Recently planted specimens should be cut back to within a foot of the ground to ensure strong growth from the base. A fairly rich soil will suit these briars and enable them to make good growth.

CLEMATIS AS A BEDDING PLANT. The clematis is always beautiful no matter where planted or how trained. As a climber it is deservedly popular, but it is when planted against old ruins or in the wild garden that its beauty is best displayed. For planting in beds in the flower garden, as a permanency the clematis are wonderfully effective. Thus planted, their elegant form and extreme beauty are shown off to advantage. In planting clematis it should be borne in mind that they are gross feeders, hence the necessity of applying some well-rotted manure to the bed both at the time of planting and as an annual winter dressing. A sound loam incorporated with a goodly portion of manure best suits the clematis; at the same time they are not very fastidious as to soils. Where the natural staple is of a light, poor description, then means must be taken to ameliorate it by taking out, to a depth of two feet, the natural soil and replacing it with loam, mortar rubble, and charred refuse. The latter ingredient may be worked in and about the roots of the plants at planting time. Strong specimens should in all cases be procured in order that they may the quicker produce an effect and cover the allotted space. A trellis of iron or wood in convex form should be erected over the bed, and the shoots as they advance in growth during the summer should be drawn through and over this. During dry summer weather abundance of liquid manure should be supplied alternately with clear water. A small quantity of some good fertilizer is occasionally used, with highly beneficial results. In the month of February a slight thinning of the shoots should take place, afterwards disposing the remaining ones evenly over the trellis. In selecting varieties it is advisable to give preference to those which are robust in constitution, as the Jackmani, patens, and viticella types.

SNOW EFFECT IN TABLE DECORATION.—The decoration, briefly stated, consisted of handsome birch branches and foliage of various kinds, all moistened and then freely dusted over with flour. A base of clay is used, and into this the whitened material is fixed as tastefully as possible, and when all is finished, another dusting of flour is given, finishing off with a free sprinkling of powdered glass to produce the glistening effect of frost and snow.

SCARLET VARIETY OF PRIMULA OBCONICA.—It is of interest to observe that while Mr. Shea has been busily engaged in the hybridization of Primula obconica with P. sinensis, the continental raisers have been endeavoring to obtain high colored forms of the first-named species by selective process. A so-called scarlet variety has been figured in Revue Horticole, and with reference to it Monsieur P. de Vilmorin writes: "The new, large, scarlet variety marked with purple is the commencement of a new era in the evolution of P. obconica. We were already far from the original type; the plant, having lost none of its hardness or of its profuseness of bloom, had produced larger and still larger flowers, sometimes fringed or fimbriated on the edges, and variable in color from rose to pure white. It now appears to move in a contrary direction, that is to say, towards the darker tints of its primitive color. Without being too presumptuous we anticipate that in the near future it will be able to hold its own with the Chinese primrose. It has already the advantage over the latter of being more healthful, more hardy and floriferous, carrying its clusters of bloom on longer stems, with the foliage better separated.

FORCING ACACIAS.—The London markets are liberally supplied with flowering sprays of Acacia dealbata and one or two other species that come from the south of France two or three months before the trees bloom naturally in that section. Of course, this means that a forcing process has to be resorted to. The method adopted is extremely simple. Large casks are provided, and each one is fitted with a latticework stage fixed about midway between the bottom and top. The branches are cut from the trees and at once placed in upright metal or earthenware vases filled with water, and taken to the cask and arranged rather close together in two tiers, one on the bottom and the other on the stage. For maintaining the requisite temperature a boiler is provided very similar in form to an ordinary still, and this is heated by a petroleum stove. A pipe is taken from the apex of the boiler to the interior of the cask, which it enters just below the middle stage, and curves downwards until the end nearly touches the bottom. It is said that by this arrangement the steam from the pipes does not condense upon the branches, and a temperature ranging from 75 to 85 degrees is readily maintained. In cutting the branches for forcing care is taken to select those bearing flowers in the most advanced state of development.

NEW YORK.

It is difficult at this writing to say what Easter trade will be, but the prospects are very good. Stock is plentiful, prices promise to be fair, and all seems ready for an unprecedented business. Styles will not vary very much from those of other years. All endeavor appears to be concentrated on quality. Fine weather will surely cause a greater use of cut flowers, and as for plants, the sales will be enormous. At present it looks as if there will be no cause to grumble from those having good fresh stock, but (and there the shoe will always pinch) there are many who are shipping "preserved" stock into the market, and they will growl the loudest.

The general plant season is opening up very good and we hear the best kind of reports from seedsmen, nurserymen and geranium growers.

Cleary's auction of dormant Irish roses on Friday last was the greatest on record. Talk about your sentiment! Anything Irish, or, for that matter, "green," goes well these times, because Irish blood flows freely on both sides at the Transvaal.

We hear many funny stories here by way of London, Canada, and the Liffey anent the wearing of shamrocks on "Paddy's Day"; yes, they're awful funny. We wore a bit ourselves, but it was dipped in ink.

But there, Cleary wants you to hurry up for your space at the great convention show, and Charlie Weathered wants your name in the gem of a souvenir he is preparing, so write them both at once. And ye bowlers, oh! ye sports of Flora's kingdom, why don't you enter for the greatest of bowling tournaments? Chairman Roehrs is anxious. Only four teams have so far declared their intentions, and he expects twelve more to do so; let them do so at once. Alleys must be engaged shortly, and the committee on sports wants to have some idea of what will be necessary. We see many large scores reported from St. Louis, Denver and other villages; why don't they enter for the wagon-load of prizes which will surely be offered on this great occasion. The Hews Pottery Co. is the latest to offer anything in their ornamental catalogue for a bowler's prize.

The regular meeting of the Florists' Club was held on Monday night. President O'Mara presided. On account of Easter the meeting was very large, but it was fairly business-like, and many important matters were disposed of. It was decided that instead of a trophy a $100 cash prize be given the society whose members won the greatest number of prizes at the horticultural exhibition next August. This, in addition to Ex-President Plumb's prize of one or two hundred dollars for the most successful exhibitor, should bring out some fine exhibits. On the other hand, we hear that many prominent gardeners from distant points will not exhibit their finest or largest plants, because medals, be they silver or gold, will not pay the heavy expenses incurred in transporting plants from a distance. There is much to reasonably consider in this. The gardeners don't like to run the risk of responsibility in damaging their stock; if the gentleman orders it, it is different; but how many will?

We were forgetting the club. Well, the several committees reported progress, that is, except the lethargic entertainment committee; they had the usual excuse to offer, and that was all. Several new members were elected and a committee was appointed to consider the best means of inducing old members who had left the club to rejoin it once more. It is thought best to have a good army here when the French come from Milwaukee and the Dutch come from Buffalo in August next.

The Koffman collection of orchids at Walden, N. Y., are to be sold to liquidate the business. J. B. Bloomingdal, 78 Fifth avenue, will give you particulars.

Edward Jansen, the well known basket manufacturer, reports splendid Easter business. On the occasion of the Rapid Transit celebrations here he made some very pretty favors, consisting of small baskets, picks and shovels, which were filled with flowers, for the dinner of the Allegro Bowling Club, of which he is a member. The affair was given in one of the banquet halls of the famous Liederkrantz.

The new set of balls won by the florists' bowling team in the recent tournament with Flatbush and Hoboken are very fine. The boys are going to use them in all matches. The scores made tonight were:

The Market.

No exciting developments along the firing line during the past week. A steady pull of funeral work has carried away everything in the cheaper lines of stock, but there has been a tendency to a surplus in better grades of roses and all grades of red ones. My prophecy concerning a fuller supply of carnations was but partially fulfilled, as the increase was very slight. Perhaps it is so near Easter that the growers are beginning to hold the cut back a little.

Prices on Beauties have ranged from 4 to 35 cents each; Brunners up to about 25 cents; Jacks to 10 cents, and Meteors to 8 cents; Brides and Maids from 4 to 16 cents; a few Perles at 4 and 6 cents; Gontiers at 2 and 4 cents. Of course, there are always a few other kinds somewhere in the city, the price being regulated by the laws of supply and demand. Kaiserins are beginning to come.

Salesmen have had a firm hold of the pink market all the week, talking 5 and 6 cents at times, but usually closing sales at 3 and 4. Many buyers will go without rather than pay more.

Violets became very independent at the last of the week and speculated in prices, juggling arithmetic all the way from 35 to 75 cents on the closing day. Lilies moving quite freely and practically the whole crop sold for near delivery. Daffodils and poeticus quite plentiful at 2 cents now; tulips, 3 and 4. Odds and ends of everything come into play well at fair prices. Some good ten weeks' stocks coming in. Hyacinths are being used more as a potted plant now. A little stringency in the supply of hardy ferns for cheap green. Asparagus of two kinds seems in good supply at regular rates. Smilax climbing into favor at $2 and $3 per dozen.

Orders on everything are being taken for end of next week at about a 50 per cent raise on late prices. Retail stores are getting their feet placed for rush of trade, many obtaining temporary addition of room as usual. J. W. Newman, down on the business end of Brattle street, annexes the other half of his store permanently, his increase of trade at his new stand demanding it.

Notes.

Last week's item did not set E. N. Peirce & Sons' lily crop high enough. They set 28,000 bulbs.

George W. Marshall, at Woodlawn, Everett, Mass., narrowly escaped a serious fire in his large store. A lamp in one of the huge incubators in the basement was in some way tipped over, and before the flames were extinguished several valuable plants in the store above were destroyed.

PILLOW AND CROWN.

The accompanying engraving is from a photograph of a pillow and crown arranged by the Shanahan Florist Co., San Francisco, Cal., for the Phelan funeral.

The flowers in the pillow are white orchids and roses, with asparagus and smilax, and the crown was made of Flora Hill carnations and adiantum ferns.

PHILADELPHIA.

Various Items.

At this writing it looks very much as though the dull season of Lent had run its race in this city, as the storekeepers inform us that business has been rushing all week, there being a big demand for all kinds of cut flowers. The biggest run was on carnations, the demand exceeding the supply. Upon asking some of the representative storekeepers in this city as to what kind of an Easter they expected, the reply was without any deliberation: "All we ask for is good weather and we will do the rest." From present indications they expect to exceed all previous years. A great many of the growers have all their stock sold, to be delivered Easter week.

Prices: Beauties, $1 to $6 dozen; Brides, Maids, Kaiserins and Golden Gates, $5 to $12; Morgans and Meteors, $5 to $10; Liberty, $10 to $25; Gontiers, $3 to $4; Perles, $4 to $8; cattleyas, $50; dendrobium, $10 to $25; carnations, ordinary $2, fancy $3 to $5; hyacinths, $3 to $4; valley, $3 to $4; mignonette, $3 to $4; tulips, $4; sweet peas, $1.50 to $2.50; daffodils, single $1 to $3, double $4; violets, single 30 to 50 cents, doubles 50 cents to $1; callas, $10 to $15; Harrisii, $10 to $12; asparagus, 50 cents; adiantum, $1.50 per 100; smilax, 20 to 30 cents.

We had for our visitors the past week G. R. Clark & Co., Scranton, Pa.; Lloyd Blick, Norfolk, Va.; B. F. Barr, Lancaster, Pa., and Charles Fremd, Rye, N. Y.

Club Notes.

The Florist Club meeting on Tuesday, April 3, was not largely attended. Benj. Dorrance read a paper on "What the American Rose Society Is Doing for the Queen of Flowers." A discussion followed, which was mostly a repetition of that of two months ago, viz., as to why no more than four varieties of roses were grown. No satisfactory explanation was reached. The growers said it was the store man's fault, and the store man said it was the fault of the grower.

The Floral Exchange had a vase of blooms of their new rose Queen of Edgely on exhibition. The committee on exhibits reported it a valuable addition to the list of forcing roses. R.

CHICAGO.

Club Meeting.

At the meeting of the Florists' Club last Friday evening there was a discussion on Easter plants, and the general opinion of the retailers was that there was a splendid opening for growers who would devote more time and attention to the producing of high-grade Easter plants.

The majority thought that, aside from white carnations, the supply of cut flowers for Easter would be ample. All expected a splendid Easter business.

One new member was elected and considerable routine business transacted.

The Market.

At present there is sufficient to meet demands in all lines, except white carnations. And there is a tendency toward an excess in bulbous stock. Large quantities of out-door grown daffodils and jonquils are being received from southern Illinois.

For Easter the indications are there will be a good fair supply, probably enough to about meet demand. A very large number of advance orders have been placed and these will undoubtedly all be well taken care of. Only late comers may possibly be cut short on some items, and that is most likely to be white carnations.

Several dealers note signs of stock being held back and it looks as though the same old mistake was going to be made by some growers, with the result that flowers that could have been disposed of to good advantage if sent in when ready may have to be jobbed out to the fakirs when they do arrive.

In roses there promises to be a very satisfactory supply, though probably not enough Beauties. In carnations several dealers predict a shortage, especially in white. An exception is Walter Heffron, manager for E. C. Amling. He looks for a satisfactory supply in all colors and says they will have about 60,000 carnations for Easter trade.

As to lilies, it is practically all guess work. Mr. E. E. Pieser, of Kennicott Bros. Co., takes about as hopeful a view as anyone, believing that supply and demand will about equal each other. They have already booked an unusually large number of advance orders, but expect to take care of all orders, with the possible exception of some white carnations.

Of bulbous stuff there is danger of a surplus. Indications are that there will be tulips "to burn" and immense quantities of daffodils and hyacinths. Callas seem to be fairly plenty and these may help out the lily situation.

Peter Reinberg and Wietor Bros. expect a fair cut of roses and carnations and think will fill all orders fairly full, except possibly on Beauties and carnations.

Bassett & Washburn will have a big cut of tea roses and a good deal of other stock, but are unable to promise much as regards Beauties and white carnations.

E. H. Hunt has booked a big lot of advance orders, but expects to take care of them all.

McKellar & Winterson say there will be plenty of Harrisii and lots of tulips and hyacinths, with a fair supply of other stock, though possibly a shortage in shipping grades. They have been doing a big business in Easter Plants, shipping many times the number sent out last year. The lily plants were shipped in barrels, six to a barrel, with express paper over the top, and they went through in very good shape.

Various Items.

Mr. P. J. Hauswirth has removed to 223 Michigan avenue, where he has more room and a more conveniently arranged store. He is still in the Auditorium Hotel, but on the Michigan avenue side and in the part known as the Annex.

The preliminary premium list of the Horticultural Society of Chicago for the annual exhibition to be held November 6 to 10 next has been issued. Copies may be had by addressing W. N. Rudd, secretary, room 1002, 185 Dearborn street.

Mr. and Mrs. H. B. Beatty, Pittsburgh, spent last Saturday in the city. They were on their way home from a week's visit in New Orleans.

Mr. Charles H. Fisk has sold his retail store at 169 Wabash avenue to Miss H. Miller, who will take possession May 1. On that date Mr. Fisk will enter the employ of Mr. A. L. Randall, the wholesale florist. Mr. Fisk has long been anxious to get back to the wholesale business.

The bowlers will play next Wednesday night at Anson's the second half of the eight games that will determine the composition of the team to meet the visitors from St. Louis.

At the first session of the new city council last Monday evening there was a large display of flowers.

At the funeral of a board of trade man this week one bunch of roses contained 150 American Beauties, and a bunch of Harrisii lilies contained 200 blooms.

ST. LOUIS.

Outlook for Easter Trade.

Every indication points to an active Easter trade, and from the advance sales reported by the growers, large Harrisii in pots are going to be scarce, but those that are in are very fine.

The cut flower stock promises to be fairly abundant, but should the orders come in as they have been, there certainly will be none too much.

The wholesalers report that the demand from the outside will be great and that the shipping trade will probably be heavier than ever.

The home trade has been quite heavy the last two weeks and stock has been cleaned up nearly every day. Funeral work the past week called for an enormous lot of stuff, which was followed on Monday by an unusually heavy demand, caused by the "openings" of several large department stores, and prices made a small advance over the week previous. Easter prices will take effect Wednesday and the quotations will be found below.

First-class American Beauties will be scarce and the price will range from $1 to $6 per dozen; Meteors, Maids and Brides, from $4 to $10; only the very select ones will bring the top figure; Perles and Woottons, from $4 to $6, and no doubt plenty of them will be on hand. Meteors are not as good as they have been, as they are off color, and there are a great many bullheads among them. All other roses are of good quality and fine in color.

Carnations are and will be in great demand. Large quantities of them are coming in, but the demand has been so great that it seems almost impossible for the wholesalers to get enough of them. All kinds sell. Whites have had the call, with Daybreak next. Scott is also a good seller, in fact, any old kind will sell nowadays. The price asked is from $2 to $5; the latter figure is for the best fancy stock.

Bulb stock is quite plentiful and of fine quality. Romans and paper whites are $2 to $3; Dutch hyacinths, $3 to $4; valley, very fine, $2 to $4; callas, $10 and $12.50; Harrisii is scarce and will no doubt be up to $15 this week. Violets are still a glut and lots of southern stock coming up, with very little sale for it; home-grown sells at 20 and 30 cents; southern stock 10 cents per 100; sweet peas, $1 to $2; smilax will be $12.50 per 100 strings, with plenty of it on hand.

The plant trade at Union market the past week has been excellent and prices good.

The tree planting trade has been very brisk the past week. C. C. Sanders reports that he has never been so busy as this spring with trees, shrubs and evergreens.

C. Young & Son Co. report good plant and seed shipping trade, and from orders that come in this early it looks as though their business will be almost doubled this season. Will Young, who is now the outside man, reports large orders for planting out just as soon as the weather will permit.

Henry Johan, of Collinsville, Ill., was a visitor the past week.

J. G. Knoll, of South St. Louis, is cutting the best Beauties that come to this market just now.

John Steidel, of Central, is still cutting the best carnations and violets that come in.

Emil Schray reports that he will be in tip-top shape with Easter plants, and that everything will be in good time.

Frank Fillmore's Brides and Maids are hard to beat at the present time. His Easter plants are also in good shape. Frank is well fixed for a large Easter trade.

The Beyer Bros. report that they also are in fine shape for Easter and that Harrisii will be the only scarce article with them this season. All other stuff is fine and plenty of it.

The club meeting which will be held on the 19th should be a banner one and President Ammann would like to see every member present, so don't forget to come.

The West End florists report that the indications are that the Easter trade will be better than ever, and some have plenty of orders ahead this early. They hope that stock will not be too scarce, so that they can fill all their orders in good shape.

Bowling.

The attendance was very slim at the bowling club Monday night. Charlie Kuehn was in fine trim, making 227 in the second game. The other members were all too busy to do much rolling until after the Easter week. The scores of the three that attended were as follows:

	1	2	3	4	5	Tot.	Av.

BALTIMORE.

Personal and Trade Notes.

The opening on Saturday, April 7, of the new building of Posner Bros., one of our large department store firms, made quite an event in local florist circles. The structure, which is imposing and substantial, is especially adapted to producing good effects in the hands of the apt decorator, and to say that Samuel Feast & Sons were entrusted with its embellishment is equivalent to declaring that the work was done with skill and taste. The massing of palms, foliage and flowering plants was effective, and the festooning of stairways and arches with southern smilax and other green stuff gave a thoroughly holiday appearance to the edifice. The occasion was availed of by friends of the firm to send many floral creations. In fact, it may be said that nearly every store in town had orders. The horseshoe of hoped-for good luck was largely in predominance, but many wreaths and baskets—and one floral terrapin—were sent in, of varying degrees of beauty and finish, some, alas! succumbing to the drying atmosphere and wilting by noon, at which hour they were under inspection by your correspondent.

Business for the week up to this writing (April 9) has been unusually active, and prices well maintained, roses and carnations at no time being in excess of the demand; in fact, carnations have been generally short of supply.

Andrew Andersen, of Govanstown, is about erecting two houses, each 100 feet long. One for American Beauty roses and the other for smilax, both of which he will hereafter make his specialties.

William Madsen is cutting Beauties of fine flower, foliage and stems, fully maintaining the reputation he has so long had for successful production of this splendid variety.

No place we are acquainted with has been so much improved within the past year as Frederick C. Bauer's, near Govanstown, formerly the Hantske place. The greenhouses have been renovated, a water system established, with elevated tank and hot-air pumping engine, a dwelling erected and the grounds graded and put in order. Mr. Bauer is full of energy and has varied experience, having been long in the business, his last position being as foreman for Isaac H. Moss. His specialties are carnations, callas and violets, all of which are well done. He is a practical minded cultivator, who has a capacity for thinking out every problem of his business and for achieving results.

Mr. Moss' place has been a nursery for bright young gardeners. One of his department foremen, Thomas Stevenson, sends in the finest violets which come to the city and is regarded as a wide-awake and progressive all-around cultivator. William Price, another of his young men, recently left him to take charge of the plant houses of Mrs. T. Harrison Garrett, and under his attentive care their contents are said to be making a very creditable showing.

The young plants of the Liberty rose which are being received by purchasers in this vicinity are much larger and more vigorous of growth than is usual with new introductions. We hear of one thrifty florist who bought one hundred plants, potted them up and got enough cuttings to increase his stock to the present time to two hundred and fifty.

DENVER, COLO.

Various Items.

The Gallup Floral Co., now one of the oldest establishments of its kind in Denver, have a most attractive store, connected with a convenient conservatory, on the corner of Fifteenth street and Cleveland place.

The business is conducted by some of the best men in the trade, viz.: Messrs. Lewis, Gallup, Schultz and Emerich, and although they have to depend largely on other growers for their cut flowers, the windows are always in fine trim.

A large amount of flower and vegetable seed is neatly arranged in the center of the store in pyramid shape, inviting the customers to purchase. One of the wings of the conservatory is stocked with palms, ferns and Selaginella Emiliana. Among the ferns are some nice maidenhair, pteris and cyrtomium, also polypodium argenteum, which is not generally grown; also a hardy fern with heart-shaped cut leaves, seldom seen here.

In the other wing of the conservatory we find Primulas, obconica and chinensis, both in good shape; carnations, genista, spirea, callas, Begonia semperflorens rosea, and a lot of young maidenhair ferns and seedlings. The conglomeration of the latter, however, hamper the arrangement very much. Mr. Lewis is always the same genial fellow-tradesman.

Mr. Charles Thiess, who has moved further up on Sixteenth street, into the store formerly occupied by the Colfax Avenue Floral Co., has an abundance of flowers in his window. Charlie is among the best of decorators and is very tasty in arranging floral pieces.

Calla lilies in the window of Glauber & Webb attract attention on account of their size. Mr. Mehler, the grower, takes the palm. One specimen with stem 1½ inches thick by 6 feet long and flower 6x9 inches, is a "daisy" and worth mentioning.

There is still some controversy in regard to the Bermuda lily disease and that it can be overcome, partly, by growing them in a certain way and with proper soil and care. There are many ways of growing lilies, but the writer has always preferred, in this climate, to start them inside instead of keeping them in frames, and the use of bone meal instead of manure as fertilizer. The cause of failure may often be traced to the ripening, curing, improper packing and handling by the middlemen, which the florists cannot well overcome. They are not improved by allowing them to get dry, either in transit or in the pots.

Colonel Colburn, who for more than ten years has been bookkeeper for the Curtis Park Floral Co., and was well known to all who had dealings with that firm, died recently. The interment was at Fairmount cemetery April 1, and was conducted by the G. A. R.

F. A. HAENSELMAN.

PHIL SCOTT.

BUFFALO.

My little screed is sure to begin or end with the weather. And this Tuesday morning it is the most weighty thing on a Buffalo florist's mind; about the freezing point, and the old woman is picking her geese, for the feathers or flakes are falling fast and thick. Horrors! Can it last? No, impossible! Always remember that the weather was not made for us; we are creatures of the weather, and no one is dishing us out a particularly bad sample; it's just Buffalo weather.

From the present outlook there will be two important articles in very short supply, viz., lilies and carnations. With carnations it is not unusual; simply the cut is gone. We are between crops. Lilies, although we have had a fair supply of sun, have had not a single warm day in two months to help them along, and disease has terribly thinned their ranks. In all other plants there will be a bountiful supply, except perhaps of Dutch hyacinths. George Fancourt has sent in to Kasting his usual contribution of hydrangeas, a fine lot, well grown and well colored.

The retailers on Main street are already making a fine show. W. A. Adams says: "If I can get them I will sell more lilies than I ever did," and you know he has the concentrated essence of ginger so permeating his whole system that what he says goes. S. A. Anderson has a splendid window and is buying all the attractive plants he can get.

Over on the East Side, the great Teutonic settlement, the popular lady florists are all laying in big stocks of plants. Miss Nussbaum, Miss Rose Rinehart and Miss Kloko can now sell hundreds of nice plants where ten years ago a hyacinth or geranium was the limit. Mr. Buddenborg, with his two stores to catch two nationalities, reports business good and expects to handle many medium-sized plants.

The feature of last week's and this week's business has been store openings. Many of the leading stores made elaborate displays of palms and flowering plants, one millinery store giving a rose or a few carnations to every caller, and so they used up in one day over a hundred dollars' worth of flowers. All good for business, even if they were purchased a little cheap; somebody got something for growing them.

I want to acknowledge the receipt yesterday morning (Monday) of a box of flowers from Mr. Valentine, of the Park Floral Co., Denver. Now, these flowers, which were Bridesmaid and Bride roses, Flora Hill carnations and mignonette, must have been in the express car forty-eight hours, and I believe laid twenty-four hours in our local express office, opened up in better condition than I have seen many flowers arrive after a hundred mile journey. They were simply perfect, fresh and handsome. This is, of course, the most favorable time for transporting flowers, but without that their beauty and condition speaks greatly for their growth and simple but perfect packing. As we have a deep interest in anything that is under the care of the Buffalo boys, Phil and Mike, in that distant silvery bright city, we were more than gratified about the excellent quality of the flowers. I will communicate privately, but will say that when I heard they were coming I expected to see "only a faded flower" that would have the appearance of being bowled at and shot at, for they seem to do a good deal of that after you leave Elmer Smith's virtuous state.

NEW GERANIUM CLYDE.

We have received from Mr. W. E. Hall, Clyde, O., a blooming plant and several trusses of bloom of this splendid new single scarlet geranium. The plant is evidently of unusual vigor of growth and the blooms are most certainly entitled to the title "Mammoth," for the individual flowers average over 2½ inches in diameter and the trusses are remarkably large and full.

The color is very pleasing and the variety will certainly prove a very desirable addition to our list of geraniums. Such plants as that sent us would surely sell quickly to the flower-buying public. Mr. Hall is to be congratulated on having produced so promising a new geranium.

MEXICO'S FLOWER SHOW.

For many years the Coyoacan Exhibition Association under the auspices of the Mexican Federal Government has held yearly and half yearly exhibitions of flowers, birds, poultry and ornamental fishes. The government now desires to make these expositions international in their character, so that the floriculturists of the United States can take part, and in order to facilitate this participation the government is disposed to defray the expenses of transportation of the American exhibits from the frontier to Coyoacan and back.

According to the program of the directors an invitation is tendered to all persons engaged in the cultivation of flowers, whether amateurs, floriculturists or dealers in flowers. The exposition will be opened on April 26 and closed May 6, 1900. There will be admitted to competition:

1. Ornamental plants and trees.
2. Collections of medicinal plants.
3. Cut flowers, bouquets and flower decorations.
4. Decorations of dry flowers and leaves.
5. Plans for garden and parks.
6. Green house installation plants.
7. Artificial grottos and cascades.
8. Physical meteorological instruments applied to floriculture.
9. Implements and instruments for general gardening.
10. Natural and artificial fertilizers.
11. Plans for zoological and botanical gardens.
12. Live birds, fishes and poultry of all kinds placed respectively in their cages or aquarium.

The application for space must be addressed to the secretary of the advisory committee, Espiritu Santo street 7, City of Mexico, and will be granted gratis. The premiums will be awarded by a jury appointed by the Department of State for promotion of the Mexican Government, and will consist of medals, diplomas and money for the floriculturist.

Coyoacan is a beautiful suburban town on the south side of the City of Mexico, with which it is connected by street car lines and a railroad; the transportation to and from is comfortable and rapid.

THE PARIS EXPOSITION.

We learn from Le Jardin that, notwithstanding the reports that have been current, the date of the opening of the Paris Exhibition has been fixed, and that the doors will be open on April 15. Our contemporary states that the work of completing the gardens is being pushed on with great activity, and their completion it is believed will be effected by the date of opening. The gardens in the Champs-Élysées are being rapidly planted with the trees and shrubs that will form part of the permanent horticultural exhibition. The French gardens on the Esplanades des Invalides are nearly completed, and the collections of roses contributed by the French nurserymen have been planted. Near the Trocadero the gardens are devoted chiefly to contributions from the French colonies.—Gardeners' Magazine.

SCRANTON, PA.—Hitchings & Co., of New York, were awarded the contract to build the new greenhouse at Hillside Home. Their bid was $3,975. The house will be built on an iron frame and will be a very substantial piece of work.

SHERMAN, TEX.—The Texas Nursery and Floral Co. has been incorporated with a capital stock of $10,000. The incorporators are E. U. Kirkpatrick, H. C. Robson and C. C. Mayhew.

DOYLESTOWN, PA.—The firm of Schmutz & Carver, florists, has dissolved partnership and George Carver has accepted a position with Florist John E. Andre.

A GOOD MOVE.

The residents of Oak Park, one of Chicago's suburbs, are organizing the "Oak Park Beautifying Association." Each unit of the general association will be, not an individual but a club of the residents in one block. The block organization will assume responsibility for the appearance of its block.

While the town is not to be painted in one color, members of the organization say the houses in each block will be painted with an idea to harmony and artistic effect. There will be some regulations about fences.

The man who has dandelions in his lawn will be brought to account promptly if he does not make proper effort to keep them from spreading upon his neighbor's lawn.

Individuality in the decoration of lawns and residences will not be discouraged but rather encouraged by the competition. The idea is to make the whole residence district more attractive.

This will, of course, result in a larger use of flowering plants, shrubs and trees, and thus enlarge the florists' opportunities. And anything tending in that direction should be encouraged by the trade.

In every community there are a few good citizens who are lovers of the beautiful and public spirited as well. A word of suggestion dropped in the ears of such by the florist would result in the formation of many such associations throughout the country and do much to beautify the residence streets as well as incidentally create a larger demand for the products of the greenhouse and nursery.

SALT LAKE CITY, UTAH.—Messrs. Grether & Barker, who are listed in the last trade directory, have been out of business for over a year, and A. Schulthess, who is also listed, has not been living at the address given for a long time. Catalogues addressed to them are wasted.

SAN FRANCISCO.

Various Items.

Business has been good this week and will be likely to continue so until Easter is past. Many orders for Easter decorations are on file, which will keep our florists hustling. Stevenson has the Emporium decoration and will be the largest done in San Francisco. The weather has cooled off a little and with April showers the Princess of Wales and California violets have peeped into market, but their time will be short.

Prices: American Beauties, $1.50 to $2; Brides and Maids, 25 to 75 cents; Siebrechts, 50 to 75 cents; Meteors, 35, 50, 75 cents; Perles, 25 to 35 cents per dozen; Cecil Brunners, 4 dozen for 25 cents. Carnations, Hobart $1, Crocker 50 cents, Schwerin 40 cents, Bradts 35 cents, Hill 25 to 35 cents, Scott 20 to 25 cents, Portia 10 to 20 cents. Harrisii, $2 to $2.50; tulips, 35 to 50 cents; Spanish iris, 35 cents; violets, Princess of Wales $1.25, California $1, Giants $1; smilax, $1 per dozen.

Mr. E. Gill has moved to Fourteenth and Clay streets, Oakland. The stand is not so good as the old one, but was the best that could be had at present.

Lacazette & Peterson have dissolved partnership after two months of business. Mr. Lacazette will carry on the business alone.

Shannahan, on Powell street, had all he could do in funeral work this week.

Mr. Nunemacher, our Thirteenth street florist, has just returned from a gunning party, and says he had a fine time. Mr. N. boasts that he can hit a bottle at forty yards without a miss. That's nothing; we have several members of the craft that can hit a bottle at closer range than that, but it happens the marksman goes to pieces, not the bottle.

THE QUEEN OF EDGELY.

At the last meeting of the Florists' Club of Philadelphia, some blooms of the new rose, Queen of Edgely, the pink sport from American Beauty, were exhibited, and a committee composed of Robert Kift, Wm. Munro and Joseph Heacock, made the following report:

"We are convinced that this variety is a valuable addition to the list of forcing roses, being in every respect except color the exact counterpart of the American Beauty. The color is a beautiful bright pink, which is good even in the full flowers. The fragrance is also as fine as Beauty, and the exhibited blooms showed remarkable vigor."

OCEANIC, N. J.

A very well attended meeting of the Monmouth County Horticultural Society was held in Redmen's Hall, Oceanic, N. J., President Hettel in the chair.

Fred Nielson was nominated and Mrs. V. A. Segler elected for membership.

Dr. W. S. Wittmore, De Witt Williams and N. Butterback were appointed to have the society incorporated at once.

The treasurer was instructed to take some stock in the State Mutual Building and Loan Association.

Dr. Wittmore delivered one of his great speeches, and here it can be said that this society is very fortunate to have as members such men as Dr. Wittmore, Rev. Dr. Kneipe, Professor Walling, De Witt Williams, and many others. There is never any lack of entertaining and instructive matters. The president read a paper on adiantum culture, which was very instructive and listened to with great interest.

Premium schedules for the grand horticultural exhibition of the S. A. F. convention were distributed to the members.

B.

WASHINGTON.

The boys all around are busy moving blooming plants around and trying to make ends meet. Lilies seem plentiful, and from all indications bulbous stock will be a glut. Several of our largest growers will almost entirely quit growing Dutch bulbs. Roses as well as blooming plants will be plentiful.

A. Gude & Bro. are cutting some extra fine Beauties, the finest ever grown in this section, the stems averaging from 4 to 6 feet.

The average quotations for Easter will be: Teas, 12½ to 15 cents; carnations, 3 to 4 cents; Beauties, 50 cents to $1; Easter and calla lilies, 12½ cents, cut or in pots; tulips, 2 to 3 cents; jonquils, single 50 cents per 100, doubles 3 cents; mignonette, 3 to 4 cents; smilax, 20 cents.

Prospects for a good Easter trade seem to be better than ever.

F. W. O. Schmitz, of Jersey City, N. J., was among the callers this week.

F. H. KRAMER.

WAUSAU, WIS.—M. Philipps reports that trade has been booming in his part of the country and that the prospects are good for a big Easter trade.

PLATTSMOUTH, NEB.—The wife of W. J. Hesser, the florist, died April 1, after a ten weeks' illness. Mr. Hesser has the sympathy of all in the loss of one who had been a loving companion for over forty-six years.

SILVER-SWEET VINE.

(Aotiniidia polygama.) TRUE.

A new, hardy climber of remarkable beauty from Japan.

The foliage on the ends of the flowering shoots is of a silvery white color, giving the whole vine from a little distance the appearance of being covered with large white flowers blooming among its bright green leaves. The effect is very marked and beautiful. The flowers, which appear in this latitude about the middle of June, lasting from two to three weeks, are creamy white in color with numerous stamens with bright yellow anthers, and resembles the lily of the valley in fragrance.

Offered in two sizes, $1.50 and $1.00. Send for circular.

Genevieve Lord The Peer of All Light Pink Carnations.

Speaking from a dollar and cent standpoint the above is literally true. There may be some larger, but when put to the test of an exacting commercial fire, none will stand the test and bring in the returns like Genevieve Lord. Its color is the kind that sells at sight. Stem the best of any carnation. A perfect, non-bursting calyx. Beautiful distinct form. In fact it has nearly everything that is wanted in a pink carnation. Customers recognize it at a glance, describing it as "that beautiful pink on the long stem."

Prompt delivery after April 10th. Stock all sold prior to that date.

PRICES: Doz., $2.00; 100, $10.00; 1000, $75.00

Catalogue free to all applicants, containing complete description of the above as well as all the big new ones, at introducers' prices; the best of last year's novelties and standard sorts, also a fine stock of new and standard sorts of chrysanthemums.
